Canadians Alert As Cyprus Marks Birth Of EOKA

Fear Terrorist Group May Stage Celebration

By DAVE McINTOSH

NICOSIA (CP) — Canadian soldiers of the United Nations force went on special alert Tuesday on the eve of EOKA Day. April 1 marks the ninth anniversary of the beginning by EOKA, the Greek-Cypriot underground organization, of the armed campaign against the British in Cyprus.

"I think if we get over Wednesday we are over the hump," said Lt.-Col. Andrew Woodcock, commander of the 1st Battalion, Royal 22nd Regiment, in his headquarters on the cease-fire line in suburban Trakhonas.

The Van Doos have not been involved in a single shooting incident since they went into the line in Nicosia and the Kyrenia area Good Friday and Saturday. A few stray shots from a neighboring area have come over their heads.

"We have not fired a shot and there has been no reason to," Woodcock said.

"But April 1 is not April Fool's Day here," he added.

ARE NIBBLING

He said the Greeks and Turks have been "nibbling" at us to see if we are alert—and we are."

This "nibbling" included the erection of new barricades, the sandbagging of more houses and the "movement of 'ar-ds to these positions." Canadian soldiers had had no difficulty in making the Cypriots take down the barricades and evacuate the houses.

Greeks and Turks are only a few yards apart—with the Canadians in between — on the cease-fire line and both sides are trying to edge closer to each others positions.

Woodcock said that before the United Nations took over, the "Turks had fired on his section of the line would have opened up at each other. But now both sides seemed to have better control over their irregulars and men would fire only if directly attacked.

Woodcock denied a report that the Canadians knew how the report had originated.

The Canadians are doing their

Soviet Policy Opposed

By HANS BENEDICT

BUDAPEST (AP) — Soviet Premier Khrushchev opened strategy talks Tuesday on what to do about Communist China and Peking quickly put on a clamorous sideshow of opposition to Soviet policy.

The Soviet leader had hardly arrived for talks with his Hungarian allies before a Chinese delegation at a Communist-sponsored Budapest lawyers' congress turned the meeting into bedlam with anti - Soviet tirades.

Mrs. Han Yu Tung, vice-president of the Chinese Supreme Court and leader of the Peking delegation to the Congress, accused the Soviet leadership of constantly "speaking for the imperialists."

Her outburst set of a clapping, stomping and shouting demonstration for the Soviet Union among the more than 500 delegates.

When the Soviet delegate, criminologist Lev N. Smirnow, finished a rebuttal to Mrs. Tung's charges, she shouted:

"The Soviet delegate speaks the language of the imperialists . . . a United States imperialist."

STARTS OUTBURST

This set off another wild outburst by all the delegates and the meeting had to be adjourned.

Khrushchev's Hungarian visit is expected to be largely devoted to laying the groundwork for a summit meeting of Communist leaders on the Chinese issue in Moscow next month.

Khrushchev and his Hungarian host, Premier Janos Kadar, touched indirectly on the dispute now both sides seemed to have in an exchange of greetings on the arrival of the Soviet delegation at Budapest's east railway station.

Stressing the theme of Communist unity — Moscow's main argument against the Chinese — Khrushchev said his talks "will help consolidate and strengthen socialism. We are convinced that

Holiday Out For Members

By ARCH MacKENZIE

OTTAWA (CP) — A week ago today the House of Commons was just 24 hours away from its traditional 10-day Easter recess. Only one possibly contentious item remained — supplementary estimates.

Today the Commons appeared dirty in with no holiday at all in sight as three New Democrats took over the original conservative decision to question in detail each item of the government's final spending package for the 1963-64 fiscal year that ended at midnight Tuesday.

Last Friday the Conservatives balked at the government's request for speedy passage of this $240,000,000 supplementary package prior to the Easter recess. They argued that this was a government gun aimed at their heads.

After a bitter debate an unprecedented Good Friday sitting of seven minutes resulted—because Conservative Terry Nugent (Edmonton - Strathcona) blocked any alternative.

The House had to come back Easter Monday and then again Tuesday to continue the estimates study, all of the debate centering on the first of the 144 items—a $62,000 bill for agricultural administration.

ARE SATISFIED

Tuesday afternoon Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said his group's immediate desires had been satisfied by replies on various subjects by Agriculture Minister Hays and Justice Minister Favreau. He then suggested that progress could be made, aimed at a quick recess until next Monday.

But a trio of New Democrats — aided by occasional Conservatives — intervened to confine Progress to 15 of the 144 separate spending items ranging from farming to trade marks.

Outside the Commons, Mr. Martin said Mr. Diefenbaker had started the delaying action but "after he has made his headline he wants to sneak away . . . the Conservatives have made their non-holiday bed and now they can lie in it."

In the Senate, where the Se-

Educationists Hear Preview Of Education of the Future

TORONTO (CP) — A preview of the education of the future is to be unveiled by a Harvard University psychologist at today's final sessions of the Ontario Education Association annual meeting.

Dr. Burrhus Frederic Skinner, referred to as the father of the teaching machine, will speak to the Canadian Council for Programmed Learning on the application of programmed instruction to educational systems.

Some 12,000 other delegates, including teachers, professors, trustees, home and school officials, administrators and government officials, will wind up their three-day sessions on other topics.

In an interview Tuesday, colleagues of Dr. Skinner described the development of programmed instruction as the most important development since the invention of movable type in the 15th century.

Programmed instruction is the use of carefully programmed machines or books to teach students through presentation of information in small, sequential steps.

In Tuesday's session of the home economic section of the OEA, Education Minister William Davis announced in a prepared speech that dual responsibility of the wage earner-homemaker will get official recognition in Grade 12 classes next September.

Mr. Davis' speech, read by W. R. Stewart, deputy education minister, dealt with the changing curriculum in home economics which reflects the changing structure of the family and economy.

He said the Grade 12 course will deal with efficient management of time and energy, reflecting the fact that an increasing number of women are assuming the dual responsibilities of homemaker and wage earner.

On another topic, the home economics section was told by Professor Ruth Dean of the Ontario College of Education that children should be trained at school on how to live at home. She described an effective

People Less Worried by H-Bombs Than They Once Were by Death

NEW YORK (AP) — Relax —we're not harassed by some special age of anxiety, two psychologist experts said today.

There may be less anxiety among people now than in the past, despite H-bombs, the population explosion, social pressures and world changes, said Dr. James G. Miller, professor of psychiatry and psychology at the University of Michigan.

The amount of total anxiety has been reduced by lessened fear of sudden death and malignant illness through medical research, by better control over "lawless terrors of the past," and by education which has reduced superstitions and fears, he said.

"The pervading sense of potentially malign supernatural powers has receded," Miller told a symposium commemorating the 10th anniversary of tranquillizer drugs.

Britain and the United States were found to have the lowest levels of anxiety among 10 nations he has studied, said Dr. Raymond B. Cattell, research professor of psychology at the University of Illinois.

The greatest anxiety was found in underdeveloped nations such as India, "where standards of living are lowest and where a country has cultural and political crevasses separating its peoples."

Newspaper editors and writers are the Americans living with the most anxiety, Cattell said. University administrators are the least anxious of all professional people, he added.

Cattell described anxiety as "a lack of confidence, a sense of guilt and worthlessness, an unwillingness to venture, a decrepitency, a readiness to become fatigued, irritable and discouraged, an uncertainty about oneself and a suspicion of others, and a general tenseness."

Brazilian Troops Fan Out To Smash Spreading Revolt

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Embattled President Joao Goulart's government said it had dispatched troops to rebel strongpoints north and southwest of Rio de Janeiro today in an effort to smash a spreading revolt against his left-leaning regime.

As Goulart sought to rally forces loyal to him, Gen. Humberto Castello Branco, chief of the army general staff, and two other high commanders declared they had swung to the rebel cause.

Justice Minister Abelardo Jurema announced that units of the still-loyal 3rd Army had been sent from Rio Grande do Sul to attack the rebellious 2nd Army's base in the industrial centre of Sao Paulo, 220 miles southwest of Rio.

Goulart also ordered troops to move against Juiz de Fora, in Minas Gerais state 80 miles north of Rio where the revolt erupted Tuesday, and against Belo Horizonte, the capital of Minas Gerais. A rebel radio proclaimed Juiz de Fora the "revolutionary capital."

Rebel broadcasts said the vanguard of the 2nd Army commanded by Gen. Amaury Kruel and a force of 30,000 led by Gen. Olimpio Mourao, commander of the fourth military region of Belo Horizonte, were converging on Rio de Janeiro to try to depose Goulart.

A proclamation announcing their switch to the rebel cause was signed by the chief of staff and Gens. Arthur da Costa E. Silva and Decio Palmeiro Escobar.

It charged that Goulart had "placed himself in open illegality through successive attempts against the just practice of the democratic regime."

Downtown Rio was virtually deserted this morning as a general strike called by the Communist-dominated General Command of Workers in support of Goulart, paralyzed transport.

Government trains operating out of Rio were stopped and intercity buses were halted.

Governor Adhemar de Barros of Sao Paulo, longtime opponent of Goulart, broadcast claims that six states had joined in the

Robarts Gives Broad Hint May Copy Quebec Policy; Our Plan Stands -- Pearson

Pearson Offers Big Tax Slice To Provinces for Welfare Programs

By DON HANRIGHT

QUEBEC (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson indicated Tuesday his government is prepared to let the provinces have roughly 40 per cent of the personal income tax pot — more than twice their present share.

The offer was good for provinces wanting to take over the whole bailiwick of certain programs now aided by the federal treasury: hospital insurance, and welfare payments to the needy aged, unemployed, blind and disabled.

In effect, it would mean higher expenditures for the provinces, matched — or nearly so — by larger revenues.

The federal government's sweeping proposal was sketched at the opening of the federal-provincial conference, called to consider the wide range of overlapping operations carried on by the two levels of government under shared-cost plans.

The operations are almost entirely in fields that belong to the provinces under the British North America Act.

Today, the conference turns to two more matters bristling with the "provincial rights" issue — the Canada Pension Plan, and the federal proposal to make loans to university students.

MARCH PLANNED

Dozens of Quebec police men—federal, provincial and local—were shadowing the 120 conference delegates, both in the legislature building and at the Chateau Frontenac about six blocks away, where most of them are registered.

As provincial delegates filed into the conference room Tuesday, they had a mixed reaction to Mr. Pearson's plan, preferring to keep their powers of these jointly - financed schemes. The federal proposal wouldn't be a problem now.

Meanwhile, Premier Lesage of Quebec wants to go even farther in getting complete provin-

BULLETIN

QUEBEC (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson said today the positions of Ontario and Quebec don't alter the federal government's intention to go ahead with the Canada Pension Plan "as it has been drafted."

* * * * * *

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Robarts hinted broadly today that Ontario might institute a retirement pension plan in the province if the proposed federal pension plan is not "truly national" covering "all of Canada."

His statement to the federal - provincial conference was an obvious reference to the Quebec government's stated intention to have its own pension system in place of the federal program.

Observers saw in Premier Robarts' statement the possibility that the federal government's Canada Pension Plan might not apply in the two big central provinces.

EVERYBODY WANTS IT

"This is something that everybody wants and I can't believe Ontario will kick it on the head," Mr. Gordon said.

Though federal - government officials have claimed the federal pension plan is technically possible without operating in Ontario and Quebec, which have more than half Canada's population, Ottawa has been anxious to have Ontario in it.

Mr. Gordon said he doesn't think more than one province—Quebec—will "contract out" of the federal plan.

Asked what would happen if Ontario installed its own pension scheme and thus was exempt from the federal plan, the finance minister replied: "That's an iffy question and we will cross that bridge when we come to it."

Another federal spokesman said the central government doesn't regard the Ontario premier's statement as meaning a rejection of the Canada Pension Plan.

"He hasn't contracted out and we are carrying on," the spokesman said.

QUEBEC HAS OWN PLAN

Meanwhile, Premier Lesage told reporters in Quebec City he tends going ahead with its own plan.

"Our position has not changed. There is no question of modifying our views on the adoption of such a plan."

"The rules (of the conference) are that we must not state the attitudes of the other provinces," Mr. Lesage said.

The comments were made as conference delegates took a morning coffee break after completing their first discussion on the Canada Pension Plan.

In his conference statement issued to the press, Premier Robarts said his government intends to make sure the people of Ont. will have "the best possible pension protection" regardless of results from federal or provincial talks.

But he said there is some doubt whether the federal plan will be truly national covering all Canadians.

Belgian Doctors On Strike

By SERGE NABOKOFF

BRUSSELS (Reuters)—Some 12,000 Belgian doctors went on strike today against government health service plans and quickly touched off protest demonstrations by workers.

The strike began at 8 a.m. after the collapse of talks between government officials and labor union leaders Tuesday.

Two thousand metalworkers in Charleroi, near Brussels, staged a rally in the centre of town in protest over the strike and caused a gigantic traffic jam. They whistled and shouted in front of the offices of the medical association.

Most striking doctors left operation skeleton emergency service to handle the most serious medical cases, and warned in a communique the emergency service would halt immediately if there were any "maltreatment" of doctors, their families, or their property.

A labor union leader called for demonstrations outside doctor's homes this afternoon.

Prime Minister Theo Lefevre called the strike "deplorable." He said the doctors were "practically a monopoly" and would be conscripted — placing them under government orders — if

Trade Dept. Denies Supervising Consumers' Tests of Containers

TORONTO (CP) — Officials of the Canadian Association of Consumers said the federal commerce department issued differing statements Tuesday about tests made by the CAC of waxed liquid containers.

Mrs. P. G. Carrier, president of the Humber branch, CAC, said the tests were carried out under the supervision of the department provided a calibrated bottle and sent a man to overseas testing in which 13 of 21 40-ounce containers sampled were short-filled.

R. W. MacLean, director of standards for the department, said in a telephone interview from Ottawa that the department supplied a marked 40-ounce container but nothing else.

"The ladies went on from there," he said.

The CAC report was made public Tuesday and covered nine surveys conducted two weeks apart in Toronto stores of containers labelled to contain 40 ounces.

The argument over wax containers reached the floor of the Commons Tuesday when Industries Minister Drury assured Harry Mather (NDP, New Westminster) that the trade department would be glad to co-operate in measuring milk products and juices in various cities.

Dr. D. B. Marsh, assistant deputy minister of the health branch of the Food and Drug directorate, which normally measures liquid food samples, said: "We've found the industry most anxious to correct a policy that's all wrong."

He said there had not been any prosecutions for short measure to his knowledge. Inspectors check samples at random.

Variations in measure can be caused by a faulty filling machine, or by evaporation or changes due to temperature. Mrs. Carrier said that their machines to give slightly over measure, and check their measure daily, said John Lawrence, spokesman for the Ontario Milk Industry Association.

He said distributors now are anxious to have tests made independently of government supervision, and added: "We're very concerned about this."

Robert S. Wilson, Canadian representative for the Pure Pak division of Ex-Cell-O Corporation, said Tuesday in a telephone interview from London, Ont., that occasionally an automatic filling machine can lose its accuracy because of an operator's carelessness.

City Manager Announces Tax Budget Ready to Be Presented Early Next Week

City council may usher the annual marathon tax manoeuvre next week.

Yesterday municipal fathers were informed by city manager J. R. Reynolds he may present them with departmental estimates at that time.

The last of these—police department estimates—has been received, he said.

"The budget is now, as far as I'm concerned, completed," Mr. Reynolds told council. "I hope I will be in a position to present it to council possibly the first of next week."

The city manager's presentation will signal the toughest chore of the municipal year—that of striking a tax rate satisfactory to all members of council. After that will come the minute scrutinies of all estimates in the bulky portfolio, requests for reappraisals and finally, the inevitable, agonizing decision of the 1964 mill rate.

Mr. Reynolds made his announcement during the general business session which concluded last night's session—probably the briefest of the year to date.

In fact, without the question-answer period at its tail end, the meeting would have been the most desultory since council took office.

NO ISSUES DEBATED

The only controversy smelling of gunsmoke-debate on possible purchase by the city of the Houston property in the city's bustling border—died before the trigger was pulled.

Two weeks ago Alderman Jess—leading booster for purchase of the site—gave notice he would move a motion to air the entire issue yesterday. His motion noted "many members of the Belleville Council would like to express an opinion on this offer".

In the interim the land was sold—right from under the noses of private enterprise, and the council—who was about—either let it by mail.

Yet, the issue, apparently, still has left lingering rawness with some aldermen.

Two of them took advantage of the leeway allowed during the general business discussion to refer indirectly to it.

Alderman Jack Allin charged two letters concerning the property were received at city hall but never read before the council.

"It was just like foreclosure," he asserted.

"I would suggest again," answered Mayor Jack Ellis, "these letter did not get in in time to get on the agenda. I think the thing was thoroughly dealt with."

Then, retorted Alderman Allin a letter received yesterday afternoon was presented at yesterday's council meeting.

"There is something wrong somewhere," he added.

"I think the answer to that is very plain," interrupted Alderman William Jarvis, referring to the two letters mentioned earlier by Alderman Allin. "The majority of council did not want them read. We ruled them out.

City clerk Adam Stalker pointed out the correspondence received yesterday afternoon could be immediately placed on the agenda since it was addressed to mayor and council.

The letters referred to by Alderman Allin were addressed to the city manager. The correspondence was received too late to be placed on council's agenda.

Reassessment of the Houston property sale — to the Stephens-Adamson company — was credited by one alderman as a form of Donald J. Whalen and one of its salesmen, John Desmond. Each is city councillor and in a previous debate Alderman Whalen had declared his financial interest so as to abstain from voting on the issue.

However, immediately before council adjourned yesterday Alderman Don Hewitt rose to compliment a "certain firm" on its business transaction.

"That is not in order," Mayor Ellis reminded him.

"I merely just like to make a comment," retorted the councillor.

INCREASES APPROVED

City council yesterday approved salary increases for its employees as laid down in the city's graded salary schedule.

It also approved granting as increase of $344 to the municipality's top civil servant—city manager J. R. Reynolds—rounding out his salary at $11,000.

Assessment Commissioner Leighton Thompson steps up to the top grade.

The city's deputy fire chief will receive $6,300, while a $200 senior engineer position was granted to "senior upgraded positions."

Costing $15,620 For One Year To Remove Trees

Money is the root of all tree trimming — if the job's to be done expertly.

Tenders for work on Belleville's trees this summer — the last major phase of a five-year plan — revealed these estimates to city council yesterday:

The cost drew comment from Alderman Frank Murray who pondered how much other municipalities of comparable size were spending on similar programs.

To ascertain that definitely, countered Alderman Ben Corke, a survey would be necessary not only of populations, but trees —as well as their ages.

Subject to future budgetary allotments, council agreed to accept the Davey bid.

Cost to the city would be $10,054, with the city's utilities commission paying $3,300 and Bell Telephone $1,800.

"Why it is," added Alderman David, "that the City of Belleville always gets stuck with the large end share ... How do they arrive at that figure?"

United Appeal Meet Asks Change to Permit Donors To Allocate Their Gifts

Belleville United Appeal supporters next year may be able to effectively designate in advance to which their gifts will go. In theory this has always been possible. In practice allocations were subtracted from an agency's share of the general fund. The result was that allocations meant nothing unless the total of such allocations exceeded the agency's allotted share of the total objective — and this never occurred. Under a revised method of allocation, proposed and approved last night at a stormy emergency meeting of the United Appeal, held at the Kiwanis Centre, allocations will not in future be considered when dividing up the general fund. They will thus, for the first time, mean something.

The emergency meeting was called because the Appeal's annual campaign, Feb. 8, had only produced a president, secretary or campaign manager for 1964, the meeting was told, and there is hope of filling the positions — with the possible alternative of a paid director — at the April 15 meeting.

The emergency meeting was called because the Appeal's annual campaign, Feb. 8, had only produced a president, secretary or campaign manager for 1964, the meeting was told, and there is hope of filling the positions — with the possible alternative of a paid director — at the April 15 meeting.

Dr. Sydney Rose moved that supporters be given the alternative of designating their gifts, and the motion passed in the 58-member meeting by a vote of 29 to 25 after considerable debate. The vote was preceded by stormy discussion and predictions that adoption of the United Appeal would mean the end of the United Appeal.

JURY RECOMMENDATION

The motion — so far only a recommendation to the board of directors — would allow a supporter to specify that contributions are to share in a single gift. Most gifts, the Appeal feels, will be designated for allocation to the general fund. Individual agencies would be granted all the money allocated them, then would collect their share from the general fund, the total being less than their budget requirements.

A second motion proposed by D. G. Burr would have allowed individual agencies to collect all allocated funds plus a full share of the general fund, even if the total were more than the agencies budget requirements. This motion was turned down by the membership.

Allocations of funds was possible in last year's United Appeal but the arrangement last year included a provision that allocations would first have to be subtracted from the agencies' share of the general fund. The result was that last year, allocation made no difference to the amount received by each agency. It was hoped this would be opposed for this year, it means that the more popular agencies will receive more than their requirements while other agencies go short. During a discussion, Mayor Ellis and Chairman Bill Killough suggested that this might provide an accurate measure of each agency's popularity — a measure that would prove useful if some agencies are to be assisted by the Appeal in later years.

NAME OFFICERS

Officers nominated during the meeting were: Thomas Fell, a C.N.R. employee, as campaign chairman for the coming year and Archie Hicks as secretary. The nominations were approved at a board meeting, after the general meeting. Representatives of the Y.M.C.A approved in principle a proposal that the agency receive the largest share of the United Appeal collections should provide a president for the Appeal. The Y. M. C. A., as the agency receiving the largest share, will consider this at the next directors' meeting. Acting president until an appointment is made is past president E. G. Gurnett. Chairman of last night's meeting was J. G. Demeza.

Soviet

our exchange of views will be most interesting and useful."

Kadar called the visit "a further contribution to the progress and unity of the Communist movement."

The meeting takes place against a background of mounting Red Chinese attacks on Moscow and intensive propaganda aimed at deepening the split between Peking and Moscow factions in parties outside the East European Communist orbit.

DENOUNCE K

The last barrage of invective, fired by Peking as Khrushchev's train was moving across the Russian plains toward Hungary Monday, denounced him as the greatest capitulationist of his century and urged international Communist parties to "repudiate and liquidate Khrushchev's revisionism."

In Hungary the Soviet leader is among friends. Janos Kadar Kiegime's policy of liberalization, which brought a considerable lift in living standards, and relaxation in sharp contrast to the Chinese thesis of Communist revolution abroad, has won him and Hungarians remember that Peking urged Moscow to smash the revolution in 1956.

At this stage of the Moscow-Peking dispute, little is expected by the general public. Belleville sources, however, have reported that Moscow and three of its principal East European supporters—the Hungarian, Polish and Bulgarian parties are ready for a showdown with the Chinese unless Peking shows a willingness to settle the feud peacefully.

The contrary seems to be the driving force in Peking at the moment. Moscow's latest peace efforts, undertaken by a Romanian mission in Peking, were judged a complete fiasco. The Chinese not only refused to abandon their attacks but even demanded that Moscow exercise "self - criticism"—the other words attacks on Peking, informants reported.

TIMING UNCERTAIN

Just when the climax will come could depend on the strategy the Moscow camp leaders adopt in their forthcoming consultations. A major meeting is expected for next month when Khrushchev marks his 70th birthday. Top party officials from all the world will be invited.

The Hungarian and other Moscow-aligned parties have a 31-point anti-attack published by Peking Monday out of their hands already. The Hungarian ambassador here observed protocol and was among the diplomats to greet Khrushchev and his wife, Nina.

Khrushchev's program and thoughts on the trip to Hungary were not officially disclosed. A government spokesman said Khrushchev and his guests will be allowed to attend only "the important highlights" of the visit.

Sources said the Soviet leader will inspect an electrical equipment plant in Budapest today, where he may speak to the workers. The rest of the day will be spent in political talks in Budapest.

Dianne Shorey Heads Belleville Calf Club

Luggage Racks Put at Rear of CNR Coaches

At one time, women travelling in railway coaches had cause for complaint — unless they happened to be six feet tall. The overhead luggage rack was too high to reach unaided and there wasn't always a porter handy to lend a hand. However, the plight of the "little woman" has now been greatly improved, at least on Canadian National, says Ken Fleming, passenger sales manager, Rideau Area, Belleville.

Recently, he said the Railway renovated the coaches of their nine crack Super Continental trains. One of the most practical changes they made, Mr. Fleming said, was to install a roomy luggage rack at the end of each car. Composed of three deep shelves, the lowest about ten inches from the ground and the highest at eye level, the rack is particularly convenient for storing suitcases, without undue lifting. Also, it is designed to prevent articles from falling down the aisle with a suitcase in either hand, says Mr. Fleming.

Ald. Whalen Opposed to One-Way Traffic

Alderman Don Whalen thinks so.

"I think the time has now come for reverting back to the two-way system," he told fellow city councillors yesterday.

Pinnacle and Front Streets were converted to one-way traffic several years ago.

"It's my opinion now that experiment has been tried and finally," Alderman Whalen said, suggesting Mayor Ellis make "informal" representations on the matter to the city traffic committee.

However, the mayor noted the city's master traffic plan — prepared by experts some time ago — already has considered one-way traffic. Any possible flow "revisions" have materialized.

Dealing with other traffic problems council approved abolishing of another experiment with the right-hand turn route used by industrial workers.

This was coming down Albion Street—and there was a woman right in the sandbags with her car," the alderman recalled. "I think it's a hazard the way it is."

Back again to Pinnacle Street and the city fathers agreed to pay an additional $600 involved in removal of the railroad tracks running down the thoroughfare.

The electronic age is to blame.

Alderman Joe Raycroft said the sum was the city's share for installation of a $3,500 switching device on the CNR-CPR link east of Belleville which will replace the down-town city route.

In its original estimates the CNR had allowed only for a standard switch. However, the CPR safety system is run by remote control from Toronto.

Welfare Council May Be Formed

City Council may have a hand in the Belleville United Appeal next year, should a city-supported "welfare council". Mayor Jack Ellis suggested the possibility last night in an emergency meeting of Appeal supporters in the Kiwanis Centre. Speaking to the meeting from a meeting of city council, (and missing, he told the meeting, "I'm glad I'm not a city councillor because of the two meetings), Mayor Ellis told the Appeal meeting that council last night approved in principal the formation of a welfare council. Such a council might include representatives of all welfare organizations operating in the city, and might have the power to limit appeals for funds by members of the council or by other organizations. The welfare council could be formed, he said, by mid-year.

IN MEMORIAM

MCCAMMON — In loving memory of our husband and father, Ernest McCammon, who passed away April 1st, 1957.

What would we give her hand to hold,
What would we give her hand to hold,
Her patient face to see;
To hear her voice, to touch her hand,
As in the days that used to be;
But one day we'll meet again,
Beyond the toil and strife
And clasp each other's hand again
In Heaven, that happy life.
And always remembered by daughter Louise.

GIOVANNINI — In loving memory of a dear grandmother, Lucient Giovannini, who passed away April 1, 1963.

Peacefully sleeping, resting at last.
The world's weary troubles and battles are past.
Sleep on dear grandma,
In silence she suffered, in patience she bore.
Some day we hope to meet him,
But not any more.
To clasp his hand in the better land,
Never to part again.
Sadly missed and mourned by wife Mary and children.

Some day we hope to meet him,
But not any more.

ESCORT SERVICE

For instance, they escort two Greeks to work in a cold storage plant on the Yorkish side of the line where food hap been threatening to spoil.

"It's difficult," Wood e c k said. "The Turks thought the Greeks were carrying bombs and we had to show them that they were not."

"A good deal of the trouble here is that a lot of people are idle," he said. "They sit all day on a case of ammunition waiting a weapon and at night they want to fire it."

Capt. Louis Fournier of Quebec City, the adjutant, said one of the biggest problems in the battalion is an "unsynchronized" rooster which crows from 1 a.m. to 11 p.m.

MAY SHOOT ROOSTER

"If we ever shoot it may be at that rooster," he said.

Off-duty Canadians permitted downtown to see the fights travel in pairs and carry no weapons. But on EOKA day all Canadians will be confined to their crease-line positions.

Departure of the Canadian warships Bonaventure and Restigouche from Famagusta was put off until Wednesday to allow the crews a few hours shore leave. The sailors were taken ashore in two crowded barges, five hundred men to each.

L. Roscoe Robson, Sheriff Of Hastings County, Former PC Member, Dies Suddenly

Sheriff of Hastings County and a member of the Ontario Legislature for 15 years, L. Roscoe Robson, 68, was fatally stricken with heart attack early today.

He was reported for his first business in both elected and appointed public office, Mr. Robson fell victim to the sudden attack at his home, at R.R. 1 Holloway on the ninth concession of Rawdon Township and died in Belleville General Hospital.

L. ROSCOE ROBSON

His death—that of a man who was an integral part of local public life through years of service — brought an immediate reaction of shock throughout the county.

His credentials of public service were part of a record which the family shared. Two of Sheriff Robson's brothers — Peter and John — died in World War I.

Born in Huntingdon township, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Robson, he first entered public life in a local community fashion when elected to township council in 1931. He served as councillor and reeve through to 1944.

In 1943, he was successfully running for the Progressive-Conservative Party as its candidate in East Hastings, in the provincial election being contested to select him as its MLA in Queen's Park.

He held that office in 1958 and was appointed county sheriff, dispensing the exacting duties of court and office demands with unflagging attention.

Throughout the public career of Sheriff Robson's brother, Belleville Lt. J. C. Anderson, whose office and judicial functions were part of Sheriff Robson's responsibility, is reached when informed of the news:

FINE PUBLIC SERVANT

"Roscoe Robson was a conscientious public servant with a strong sense of devotion to his work. He never shirked from being difficult decisions or put off until tomorrow what called for being done today — even though at times his health may have suffered therefrom.

"His high standard of public service," noted the judge, "will long be an inspiration to countless people in this county whom he so long and so faithfully served.

"We in the courthouse who have been privileged to know and work with him will miss him greatly."

Among those to whom the news brought deep shock and a reaction of intimate personal loss was the man who sat with Mr. Robson for many years in the Ontario Legislature—Elmer Sandercock, MLA West Hastings.

"We were very close, Roscoe and I," said Mr. Sandercock, "and together represented the whole county in the Legislature. It was a deep personal shock to me — yet a shock shared by many in our county."

It was Mr. Sandercock who sponsored Mr. Robson's appointment as sheriff when the latter retired from public office.

ACTIVE IN COMMUNITY

Besides his public record, the sheriff maintained active social roles in his own community. A member of Holloway United Church he was, for the past 40 years, an elder and steward. His affiliations included the Rotary Club, the Holloway Lodge of the Foxboro Royal Black Preceptory 302.

Mr. Robson is survived by his wife, Eva Mae Hodgen, two sons John Everett and Roger Lewis, both of Holloway; three daughters, Mrs. Donald (Audrey) Northrup, R.R. 2 Belleville; Douglas (Shirley) Fyear, Stirling, and Mrs. Jack (Barbara) Northrup, R.R. 2 Belleville; one brother, Milton Robson, Belleville, and two sisters, Mrs. Stanley (Mabel) Hayton, Foxboro; Mrs. Laura Chambers of Port Credit.

His survivors also include 20 grandchildren.

Funeral services for the late sheriff Robson will be held on Friday, afternoon at the John F. Bush Funeral Home in Belleville. Interment will be at Zion Hill.

Magistrate Sends Youth To Reformatory

A 16-year-old Belleville youth — originally ordered to a Salvation Army training school on conviction of illegal possession of valuable stamps yesterday was sent to the reformatory.

James Alfred Meens, April 16 was placed on two years probation by Magistrate R. B. Ramsden on condition he attend Concord House school in Toronto.

The sentence followed conviction on a charge involving disappearance of a stamp album from the collection of the late Earl Greenleaf in Belleville.

Last week, Meens appeared again before the magistrate when probation officers said he had run away from Concord. Although he later returned he was charged with the incident as a breach of his recognizance and probation officials told Magistrate Ramsden a second conviction refused to take the youth back.

Yesterday, the magistrate, after pondering a solution for a week, sent Meens to the Ontario reformatory for a six months definite and nine months indeterminate.

Second Night Mixed Spiel Held at Club

There were some surprises and some high scores as the second night of the mixed spiel was held at the Quinte Curling Club. There are four events on each draw and some of these will be eliminated in tonight's draw.

In the last draw of the evening, Cec Kirkwood's rink skipped by Ross Smith defeated Gil Wamboldt on the last end, Dave Duffy was ahead of Hal Emerson, Harold Mott beat Charlie Lovett and Court Miller won his second game with a win over Ernie Shorey.

Two draws will be played this evening and on the seven o'clock draw Ross Smith meets Ben Corke, Charlie Cox plays Ralph Graham, Stan Reston takes on Bob Smith and Lloyd Sheppard and Bill Meagher tangle. In the late draw, Bob Alexander and Dave Brown are contestants, Dave Duffy takes on Harold Mott, Cec Kirkwood and Court Miller, tangle, and Ernie Wilkinson and Dr. McCorquodale are the contestants. There should be some interesting games in these two draws.

The doctors claim the government plan would curtail their freedom, abolish professional standards and impede standards of medical treatment.

It provides for a fixed scale of fees for all medical treatment and the granting of free medical treatment to certain categories of patients.

Negotiators said the main stumbling block was what fees should be paid to the doctors and how many afternoons a week would be left free for private practice.

During the Easter weekend, doctors from many parts of the country staged an unofficial warning strike when they refused to attend emergency calls and went on vacation in other countries.

Before doing so, however, the doctors organized emergency services to deal with exceptionally urgent cases.

Many of the doctors said at the time they planned to remain outside the country until the end of the negotiations with the government.

28 Members of Utilities Staff Serve Strike Notice

TRENTON — Twenty-eight employees of the Trenton Public Utilities have served notices on Utilities manager, James Page, that as of 10 a.m., April 7, they will go on strike.

The 28 employees, which include hydro workmen, waterworks men and Utility office staff, are all members of Local 2066 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. One additional man, hired recently and not yet a member of the union will be affected by the walkout if it comes.

The strike has been called as a result of a breakdown in negotiations between a negotiating committee, appointed by the Trenton Public Utilities Commission and a negotiating committee from Local 2066 of the union. Negotiations for a renewal of contract have been going on since Sept. 4, 1963. The union local was formed in 1947 and a two-year contract with the commission expired on Aug. 31, 1963.

Areas in dispute are wages increases, vacation with pay and the effective date for wage increases. The commission has offered a wage increase from eight cents to 11 cents along the line of a two-year contract.

The commission has suggested a progression of advancement that will make jobs automatic to the highest paid jobs and that the effective date of the contract should be retroactive to Aug. 31, 1963.

Recently, a three-man conciliation board backed up the commission in most of its proposals, ... the union ... accepted, ... effect, refuses ... accept these recommendation.

The strike would affect all Utilities employees except the foremen and the supervisory staff at the Utilities office. Utilities manager, James Page stated yesterday that while all major jobs would be curtailed in the event of a strike, normal hydro and water services to Trenton users could be maintained by the foremen and supervisory staff, working 12-hour shifts. Installation of essential services will be handled by outside contractors and under the "act of God" situation occur, the commission could also call in outside help.

Mr. Page said that the negotiating committee, set up by the commission, stood ready to meet with the union committee at any time to settle the issues involved and to try to reach an agreement, acceptable to both parties before the strike deadline.

Two Sentenced To Jail Terms On Two Counts

TRENTON — Two Trenton area men were sentenced in magistrate's court at Trenton yesterday to two months in jail, following a conviction last week in charges of the theft and illegal possession of goods valued at $1,200 from Mark Tripp Wholesale Ltd. The thefts occurred over a nine months' period.

Freeman Hart, 22, of R. R. 3, Carrying Place, pleaded guilty to the theft of the goods, which included such items as electrical appliances and cigarettes. Hart had been employed as a driver for Tripps for five years.

Lorne Bassett, 21, 167 Shuter Street, Trenton, pleaded guilty to possession of stolen goods. The court was told that Bassett sold the goods to "regular customers," and was paid off in goods himself.

In passing sentence yesterday, Magistrate T. V. Wills said there was no basis of discrimination in the sentence, as both men were fully aware of the goods, and fully aware of what they were doing. The magistrate said that he had no doubt that both men had paid restitution of $800 to Tripps. In sentencing Hart, the magistrate said he had committed a serious offence in using his position of trust with his employer to steal from him.

The men will be required to sign a bond to remain on good behaviour and to keep the peace before they leave the county jail.

Fine Did Not Meet Approval Of Magistrate

TRENTON — A $2 fine for a man who parked his car facing a sidewalk in Trenton last month, didn't meet with the approval of Magistrate T. V. Wills in Trenton court yesterday. The fine should have been $5, he said, because of the inconvenience caused the public. However, since the offender had been notified by mail that the fine would be $2, it stood.

FIRST GRASS FIRE

And a sure sign of spring. The Trenton fire department was called out yesterday to its first grass fire of the year, on Stella Crescent, was considered minor.

MAGISTRATE AMUSED

In Trenton court yesterday, Magistrate T. V. Wills was amused to hear that one of the other three men, charged with being unlawfully intoxicated in a public place, informed him that of the exact number of days required to complete a ten days' sentence, taking into consideration the number of days served from the time they were picked up and charged with the offence.

"You men seem to have got together on this," remarked the magistrate.

CALL TENDERS

Robert Temple, MP for Hastings South, announced today that tenders for a new federal building in Trenton would be called this week. Estimated cost of construction is $400,000.

The building will house a post office, customs offices, the employment offices and other government agencies and will be located on Front Street, almost across from the municipal parking lot.

Electors Vote 'Wet' on Four Questions

TRENTON — Unofficial figures on the liquor plebiscite held in recently - annexed areas of Murray and Sidney Townships yesterday are: (1) for women's beverage rooms, 174 yes, 96 no; (2) for men's beverage rooms, 155 yes, 94 no; ning lounges, 212 yes, 33 no; cocktail lounges, 205 yes, 40 no.

Three RCAF CO's Observe Anniversary

RCAF TRENTON — Officers commanding three established bases today issued statements marking the 40th anniversary of the formation of the RCAF.

In an open letter to residents in the Bay of Quinte area, Air Commodore R. J. Lane, of Air Transport Command, said that since 1931 the RCAF has grown, the air station has grown and the Trenton-Belleville area has grown.

"This growing together has established a warm friendship and rapport which, I am sure, will continue to grow," the air commodore stated.

Group Captain E. M. Butcher, CO of RCAF Station Trenton, in his letter, had this to say: "Trentonians and Bellevillians have watched the RCAF grow in their immediate area since RCAF Station Trenton was opened in 1931. Local residents have been of continuing assistance to the ever-changing RCAF personnel. Their friendship and co-operation have left service personnel with happy memories of the area."

A third letter, also addressed to the Quinte residents, was received from Group Captain C. R. Thompson, CO of 6-B.D., conveying his appreciation to the residents of Belleville and Trenton for their co-operation.

Group Captain Thompson said: "Those of us who are visitors to this area, many of us having been stationed in RCAF stations throughout Canada and in Europe, appreciate the beauty of your lakes and trees, the tremendous resort potential of your waterways, and the attractions of your varied farms.

"But most of all," he stated, "we have appreciated the personal interest and support of your people."

comparable to the federal plan.

Laurence Coward, chairman of the Ontario Pension Commission, told reporters Ontario could convert the federal pension scheme from taking effect in January simply by passing legislation stating that no Ontario resident would be allowed to subscribe to a federal pension plan.

Mr. Coward said the other alternative would be to challenge the constitutionality of the federal plan in the courts.

It was reported that most of the other eight provincial delegation leaders told the conference they accept the federal pension plan, though a few had some reservations.

Premiers Shaw of Prince Edward Island and Stanfield of Nova Scotia were said to have complained that the federal plan won't cover the large proportion of their provinces' people who are self-employed.

Informants said Prime Minister Pearson disclosed he hopes the federal plan could be improved as it went along to meet that situation.

Premiers Bennett of British Columbia and Manning of Alberta were also said to have said the federal plan is generally satisfactory to them.

Premier Smallwood of Newfoundland said he made a five-word speech—"I said 'ditto' five times"—to the position taken by five other provinces, but not Ontario and Quebec.

The Divine Itch

Those with small minds, it has been said, talk about people; those with average minds talk about things; those with great minds about ideas.

Maybe so, maybe so; but only if we interpret "talk about people" to mean gossip.

Otherwise this analysis indefensibly downgrades people. There is a contrary, if letter, saying—the proper study of man is man.

All this is a rather fancy way of defending the contention that we are addicted to the perusal of "advice" columns, particularly to the two provided by this newspaper, by Ann Landers and Doris Clark, who talk about people.

Ann Landers is generally quite shrewd. The other day, though, she seemed to us to be either strangely obtuse or blessed with a sixth sense which would bring her a fortune in the private-eye trade.

A woman complained that she had a fine man for a husband, healthy, well-behaved children, an adequate income, help around the house and fine "inlaws," yet was restless.

"I keep thinking—there must be more to life than this."

Miss Landers said there was — and the "more" could be intolerable guilt, a shattered marriage and a lifetime of regret.

It was obvious what she thought the letter-writer had in mind—but there was nothing in the letter to lead to that conclusion.

A lot of people—most of us, we would guess—have at some time or another wondered whether there was not more to life than our every-day rounds. Some have sought the more in questionable "adventures." But this same restlessness has also started many along the road to great achievements.

There are two things and two things only, which will satisfy this feeling, this "spring fever" of the mind. These are an illusion or a goal.

We all turn to illusion for comfort at some time and not "all illusions bring pain." A love affair, an old wine, a soft spring night, a winter's storm, an old familiar scene, strange new lands —they bring us illusions of a rapport with others, of mutual tenderness, contentment, warmth or strength, of unity with the past, of links with an ever-changing future. Some of these illusions can be prolonged. A few may last a lifetime. And all of them bring us assurance that there is something more to life than the humdrum existence which has become so deadly familiar.

But the fortunate ones are those who, when they get this itch for change, discover the ointment of a goal, something in which they believe, something for which they can work. From these come our saints and our martyrs, the leaders of revolutions in politics or in arts, the fathers of reform, the gallant leaders of lost causes, the founders of the future of nations.

Without that conviction that "there must be more to life than this" there would be much less to this than there is. It is a divine spark; it is what lifts man above the other animals.

We are lucky, though, that some of us are content with illusions instead of goals, and not overly worried when these illusions prove to have but a brief life. A world peopled solely by crusaders would be impossible for the race, which depends on people who are willing at times to humdrum-ness. It is not, let us hope, without the occasional itch for change to prove that there may be some good reason for providing for posterity, besides having them, in their turn, provide for posterity.

Wasteful Nature

The Alaska earthquake was ten million times more powerful than the atomic bomb the U.S. dropped on Hiroshima.

But Mother Nature is not so economical as man. She scatters her punches. Thus, though she expended ten million times the energy, she killed only a fraction of the people the atomic bomb claimed as victims.

A good thing, too. Had Mother Nature matched man's ingenuity in getting the biggest possible "kill" out of the release of energy, the quake's toll would have been 880,000,000,000 people, or about 280 times the world's population.

That would really have been "overkill capacity."

University men like to think they lead society. In practice they more often trail in the wake of others.—F. Kenneth Hare, Dean of Arts and Science, McGill University.

Strictly Personal
America Is A Nation Of Faddists

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

We are a nation of faddists. We live by slogans, by gimmicks, by scares, brief and violent enthusiasms and aversions. What other people would ever consume so many billions of useless and superfluous vitamins? What other people would ever collect eating fats on such scanty and inconclusive evidence?

The great cholesterol scare is with us, after several years. Millions of men and women past 40 have submitted unquestionable oils for animal fats in their diets, under the solemn conviction that it will reduce the cholesterol level" in the blood that causes artery hardening and heart attacks.

Now a team of researchers has questioned this one-to-one relationship between cholesterol and heart attacks. A new villain is suspected in the blood fat called "triglyceride." If the triglyceride content in the blood is high, artery disease may ensue even when there is little cholesterol in the blood.

Moreover, persons who go on a "cholesterol diet" usually replace fats with carbohydrates — and carbohydrates tend to increase the amount of glycerides in the blood. This is a vicious circle, and it is the latest matter.

The latest research indicates that the best, most effective, and safest way to avoid heart attacks is simple weight reduction; not eating fats, but how much you eat. For we are the leading country in the world in which more people die of overeating than from starvation.

On another front, the cigarette scare has produced millions of smokers to cut down, cut out, or switch to pipe and cigars. There is no question that smoking presents a considerable health hazard. But so does air pollution — and the latter is worst in America's most American communities, little if anything is done where the persistent menace of contaminated air.

Smoking, at least, harms only those who voluntarily engage in it. Atmospheric pollution harms all who even have contact with it, from infants onward. And, although expensive to regulate, it is much easier to control than individual smoking habits. But nobody seems to care much, except a few isolated public health officials. The problem is so vague, widespread, and impersonal as to touch no emotional response.

Remember the chlorophyll craze of a half-dozen years ago, when nearly everything one bought for a time was flavored green? That mania is now forgotten, but another will be along soon to inflate some industry or depress another, to provide the public with some magic formula for health, happiness and eternal life, at a low, low cost.

Right to Show 'Open Grave'

Ottawa Journal

The Ottawa Journal has had the letter now about the CBC television play "The Open Grave." It was neither as bad as the well-meaning critics thought, nor good enough to warrant all the boasts in its defence.

Religious faith should not be a cloistered thing. Nor should those who have faith be immune from direct or even crude assault upon their traditional pictures. Christianity could stand it. The intent is good. We take it CBC's intent was to convey an awareness that God was denied not just some 1,900 years ago but every year and every day since. We who believe in God and Him, and are denying Him, may say our denial is different, or that we are not aware of it. On Calvary He said of them, too, "Father forgive them for they know not what they do." The CBC's play will have done us more harm than good only if our faith is shaken. Indeed, it was at times an effective indictment of prejudice and untruth in forms all too common in our time.

The CBC production was perhaps unnecessarily crude in places, boring in other places and based upon an old-fashioned idea not consistently carried through. At times it seemed to forget its language and became a kind of tract against the bomb or capital punishment. But it certainly wasn't bad enough to have warranted the CBC to withdraw it in the face of complaints in high places. The principle of CBC autonomy is not absolute. But should be guarded by all of us and encroached upon only in the most flagrant abuse of it.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

April 1st, 1944.

A recommendation that the new executive of the Belleville and District Fish and Game Protective Association look into the possibilities of reforestation with the view of improving hunting and fishing in the Quinte area, was passed unanimously as members of the organization met at their annual meeting at the local Y.M.C.A.

In his position as president of the Association Mr. J. E. Shortt reviewed the past year's work. Membership had increased from 178 in 1942 to 270 in 1943, he stated, making the local organization, one of the largest branches in the Federation. Elmer "Sandy" Sandercock read Dr. Van Blaxlaes's report on the restocking program for the past year, indicating a total of 128 lakes and streams in the district had been restocked.

Fred Croft announced the association contest winners for the past year, the annual trout catching honor going to Capt. W. H. Bottom with a four pound five ounce monster; H. C. Bird took the second prize with a trout weighing three pounds and three ounces. Harry Langelier took the lunge catching honors with a specimen weighing 23 pounds four ounces, while Fred Sprague caught an 11 pound three ounce pike for top honors in this class. The small mouthed bass title went to Pete Welsh at a six pound, four ounce and J. Thrasher, second prize with a four pound eight ounce fish. The rainbow trout prize went to A. Lennox; it weighed 16 pounds, eight ounces.

30 YEARS AGO

On Saturday, March 17th, Mr. William Clouse of the Mohawk Reserve, celebrated the 88th anniversary of his birth and many friends called to see him at the home of his daughter, Mrs. William Bell, to extend congratulations and express good wishes. Sixty-eight years ago Mr. Clouse was united in marriage to Miss Catherine Hill and they have a family of three sons and two daughters. Mr. and Mrs. Claus are in fairly good health and they can tell many interesting stories of the early days on the Reserve.

Close to four hundred fewer radio licenses have been paid in Belleville for the year ending the 31st of this month than was the case for the previous year. This means that there are in the neighborhood of that number of persons at least, who have not paid the required radio licence. Few of these, it is believed, have dismantled their sets completely. Mr. F. Richmond, Dundas Street, who is the supervisor of radio licences for South Hastings, says that the investigations of this matter will be commenced shortly by an inspector from headquarters.

The meeting match at the Y.M.C.A. alleys last evening the Printers defeated the Uptowns, the score being 2529 to 2103. The following composed the teams: Printers — Wearn, Mason, Hoover, Harrison, and Lynch. Uptowners — Bryant, Miles, Jeffery, Poole and John Doe.

April 1st, 1914.

About one o'clock this afternoon the vast body of ice which was held at the Grand Trunk bridge, began to move and it certainly was a great sight. When the ice reached the lower bridge it piled up against the piers and even reached the superstructure. For a few hours it looked as if the bridge two and a half feet to three feet above the level of the water. One pier was shifted from its base and some damage was done to the second pier. Many sightseers were on the bridge at the time and they made a hasty retreat. The railing on the south side of the bridge was already damaged.

Peter Lorre Fine Villain

Watertown Times

Peter Lorre, who unquestionably had no equal when it came to portraying sinister characters on the screen, died yesterday the movie going public for—30 years. The motion picture country lost a versatile star when he died unexpectedly in Hollywood, Calif., at the age of 59. He was the victim of a stroke.

It was in 1931 that Mr. Lorre made his debut in the German-produced "M," since that time the short, pudgy, Hungarian-born actor has been able to dominate the screen with his own particular brand of evil.

With Mr. Lorre a member of the cast there was never once that the film would be entertaining: that it would hold the interest of the audience. He was the bad man of the picture, the villain who was able by his masterful acting and chilling manner to send shivers up the spines of the movie goers.

Mr. Lorre, a short man with wide-set, somewhat bulgy eyes and possessing a thick German accent, usually was tinged with a European accent tried at various times to play leading roles but he had been typed as the villainous character and he found it necessary to return to such roles.

It is regrettable that Mr. Lorre never grew much above fiction to his health. He had long been afflicted with high blood pressure, in fact in 1939 while on location in Spain such a condition, aggravated by sunstroke, nearly cost him his life. This scare showed him to some extent but not entirely the folly of his reckless for eating and drinking and abhorred any type of physical exercise.

The death of Mr. Lorre removes from Hollywood a host more of a regular deadhead group of colorful characters, including John Barrymore, William C. Fields, Humphrey Bogart, Errol Flynn, Gary Cooper, Clark Gable and many others. Death has taken a heavy toll over the past few years of notable characters and all of them at a comparatively young age and all of whom it will be difficult to replace.

Make Winnie MP for Life?

Ottawa Journal

There is a tendency in Canada to put the cart before the horse. It is certainly true that trade must not be hampered with. More often than not this is a good thing. Because of it the British Parliament has down through the years been alert to see that the cart does not, as it often does, run over the horse. It is necessary to make its rules and regulations in the interest of efficiency rather than of convenience.

We observe with a kind of modified admiration, for example, that the Guardian of Manchester, Ont., is seeking to perpetuate the memory of Winston Churchill's influence in the House of Commons would do credit to any member, Parliamentary or not. Mr. Churchill has been the same — barring illness, accident, or the occasional holiday — from the time of his retirement from the Premiership. But as the election approached, and with it Mr. Churchill's retirement from the House, so the feeling that he should be honored in both ways grew without him the place would seem very strange. Many are now agreed that the greatest commoner of all time deserves some special tribute. Unfortunately it would be a comparatively simple matter, requiring no legislation, to persuade the House to allow him the privilege of attending still.

The difficulty must be many who would grudge him that small pleasure, but much will depend, of course, on the kind of mood after the election. Such a reabsorption would naturally have to be by way of a peerage in the House. If the Commons can still make the claim of being "the most ancient" it is only right after its centuries of existence allow just one very special honor to be conferred.

It may not happen, it may be that it should not happen. But we like to think of people being able to consider the idea without considering the heavens would fall.

Now in Canada, of course, we have no chance for anything like Sir Winston Churchill. But even if we had him we seem to hear some people say that if we put him he would then have to give the same privileges to a French Canadian. And then if the word "guest" was a Tory—the next must be a Grit, and could we be honor guests in not names, and what would Newfoundland say if a BC man got the nod, and . . .

That's Way Ball Flies

Montreal Star

Research, he says, has established to the complete satisfaction of baseball players that it is not possible to throw a baseball in such a way as to make it curve. (The vast scepticism with which his discovery has been received (there is no end). He is overwhelmingly outvoted on that point, but no matter. He persists in the fiction that they are all brain-washed.

Mr. Lowry's research, however, is manifestly incomplete. He insists that baseballs do not curve, but admits the fact of the optical illusion of a curve in the path of a ball approaching a batter. Surely any sane batters more susceptible to that illusion than others, some pitchers especially, and then in their employment of it? One batter will break his back swinging three times before the third pitcher will serve up the same throw to the next batter and watch it disappear over the centre-fielder's fence. How come?

A kindred spirit of Mr. Lowry's proved that aerodynamically bumblebees cannot fly. But bees do fly, and in fact they do fly, but it is a very convincing one. We will continue to fly in spite of scepticism as we believe in Mr. Lowry's.

Possible for Older People To Undergo Ear Surgery

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I read that it is now safe for older people to undergo a new type of surgery for deafness, and that such operations have been proven 90 percent perfect. Is this possible in a healthy people of 75? — H. E.

Yes, but let's scratch out the reference that such operations have proven 90 percent perfect.

I don't like the word perfect, except as an ideal. We all want to be perfect, but we never achieve perfection. I also don't like generalized statements.

In the seemingly dull, scientifically fussy, medical articles that I read, I've never disappointed when some doctor claims modestly that such discovery is just a little bit better than we had before. But I'm always on guard when somebody thinks he has "the answer!" Or some problem or other. Or when, at accordband, somebody else claims that he has achieved the ultimate.

However, I listen carefully when some improvement is reported. Many little gains add up to a lot.

And so it is with treatment of loss of hearing. We have had a great many little gains and these have added up to enormous progress over what was possible 10 or 30 years ago.

There are quite a few causes and types of impaired hearing. If the nerve is involved there are a variety of operations can help. If the nerve is not functioning, nothing can be done.

So have an ear specialist examine you. He will discuss the possibilities in your case and if any such surgery is perfectly reasonable for a man of 75, even though it was not so evident a couple of decades ago.

In many instances, these various operations result in an almost immediate improvement in hearing.

Careful tests in advance will separate the "possible" from the "impossible." Then, if it has been done, most of the "possibles" will be benefitted. A few will not.

So listen carefully to what your doctor says: Does he say he "feels almost sure" he can help; or that an operation "probably" will help; or "May help; he has chances" for improvement.

Give you a "what-the-heck," but he cannot be certain.

Booklet, "Ear Noises — Their Causes and Cures," will help many people with hearing problems. To get your copy, enclose a long self-addressed unstamped envelope and 25 cents in coin, addressing your request to me in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dunellen, Ill.

Dear Dr. Molner: My children have had four Salk vaccine shots for polio, the last ones in 1958 and 1959. How it seems they are supposed to have boosters every two years, although at the time four shots were considered sufficient. Most they get another Salk shot or can they get the one and Sabin vaccine as a booster? — A. B.

The "booster every two years" was an effort to be on the safe side, because we didn't then know with certainty. We now know that a booster every four to five years will be adequate. It makes no particular difference whether the booster is the Salk type (by injection) or the Sabin type (by mouth).

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it unhealthy for an adult to sleep with a 10-year-old child? — U. S.

I don't say it is "unhealthy," but there's a difference in the amount of sleep needed by the child and the adult. It is preferable for the child to be able to sleep straight through the night undisturbed.

Today in History

TODAY IN HISTORY
By THE CANADIAN PRESS
April 1, 1964 . . .

The CPR announced six years ago today—in 1958—that it would begin eliminating firemen from freight and yard diesel locomotives in May. CPR president N. R. Crump said "continued insistence by the firemen's union that Canadian Pacific retain firemen on freight and yard diesels when there is no work for them to do can no longer be allowed to prevent us from away from providing the economic and efficient transportation service to which Canada is entitled."

1950—NATO defence ministers at The Hague approved a collective plan of self-defence.

Tractors Now Have Extras

Watertown Times

If you should happen to overhear some farmers excitedly talking about "power steering," "power shifts" and "bucket seats," stop and listen. You wouldn't be interested but you might learn a great deal.

No . . . No . . . No . . . They weren't discussing the new 1964 sedan, tudor, convertible, station wagon or sports car one of them just purchased. Chances are they would be analyzing some of the additional features on the 1964 models of farm tractors.

Until about ten years ago, most farm tractors consisted of four wheels, a 85-horsepower engine, a plain steel seat and little else. Since then manufacturers have decided to make tractors just as comfortable, diversified and operational as automobiles. For example, a tractor just like the $3,700 stripped could sell for $5,500 and more when equipped with "power steering" "power shift" and "bucket seats."

Power steering now is standard on large models of all six major tractor manufacturers. And it is optional on smaller models. Automatic transmissions are gaining in popularity. Gravel loading and backhoe standard on most tractors and there is a trend toward radios. Some have air conditioned cabs and tractor seats have been available for the past four years. And now comes the complete cab — a fully adjustable, no-bounce, fully padded, armchair-comfort seat with bucket self-leveling. For $700 extra on some tractors you can have a heated cab. And the makers say air-conditioned cabs will be coming next.

But come to think about it—farmers without doubt deserve to have these extra comfort features and more. After all, a farmer spends an average 800 hours a year on tractor.

GEORGE HERBERT GLOVER

MADOC — George Herbert Glover of R. R. 3, Madoc died in Belleville General Hospital on Tuesday, March 31st, in his 82nd year. He had been in failing health for about a year.

Born in Madoc township, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Glover, he is survived by his wife, the former Florence E. Chalker. Surviving are one sister, Mrs. H. (Florence) Love, of Madoc township and two brothers, Rev. John E. Glover of Marmora and William C. Glover of Madoc township. He was predeceased by two brothers, Sgt. W. A. Glover, killed overseas in 1918, and Phillip M. Glover and by two sisters, Mrs. G. (Nancy) Moorman and Mrs. E. (Emma) Reynolds.

A retired farmer, Mr. Glover was elected Reeve of Madoc township and had lived in the area all his life. He was a member, and a lifetime elder, of Queensboro United Church.

Well known and highly regarded in the district, he was an honorary life member of O.L.S. 437 in Queensboro and an honorary life member of B.S.P. 167 in Queensboro.

SQUEEZED between an apartment building and a retaining wall — and working beneath a clothesline full of laundry, Lightfoot's men are finishing the last few feet of the new Lattimer-to-John St. sewer job. Sub-surface rock forced blasting along Lattimer St., but the tractor-mounted excavator in the background of this picture and a back-hoe behind the photographer had easy work through the clay near the house. Men are working by hand in this picture to clear clay from around a water-service line.

BUILDING BONUS

Extension of the Federal government's $500 bonus offer to buyers of winter-built houses will benefit about 25 projects in Belleville, according to reliable estimates. The extension—from March 31 to April 15, was announced by the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. office in Kingston by telegram last Thursday. It was confirmed by memo on Monday, according to Office manager D. B. Bain. The bonus is payable to the purchasers of houses started during the winter, and ends, for occupancy before the deadline. The extension was granted because the winter building boom this year caused material and labor shortages in some areas.

Not all local builders are pleased by the extension. Wilfred McCormick, realtor handling sales in West Park Village, comments that 11 houses in the village are planned for the normal deadline, and all were finished on time — and it cost extra money to rush them through for the deadline. If he had known about the extension two months ago, he says, he could have had several more houses built.

Within two weeks, Mr. McCormick says, another fifteen houses will be started in the Village.

Charles Lambert was building five houses to beat the March 31st deadline, and says he could have had them finished in time. He found out Thursday afternoon, about the extension, and stopped work for the Easter holiday. He has four more houses just started.

Edzar Bell had three houses that would have been ready for the deadline, but slowed work when the extension was announced. One of the houses was finished anyway, last Saturday, the other two are delayed while Bell's men are working on an office and garage for the firm's own use. The garage will be finished by the end of the week. Bell says, and the other two houses will be ready within the extended deadline.

Maurice Rollins had a total of 42 houses being built for the bonus, and all but four were finished within the original time limit. Of the unfinished houses, two are in the King George Square development and two in Trenton. Work on the unfinished houses is being delayed now, because of mud conditions on the sites. Mr. Rollins says he has found material shortages a problem — even though he operates his own lumber yard — but he feels the last minute extension of the deadline is unfair to the builders who spent extra money to be finished by March 31. He has three more houses being started in Belleville, he says, and three more in each of Trenton and Kingston. He plans to start 10 more within the next three weeks.

Of three houses being built for the bonus by Don Keller Construction, one is already finished and the other two will be ready by April 15.

BANK OF MONTREAL

Mirton Wiggers is all finished now, at the new Bank of Montreal branch on College and North Front Street. Robert Young, manager of the branch now operating in a trailer at the site, says that bank employees are now at work finishing off the counters and such items inside, and will be installing the alarm system before the end of the week. Opening will probably by May 1.

STILLMAN AND MOKOS

Mirton Wiggers have been working for two weeks now on a new building for Stillman and Mokos Garage, in Trenton. Cliff Stillman, operator of the garage, plans to be operating his new building, at the north end of town on No. 33 Highway, by May 1. The garage specializes in automatic transmission service. John Luymes is superintending the job for Mirton Wiggers; Bill Lavole is in charge of Brassbaw masons on the site.

LATTIMER-JOHN STREET SEWER

Work will probably be finished by the end of the week on the sewers going up Lattimer St. and across private property to John Street. Lightfoot's men, working under foreman George Hopkins are closing the last few feet — on private property now. Fears that blasting might be required in the confined space between an apartment building and a retaining wall have proved groundless, the rock the men were working through along Lattimer St. petered out almost at the ends of the private property. A tractor-mounted excavator and a back hoe have been working easily through the clay across the lawn and up beside the building.

24-INCH WATER MAIN

Troubles with rock are making Norman Lightfoot unhappy along Sidney St. south of Lewis St., where he is putting in a 24-inch water main for the city. The work is just between the rock and rocky soil now, and the rough work is hard on the back hoe being used to split the rock. Starting today or tomorrow, they'll be in solid rock and blasting their way through. Dave Bulpit, a Lightfoot employee since right after the Second World War, will be handling the powder, and Norman Lightfoot says he is good at it. The situation is rough for blasting because of the power lines overhead — including one that feeds the cement plant in Picton. There will be about four shots a day, Lightfoot figures, two in the morning and two in the afternoon. A single shot includes up to ten holes each with up to five sticks of dynamite, but people living along the street will hardly notice it.

WILSON'S TUNE UP SERVICE

W. Danford and sons started yesterday morning on an addition to Wilson's Tune Up Service, Coleman Street. The addition, 20 by 45 feet, goes alongside and ties in with the present 20 by 35 foot building. Ground floor, of concrete block, will be used for service, second floor, of ...ame construction will tie in with the apartment on the second floor of the present building. There's three feet of frost near the front of the lot sloping away. The building won't be finished for six or eight weeks, according to Mr. Danford, because he will be pulling his men out half - way through for a rush landscaping job.

ELLIOTT MOTORS

First section of the floor of the main service area at Elliott Motor...' new building was poured last week, and the second section was poured Monday. Final section, off in a back corner, won't be poured for a while because superintendent Roy Brooks is waiting for a frame straightening machine — used to straighten the frames of trucks — for installation. Part of the service area has been poured, hoists are installed in the quick - service section, the terrazzo floor is poured and is being ground in the main showroom. Hibbard Electric Ltd., installing the lighting, is very nearly through with its job. Gas pumps and gas tanks are on site, but not yet installed. There will be some gas - sales island outside the quick - service area, north of the main building), and another in front. Roy Brooks expects the building will be ready for opening by May first.

Land-clearing operations in the woods near the Elliott Motors project last week were not progressions for the Carousel Motel, Roy Brooks says. Elliott Motors has the land, and wanted it cleared for reasons of its own. No word has been received yet at the building inspector's office of a start on the new motel.

BLACK DIAMOND

Larry (Slim) Yurwak came back to work Monday at Lamport McAlpine Ltd. on the Black Diamond addition. He was ill in hospital for a few weeks. Two small sections of floor in the addition had not yet been poured yesterday. Yurwak said they would be poured today. Three of the four load-levellers, (moveable ramps between the loading platforms and trucks), have been installed, and two of the loading docks are in use. The fourth load-leveller is on site, but has not yet been installed because the concrete around it has not yet been poured. James Finlay Co. Ltd. of Islington is at work now, installing the sprinkling rooms in the addition. Yurwak has named no date for completion of the job.

PICTON SEWAGE PLANT

Testing will start this week at the new sewage treatment plant in Picton, according to William Witham. The plant will be in operation in about three weeks, he adds, but the landscaping and other outside jobs will not be finished by then.

Two Escape Serious Injury In Accident

BYLSTONE — Bill Morton, Jr., Oakville, and his cousin, James Morton, Bylstone, narrowly escaped death or serious injury on Saturday afternoon, when Jim's 1964 Dodge Convertible, turned over after striking a soft shoulder on Highway 401 where the four lane highway reduces to two lanes near Napanee. Bill sustained a broken wrist and thumb and several scrapes and bruises, while Jim escaped with a bump on his head, a scraped hand and multiple bruises.

Both men received a severe shaking up and feel they are lucky to be alive.

Doctors at the Kingston General Hospital, where they were taken following the accident, say they owe their lives to their safety belts. Both men have been released from hospital.

Hastings Region Tourist Council Plans Brochure

The Hastings and Land O' Lakes Regional Tourist Council held its March meeting at the hotel in Tamworth, with President Grant McKittrick in charge. A. J. Hall, district inspector from the Travel and Publicity Department at Napanee, advised on the new directional signs which were available.

A motion was passed by the council to advertise for a sales-man or advertising agency to assist in preparing a suitable brochure for the region.

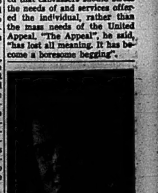
Mr. McKittrick reported that the booth at the Sportsman Show was a great success, many enquiries being for information regarding trout fishing.

Miss Joyce Williams of Markham, Ont., was the winner of $100 donated by the council towards a vacation at the resort of her choice in this region. A resolution was received from the Lennox and Addington county council recommending that the township of Deseronto, Tyendinaga and Adolphustown, in the Mohawks Valley Tourist District be included in the Hastings and Land O' Lakes Tourist Region.

The next meeting of the council will be held April 28 in Madoc.

United Appeal Said Crippled By Poor Public Relations

Poor public relations crippled last year's United Appeal campaign, an emergency meeting of the Appeal members agreed last night. The meeting by the Kiwanis Centre, had been called to elect officers to posts left vacant by the annual meeting March ninth, and to consider possible changes in administration of this year's United Appeal.



United Appeal director, Frank Murray, broached the matter, commenting that last year's United Appeal "fell flat on its face". He said the problem was lack of communication — that the people of Belleville have little knowledge of the functions of United Appeal agencies. He suggested that private industries with professional public relations staffs might be asked to provide advice from those staffs.

Chairman of public relations for last year's United A...l, Mrs. J. L. Smith, criticized the public relations efforts of the individual agencies in last year's Appeal. The agencies' public relations committees had been reluctant to attend meetings, she said, and had failed to provide adequate material on the individual agencies.

PERSONAL TOUCH NEEDED

Public relations manager for the 1964 United Appeal — and himself a professional public relations man - - - William Killough told the meeting "there is no such thing as public relations people doing a public relations job in the agencies".

Speaking on another subject during the meeting, William Michaud of Shannonville, (who said that although he lives in Shannonville, he considers Belleville his home community) suggested that a more personal approach is needed. He suggested that canvassers should stress the needs of and services offered the individual, rather than the mass needs of the United Appeal. "The Appeal", he said, "has lost all meaning. It has become a boresome begging".

George Hume, a local businessman, has been appointed a Director of the Associated Credit Bureaus North Central States, covering New York, Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana, Kentucky, Ohio and Ontario. Mr. Hume is a director of several credit companies in Ontario and also is president of the Credit Bureaus of Belleville, Kingston and Calgary.

Nosey Nellie Exception, Not Rule for Operators

DEAR ANN LANDERS — We are a group of office workers in a large firm with a problem that surely must be shared by hundreds of other employees in organizations similar to ours. We are referring to the nosey switchboard operators who listen in on our personal calls.

Speaking for myself, I have never said anything on the phone I would be ashamed to have repeated, but all the same it is annoying to know that some inquisitive broad can entertain herself with our personal conversations.

Is there any way we can get privacy? Thank you. — EAVES-DROPPED.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR EAVES — If you — and millions of others — knew how little the switchboard operators care about the trivia that passes for conversation, you'd relax.

There must be one Nosey Nellie out of 500 operators, and it may be you have her, but the vast majority of telephone operators need six more hands, eight more ears and two additional mouths to do their jobs. They have neither the time, nor the desire, to listen in on personal calls.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — If a wife keeps the house clean, does the washing and ironing, cooks good meals and takes care of her three young children, does she have the right to go to Bible class one evening a week for six weeks?

First let me tell you that I am not attractive. I keep myself neat but no man would take a second look. Yet my husband insists everybody in town wants me — including the minister.

I love to go to Bible class. I believe people need God as much as they need food. I've begged my husband to come with me. He refuses. The only thing he says when I come home is, "Did you and the minister have a good time?"

If I get the mail before he does he says I am hiding love letters. He searches the garbage for cigarette butts. (Nobody in our house smokes.) If a car goes past our house slowly my husband says, "Somebody is looking for you."

Should I give up Bible class to satisfy him? What do you recommend? — CONFUSED.

DEAR CONFUSED — Giving up the Bible classes will solve nothing. Your husband's unfounded accusations are a measure of his need for profound help. Urge him to get it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Four of us in the back corner of a history class are racking our brains trying to figure out what to do about a student that is driving us crazy. We finally decided to write to you.

Our history teacher has a terrible habit of hooking the phrase "at the time" on to almost every other sentence. This afternoon he lectured for 25 minutes and used the phrase "at the time" 32 times. We kept track.

His lectures are unbearable. We can't concentrate on the subject matter because whenever he says "at the time" it's like a sharp pain in the ear. Please don't print my name or initials, but do print the general location of this city. He may see it and take the hint. — MICHIGANDER.

DEAR MICHIGANDER — Your history teacher will probably be asking himself "in the end" every time except the teacher who is guilty, that is.

Most people have unconscious speech mannerisms. (Mine happens to be "you see.") Unless they are told, they never know, and therefore cannot correct it.

If you are in A student tell him. If not, mail him this column — anonymously, of course.

Stirling Couple Mark Golden Anniversary

STIRLING — On Wednesday, March 25th, over 200 relatives and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Earl A. Leury, 97 John Street, Stirling, on the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary.

For the afternoon and evening receptions the rooms were a bower of beauty with a large array of potted bronze 'mums, golden long-stemmed roses and a variety of cut flowers. The dining table was laid with an heirloom linen cloth which had been used at the wedding in 1914 and a set of heirloom cups and saucers also had a prominent place in the appointments. The table was centred with a bowl of mixed baby 'mums in various shades of gold with matching gold candles in crystal holders.

Mrs. Desmond Jackman, Ottawa, received at the door and was in charge of the guest book. She was assisted by Donald Leury, Stirling, a grandson of the honored couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Leury received their guests in the living room with Mrs. Leury wearing an off-white linen suit with a corsage of bronze chrysanthemums and satin ribbon.

The other members of the family all had a part in welcoming the guests, who were in attendance from Stouffville, Toronto, Burnside, Kitchener, Ottawa, Trenton, Belleville, Corbyville, Campbellford and nearby points.

Mrs. Leury is the former Ethel Coulter, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Coulter, Stirling, and she has resided in the village for 58 years. Mr. Leury is the only son of Mr. George Leury and the late Mrs. Leury of Stirling, and was born and received his education in his home town.

The wedding was held at the home of the bride, 94 Welling-ton Street, Stirling, with Rev. A. J. Terrill, pastor of St. Paul's United Church, officiating, on March 25th, 1914. They have two daughters Mrs. E. A. Cowan (Madaline) of Belleville, and Mrs. Desmond Jackson (Marie) of Ottawa, and two sons, Douglas of Kitchener and Robert of Toronto.

Assisting with the attendance were the bride's sister, Miss Aleta Coulter and Mr. Clarence Cook.

Mr. and Mrs. Cook reside in Toronto and they were unable to attend the festivities. Mr. and Mrs. Leury were the recipients of almost 150 congratulatory cards and also several telegrams. Floral tributes were sent from Vancouver, B.C., Toronto, and other points. The gifts included a money tree from the family and several items of china, etc.

Mr. W. E. Sandercock, MPP for Hastings West, delivered in person a scroll from the province of Ontario.

Dainty refreshments were served by Mrs. K. A. Cowan, Belleville; Mrs. Douglas Leury, Kitchener; Mrs. Robert Leury, Stirling, assisted by a bevy of Stirling friends, which included: Mrs. Albert Fraser, Mrs. Carl Potter, Mrs. Bruce Bell, Mrs. Clayton Tummon, Mrs. C. R. Bastedo, Mrs. Russell West, Mrs. Herb David and Mrs. Robert Patterson.

Mr. and Mrs. Leury have lived in the same house for the past 50 years and both are members of St. Paul's United Church, Stirling. Their many friends in the Stirling area extend congratulations and best wishes on this happy occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Leury, 92 John Street, entertained 18 guests at dinner that evening in honor of his parents. Those in attendance included Mrs. Leury's sister, Mrs. B. Farrell of Toronto, and Mrs. Rose Der Rosiers of Ringwood, Ontario; Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Leury and sons Mark and Chris of Kitchener, and Mr. and Mrs. K. A. Cowan of Belleville.

Speaking Personally

By Gladys Ward

A DAY OUT

One of the treats of my childhood was a day spent visiting in the country while my father was making his pastoral rounds. This was a family affair and we all went.

My father hired a "democrat," a double seated affair drawn by a team of horses, from the livery stable. Cars were fairly common then, but my father never learned to drive one. On his only attempt when he wanted to stop he yelled, "Whoa, whoa" and crashed through the wall of the shed. Sometimes the horses would shy at the approach of a car and we would have to stop and my father would hold their heads until the car had passed, both car and horses snorting loudly.

The yearly outing was planned well in advance, and took place in early spring. It was great fun to climb up on the high step and get into the leather seat. The mingled smell of leather, horses and April was enchanting to the world of childhood.

There was always one place where they were making maple syrup, and this crowned our day with a "sugaring off." We would gather pans of snow from the disappearing drifts near the fences, and then we would drizzle the hot syrup over it until it formed into maple taffy. How sweet and good it tasted. Each of us was given a cake of maple sugar to take home. These had been poured into fluted moulds to harden, and we treasured them.

We would return home with the democrat loaded with gifts of thick cream, apples, potatoes, chickens, and eggs. A minister's pay was small in those days, but the farmers' hearts were generous and what they lacked in money they made up with produce.

This reminiscent picture is like a tiny miniature that I like to look at once in a while. It is a day long past and seems totally alien in the light of today's frenetic pace.

SIT DOWN

Overheard on a Belleville bus: Mother to young son who persisted in standing on the seat with muddy boots, "If you don't sit down I'll give you to the first policeman we see and he'll lock you up in jail."

Shades of our grandmothers!

I thought this kind of psychology went out with button shoes.

Educators have been trying to instill in parents that their children should be taught to regard policemen, doctors and dentists as their friends, but in some cases parents are still using them as bogeymen. Any mother who has to resort to such tactics to get her child to obey is sadly lacking in an essential understanding.

It was impossible not to think about the effect this mother's remark would have on the child, and to picture her child getting separated from her while she was shopping. If the child had been taught to trust the police he would turn to him in such a crisis, but imagine a policeman trying to comfort such a lad, with the boy thinking he was going to be locked up! The damage done to a woman does to a child is inconceivable.

Mother's Helper

A SHOE BAG hung on the bottom or side here of your newspaper's rack is a convenient holder for an assortment of quick tops for wake-up time. Change the tops frequently, and let baby play with each only in his crib in the morning, to avoid boredom with the same old thing.

Wife Preservers

To tip long sleeves back the moment they start to dip into food or drink, fasten a sewing swivel to the inside of your garment. Pressed hard across the "tilted bowl," it holds them back.

Hospital Treats For Patients At Easter

On Sunday, March 29th, a special Easter treat was provided for all patients in the Belleville General Hospital by Auxiliary volunteers headed by President Mrs. F. A. Beatty and Holiday Treats Convener Mrs. R. O. Clarke when tiny decorated pots of flowering begonias were distributed by a group comprised of Mesdames J. J. Vesterfelt, W. D. Leslie, W. J. Johns and C. E. Cooke. The ladies visited every patient and spent a few minutes chatting with each.

In the pediatric ward felt Easter bunnies and other Easter toys were given to each child. These gifts were made by the C.G.I.T. Girls from Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, St. Columba Presbyterian Church and Centre Street United Church. The girls and Mrs. H. J. Andrews who co-ordinated the work are to be commended on their kindness in bringing happiness to so many hospitalized children.

Mother's Helper

MOST CHILDREN respond eagerly to the "mother's helper" carrying much badges in Scouts. The requirements are not usually particularly difficult in Scout, but they are most specific. You should see to it that your youngster obviously does what is asked, and offer your encouragement and cooperation. Rewarding the boy or badging a bit defeats the learning purpose and may even establish undesirable habits.

Tourists Urged to Boycott Home Town of Shakespeare

By EDD YGHLMORE

LONDON (AP) — Fireworks between a woman tourist guide and Stratford-on-Avon officials added an unscheduled attraction Tuesday to 1964 celebrations of the 400 anniversary of William Shakespeare's birth.

Mrs. Eileen Mitchell, 36, urged travel agents around the world to boycott Shakespeare's old home town, declaring it is inhospitable and "we are clearly not welcome on the banks of the Avon."

Rushing to the defence of Stratford and the tourism that is perhaps its greatest industry, Mayor Cyril Kemp said:

"This ill-informed woman is talking utter nonsense. Every one here goes out of the way to give the warmest welcome to tourists and overseas visitors."

A guide-lecturer for the British Travel and Holidays Association, Mrs. Mitchell expressed her views to agents in Britain and scores of other countries in an article in the Travel Trade Gazette.

A boycott of a year's duration, she hoped, would teach the people of Stratford a lesson," she said. "I would like to see the whole industry join in."

Mrs. Mitchell said she took tourists to the place of Shakespeare's birth at least once a week last season.

"We were constantly harried . . . by the police for coach parking and often expelled from the church where Shakespeare lies buried," she said.

"In other words the expulsion from the church (Holy Trinity) was a relief in view of the blatant and merciless fashion in which our clients were harangued for 3 vreevil offerings."

"We are told by the local worthies — to the accompaniment of cash registers ringing up the purchases of Shakespeare bead door-knockers and Hathaway cottage jam pots — that the hordes of charabangs (tourist buses) are a pestilential nuisance."

Reinforcing Kemp's rebuttal was R.EV. Thomas Bland, vicar of the church where Shakespeare is buried.

"This is absurd and if this woman ever comes to my church I shall tell her so in no uncertain manner," the vicar said. "We do not demand money from anyone. We have the box for the church restoration appeal, the same as any other church."

The Experts Say
Hairstyle Should Have A Professional Start

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP) — Shampoo and a hair brush, used often, keep hair looking its best. That never changes.

What does change is the best way of washing and keeping a new hair style.

It should have a professional start, says Joyce Wood, Toronto hairdresser and demonstrator of hair preparations. A hairdresser should cut and shape it and, says Miss Andalaro, most of today's hair styles need a basic wave.

"It should usually be a soft wave. The amount of curl you get depends on the size of the rod used, not on the time the permanent is on. Usually no professional permanent should be left on more than 10 minutes. That doesn't apply to home permanents, however. They should be used as the instructions indicate."

Miss Andaloro estimates that most women need permanents every three to five months, depending on how fast their hair grows and the style they wear.

"To take care of it at home, people want to use what is easiest to work with, and that's not always what is best.

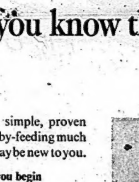
"Smooth rollers are better than brushes for the hair because they dry the hair. Women should try back-brushing instead of back-combing. It's less intense."

EASY ON SPRAY

You should use spray to keep the set in place but don't make the mistake of using it too heavily, Miss Andaloro says. Too much dry the hair. She recommends holding the spray can at least a foot away from the head, and also favors using hair conditioner as well as a holding spray.

Age is a factor in the kind of hair care and treatment, she says. "If teen-agers would just realize it, all they have to do is brush their hair. That gives young hair a sheen without preparations."

Miss Abdalore cautions against careless use of home permanents or experiments with tints and dyes at home. "People don't know how to handle them. Operators are trained and should have things at hand that can help rectify a mistake if anything goes wrong."



Women might feel bolder about trying a new style if the hairdresser would show them how to take care of it, she says. "It is to his advantage. It is good for his reputation if the hairdo looks good longer."

She says a new hair coloring, however fashionable, must be chosen carefully to blend with skin coloring.

"Your hairdresser should be able to help you decide what hair style would suit you best and suit the way you live. He should be known what the trend is and he should be able to set it."

Ex-Service Women Plan Future Events

The monthly meeting of the Col. Tilley Wells Branch (Ex-Service Women) of the Royal Canadian Legion was held recently in the Legion hall with the president Comrade Janet MacDonald presiding.

A new project was donated to the branch by Mrs. Ross Acheson, which will be suitably engraved.

Following the favorable report given by Comrades MacDonald, Rollins and Burney, of the District Public Speaking finals held by the Legion in Trenton, it was decided Branch 527 should actively take part in this nation-wide enterprise.

Also presented for discussion was a project for Canada's Centennial; suggestions were received by the president and

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS, MAIL CALL

Question: We've just moved to the suburbs and are giving a party shortly as a sort of housewarming. Most of our guests will be coming from the city. Many are driving, but several couples will be coming by train. My husband and I will be up to our ears in preparations and greeting those who arrive by car, so it will be impractical for either of us to go to meet the train. May we ask guests to take a cab from the station, or would this seem impolite — since they are taking the trouble to travel so far by train? — Mrs. A. G., Croton, N. Y.

Answer: If the guests are arriving on the same train, the gracious thing to do is to meet them at the station. But if they are arriving on different trains, then it becomes impossible to make a number of trips and neglect your duties as hosts. If guests have to take cabs, let them know this in advance and advise how they should go about procuring transportation once they arrive at the station.

Question: It has always been the custom in our family to wait until everyone was served before starting to eat dinner. I understand that this is no longer the practice. Would you please inform me when it is permissible to start eating? Should one begin as soon as he is served, or wait until half the people at the table have their plates before them? — Mrs. J. S., Boston, Mass.

Answer: Rather than let the food grow cold, especially if there's a large group to be served, it's permissible to start eating as soon as the hostess has passed plates to two or three at the table.

Veal and Pork Available at Lower Prices

OTTAWA (CP) — Veal and pork should be readily available at slightly lower prices during April, the federal agriculture department said Tuesday in its monthly food outlook bulletin.

The bulletin says that seasonally heavy supplies of veal at lower prices are in sight, especially in Eastern Canada.

Pork cuts will remain plentiful during most of April, but housewives should plan to buy for future needs as some later price rise may be expected.

Beef: Blue and red brand beef may be slightly more expensive in April, especially in the East. Cow beef should remain steady or decline slightly in price.

Creamery butter: Butter will be available at discount prices during April, as it has been for two years in a row, at a price cut of 10 cents.

Evaporated milk: Now that production of evaporated milk is increasing, supplies are coming back to last year's levels. Prices are not likely to rise in the immediate future.

Chicken broilers: Supplies are ample and prices may decrease slightly.

The bulletin also lists apples, potatoes, onions, carrots and vitamized apple juice as being particularly good food buys in April.

Church Groups

FRANKFORD C.A.

FRANKFORD — Good Friday evening was C.A. family night in the Full Gospel Tabernacle. Sub-leader, Miss Carolyn Reichert, was in charge of the service, opening with the C.A. chorus. Mrs. Gordon Grant led in prayer and Mrs. Gerald Curry read the Scripture reading. Mr. Ed and Louie Charlebois of EPBC, Peterborough, sang two duets, Miss Sandra Purvis of Peterboro, sang a solo.

Mr. Charlie Wright gave a vote of thanks to the ladies of the church who provided an Easter lunch to the choir on Good Friday after practice.

Rev. F. Spring conducted a Scripture shower with the CA's defeating the mothers and fathers. The Charlebois brothers sang a duet.

Mr. Ed Charlebois of EPBC, Peterborough, was the guest speaker for the evening. The meeting closed with prayer by Rev. F. Spring.

Serene Atmosphere Needed For Child Showing Tension

DEAR DORIS — My 18-month-old daughter has a habit of pulling on her hair badly when she gets mad. And she claws at our faces, and we just don't know what to do about it.

I'm afraid that when she gets out playing with other children that she will do it with them; and I'm afraid she will hurt her head by pulling on her hair so hard. Can you help me? — FRANTIC MOTHER.

DEAR FRANTIC — Hair pulling, clawing, are her ways of dealing with tension. Don't scold her — decide what makes her mad.

Is her sensitive little psyche reacting to a jangling, disordered atmosphere in the home? Watch for the circumstances which go with her anger. If you are taut and high strung, if you raise your voice in excitement or anger, or her Daddy does, she'll tighten up, too.

Create a serene atmosphere, with plenty of cuddling in it; also a good deal of physical activity for your fast-growing little girl.

Bring your doctor in on this. Not only will he help you soothe her; he may isolate a physical cause of the extra-high tension.

DORIS CLARE

DEAR DORIS — My boy friend's mother can be sweet and cordial, but she flares up easily, yells at the children, and is very domineering. She finds fault with her son (my B.F.) constantly.

While I take no part in family disagreements, I do not appreciate the trouble it causes and wonder what effect a poor mother-son relationship would have on my future husband.

Outside the home we get along fine and enjoy each other's company. — LOVING BUT DOUBTING.

DEAR LOVING — It's not, the best kind of home to be raised in! But it sometimes happens that the victim of an overbearing parent tends to over-compensate by developing a good disposition.

Clear the air, and your doubts, by making this a matter for discussion with your intended. In any marriage there are likely to be jarring elements which have to be resolved.

DEAR DORIS — I dread the future. After eight years of marriage my husband and I have separated and we are being divorced. Our main trouble has been incompatibility and no communication, and now there is another woman involved.

What matters now is what happens to me. I feel paralyzed. I simply cannot do anything. I am panic stricken at being alone and can feel that I am retreating constantly into myself. I must get some kind of help immediately.

I have a job. My doctor has helped with tranquillizers, but I can't lean on drugs. — PANIC STRICKEN.

DEAR PANIC STRICKEN — I suspect you are still suffering shock. You have absorbed hurt after hurt. Trying to go on as if nothing had happened to your emotional life is just too much. Your body, your nerves, your emotions, simply stand still.

I'll prescribe a confidant and counsellor, someone with whom you can talk it all out. A woman with your resources (you mentioned college courses, swimming, tennis, riding, in the past) will shake a good comeback. Just give yourself time.

(Let a Canadian counsellor give you guidance. Write to Doris in care of this paper, enclosing a five-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope for a private reply.)

revolt and were dispatching troops to Rio.

"We are taking the opportunity to sweep communism out of Brazil," Barros said.

De Barros said the forces of Krasl and Mourao planned to rendezvous and march on Rio together.

Goulart ordered troops to move against Juiz de Fora and Belo Horizonte, state capital of Minas Gerais.

USE TANKS

Thirty tanks circled the war ministry in Rio and additional troops reinforced the city's garrison.

The Communist - dominated General Command of Workers called a general strike in support of the president.

(A Reuters news agency story said Brazil "was on the brink of civil war" with loyalist and rebel army forces facing each other across the Paraibuna River north of Rio. The rebels were blocking the highway from Rio to the capital, Brasilia, which was reported calm and under the control of loyalist forces.)

A government broadcast said a loyalist armored column moving from the state of Parana had penetrated into the state of Sao Paulo without meeting any resistance.

President Goulart was reported in telephone contact with governors of Brazilian states that rallied to his government.

Crowds were reported to have mobbed grocery stores in Rio Tuesday night but the city was reported quiet this morning.

The cost of civil war was expected to send the exchange rate of the dollar soaring even higher today than Tuesday, when its cruzeiro value on the free market rose to 1,850 from Monday's 1,700.

STAYS ON AIR

The government's national radio stayed on the air during the night broadcasting reports that military units it said were standing by loyalist. It claimed support of the 1st Army stationed in Rio, the 4th Army in Recife and the 3rd Army in Porto Alegre.

In a statement to the nation, Goulart called for "the most vehement repudiation . . . of those who seek to install disorder and wound democratic institutions in a moment in which the federal government with the support of the people and the armed forces finds itself trying to direct peacefully the economic and social recuperation of the country."

Ailing War Minister Jair Dantas Ribeiro issued a communique from his hospital bed saying he was temporarily relinquishing command despite ill health. He promised that the military would act with "maximum energy against the rebels."

As prices rose on banks, the finance ministry ordered a three-day bank holiday.

Arraes issued a statement saying Goulart was trying to work out a peaceful solution to the present crisis.

"We are struggling to extinguish the climate of distrust fomented by groups who want to stop the reforms needed to solve the people's problems," he said.

RECIFE QUIET

The state capital of Recife was reported quiet, but as a protective measure, the governor's palace was placed under heavy guard.

Leaders of the rebellion insisted they are not trying to seize power but were determined to save Brazil from a Communist takeover.

De Barros said he and the people of Sao Paulo would never "permit Brazil to be robbed."

Kruel said his army was marching on Rio "to save the fatherland in danger, freeing it from the red yoke."

The rebellion, he said, was "aimed exclusively at neutralizing Communist subversion which has infiltrated a number of governmental organs, principally in action leadership, for the sole aim of seizing power."

Kruel said Brazil's outlawed Communist had recently "accelerated its activity" with the aid of Brazilians he described as badly advised. He also accused Goulart's government of enlisting the aid of "clearly leftist admirals" and during with the recent naval revolt.

The crisis has been building for months in inflation-plagued Brazil, where Goulart's conservative opponents claim he is trying to set up a dictatorship on the Castro order.

STATES AIM

Goulart says he is seeking reforms in Congress to speed land distribution to peasants, giving voting rights to 20,000,000 illiterate Brazilians and legalize Brazil's Communist party.

Educationists

program as one covering economics of the home, management of resources, child and family development and nutritional and health aspects of food consumption.

Miss Dean said the course should be obligatory for all pupils before they leave secondary school.

SEE JOBLESS?

The school health section of the OEA was told that would-be dropouts from secondary should be taken to a government unemployment office to see jobless men, most of whom left school too soon.

Mrs. Robert Farrell, president of the Toronto Home and School Council, told a panel discussion the students might also be shown a salary schedule of what educated and uneducated persons are paid, and lists of jobs available to each group.

Other panelists blamed parents who tell small ties and flout minor laws for anti-social behavior in children.

Dr. Edgar Wong, a psychiatrist with the Toronto department of public health, said the delinquency is a signal that there is an unhealthy condition in the family unit or the environment.

Michele Finney, a Grade 9 Toronto high school student, told the elementary teachers to More than high school teachers should listen to the children in their class.

NEED MORE CHANCE

She said children should be given more chance to express themselves and shouldn't be called non-conformists if they don't want to take part in all kinds of compulsory and non-compulsory sports and activities.

Dorothy Campbell, organizer and inspector of Ontario's school occupational program, said it is the second money spent on a machine shop in a school than on jails, juvenile courts and unemployment payments.

She told the headmasters' section it is also better to teach the slow student a skill than to keep him sitting through ordinary classes waiting only for his 16th birthday.

Dr. Z. S. Phimister, director of education in Toronto, advocated a national education office to aid biculturalism and developed vocational future as that of a hungry Oliver Twist, with bowl outstretched and asking for more.

NEED CHANGE

Arnold E. Keller, data processing expert from Wellesley Hospital, told high schools should be teaching commercial students about computers instead of manual typing and bookkeeping.

Dr. Norman C. Delarue, director of the Canadian Cancer Society, said teachers have a moral obligation to educate teen-agers on the health dangers of cigarette smoking.

Ray Spears, director of physical education for the Toronto board of education, said people listen to talk about the dangers of smoking but keep on smoking because they don't believe the doctors.

Dr. Kenneth D. Wann of Columbia University told the kindergarten section that teachers should make a greater effort to help children develop reasoning powers and concepts in today's confused and complex world.

Holiday

ators have been detained idly by the bitch in Commons affairs, Senator Grattan O'Leary (PC—Ontario) said he is "concerned with the spectacle that is being made of this house of Parliament."

It was a degradation and humiliation of Parliament to keep the Senate on call for the final spending estimates, Senator O'Leary said. There is no reason in the world to sit on, Good Friday.

"During the past few days people outside Parliament have been saying almost unanimously that Parliament has been a disgrace to our parliamentary institutions," said the senator, adding: "I think this is true."

He warned that he will resist in future any attempt to make the Senate a mere "rubber stamp" of the commons speedy acceptance of bills.

Senator John Connolly, government leader in the Senate, said unsuccessful efforts had been made to get the estimates bill to the Senate earlier.

The debate in the Commons began with the conclusion of a statement by Mr. Hays on various farm questions and a declaration by Justice Minister Favreau that he would meet a Conservative and NDP request for closer scrutiny into the shift of certain powers between Mr. Hays and Forestry Minister Sauve. This centres on whether Hays exercised certain powers between Feb. 3 and Feb. 26 that Hays exercised certain powers granted to Mr. Sauve.

It was on this pledge and on Mr. Hays' answers that Mr. Diefenbaker called off the Conservative blockade.

COVERS FIELD

Hays touched briefly on pending government revisions to farm credit and crop insurance, on purchases, sugar beets, mutton and cattle prices, which he said have firmed up above the comparable 1963 period.

He ended with the hope that Canadian farmers can extend their position as world suppliers of farm seed, both animal and vegetable, and particularly spruce up their hog quality.

Mr. Peters called for a detailed report on the Agricultural Rehabilitation and Development Act by Mr. Hays.

He said sugar prices are a major problem facing the housewife and the government should undertake a major sugar beet-growing program. Restrictions should be placed on the importation of cane sugar.

Mr. Peters, who represents a largely agricultural constituency, said summer-fallowed beets could be planted this spring to meet Canadian demand. However, the farmer needed a guarantee he could expect a return for his money, and there should be a subsidized floor price.

Many farmers, he suggested, would be pleased to turn from growing tobacco to sugar beets.

MacArthur's Condition Fast Deteriorating

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gen. Douglas MacArthur's condition has in general "deteriorated in the past 24 hours," Walter Reed Army Hospital announced today. But it said the general passed a "peaceful night."

A medical bulletin at 10:15 a.m. added that there has been a slight drop in the blood pressure and a moderate rise in the pulse rate" of the general and that his kidney function — a complicating factor in his present condition—has "diminished progressively over the past 24 hours."

As late as Tuesday night the doctors were paying tribute to the "strength and fibre" of the 84-year-old patient and reporting he was holding his own.

The condition of the general of the army has never risen above critical since his first emergency operation March 23, brought on by severe bleeding in his esophagus.

Certain Postal Rates Will Be Increased Today

OTTAWA (CP) — Certain postal rates, including the post-age on greeting cards and the cost of C.O.D. shipments, will be increased today.

But the abolition of the local delivery rates for first class mail, also originally scheduled for today, has not been approved by Parliament, and local sealed envelopes can still be delivered for four cents.

The changes that do go into effect today include these:

Printed matter and unsealed letter rate will be increased to three cents for the first two ounces, compared with two cents for the first two ounces—a rate set in 1951. This rate covers advertising material, unsealed greeting cards and most books when individually addressed.

A special rate of 2½ cents for the first two ounces will be established for large mailings, usually circulars, which are presorted by the mailer and made up according to postal regulations.

The new C.O.D. charges will range from a minimum 15 cents to 40 cents compared with the present range of 10 cents to 30 cents. The old rate was established in 1940.

It was not known when the abolition of local delivery rates for first class mails might become effective.

Pearson

cial control of such programs.

He also proposed that Quebec be allowed to "contract out"—that is, forgo federal grants in return for more taxing power in the case of the municipal winter works program, and health and hospital - construction grants.

Mr. Pearson's statement did not deal with tax transfers for individual provinces.

This is the present division of taxing powers:

Ottawa levies taxing room for the provinces, Ottawa abates its personal income rates by 16 per cent this year, this rising by one percentage point a year to 20 per cent in 1965—final year of the current five - year agreement.

GET OTHER TAXES

In addition, the provinces also get about 22 per cent of corporation income taxes and 75 per cent of death duties, or estate taxes.

The prime minister's proposal would increase the personal income tax abatements for any province that wants to contract out. The abatement would be worth about as much to the province as the present federal grants.

In the case of hospital insurance — the costliest of all the joint programs, estimated to cost Ottawa alone about $430,-000,000 in the fiscal year starting today—Mr. Pearson said the extra abatement would have to be "in the order of 12 or 13 per cent" for the provinces as a whole.

Added to this would be the abatement for the four welfare programs, which Mr. Pearson said should be treated as a group. Outside the conference, a federal official said this abatement would be in the neighborhood of six per cent of personal income tax.

However, immediate action was proposed for the joint welfare schemes. Mr. Pearson said this should be put until after a scheduled May conference of federal and provincial welfare ministers.

—Meanwhile, any abatement system for other big expenditure joint programs — Mr. Pearson singled out only some of those in education, hospitals — would probably amount to only one or two per cent of personal income tax, officials said.

All told, then, the provincial share could become about 40 per cent. The extra per cent would produce, on the basis of existing tax rates and yields, about $800,000,000 for the provinces.

Mr. Lesage wants more and his opening brief Tuesday to the conference underlined his insistence that the abatements and big shared-cost programs should be completely separated from the regular fiscal share.

His government's own Economics Council has also urged again referred to Quebec's "demand" for 25 per cent of personal and corporation income tax fields, and the sole right to all death duties.

By his own estimate, the abatements would run to about 40 per cent of personal income taxes for the shared-cost fields he seeks to recover. Thus, he wants a total of 65 per cent of them.

Added to this would be another three per cent—up to 68—that Premier Lesage wants in powers and income getting the federal government's proposed extension of $10 monthly family allowances for 15- and 17-year-olds still in school. Quebec has a similar plan of its own already—and wants to keep it.

TAKES HARDER LINE

Mr. Lesage also said Quebec wants some compensation for "fiscal room" — obviously he was referring to the long term of ex-premier Maurice Duplessis — when Quebec stayed out of joint programs, on constitutional grounds. He didn't suggest a formula for such compensation or put a dollar figure on it.

Premier Robarts, meanwhile, also took a much harder line than in the plenary conference in Ottawa last November.

His brief cited Ontario's "impressive record of individual revenue." Ontario "must have additional revenues."

Premier Robarts didn't say what percentage he has in mind, in saying "we trust" that before the conference ends—probably Thursday—there will be a federal undertaking for a "more equitable allocation" of tax revenues to the provinces.

Besides the opening plan, Mr. Robarts was cautious.

He said Mr. Pearson's proposals would have to be examined carefully and in the light of national interest. He recalled that Ontario already has a large surplus—a system of block or "departmental" grants—that is, federal grants covering one broad field of services, leaving the provinces free to spend the funds as local needs require.

Outboard Marine Corp. Stays In Peterboro

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Outboard Marine Corporation of Canada announced Tuesday it plans to install $100,000 worth of equipment this year to manufacture snow tires here.

The company said it expects to spend $1,500,000 in the first year of full-scale production scheduled to begin in September.

The announcement came after a statement in the House of Commons in Ottawa Tuesday by Industry Minister Drury that he will "see what personal efforts can be employed to stop an Ontario manufacturing company from moving to the United States.

Fred Stenson, (PC Peterborough), asked in the Commons whether Mr. Drury would go to Peterborough in an attempt to forestall the impending move of Fisher Gage Company. He said the firm is moving because of the sales tax on production machinery.

Rod Webb, (PC Hastings-Frontenac) asked whether Mr. Drury was aware that Outboard Marine of Canada, another Peterborough firm, had said it will move its production of snowmobiles to the U.S. because of the federal tax policy.

Mr. Drury said he was not aware of this.

Thomas McMillan, vice-president and general manager of Outboard Marine, said Tuesday the plant will "import snowmobile engines from its parent plant in the U.S. for the first year."

"But we'll be making our own components-parts for engines next year and general manufacturing that complete unit in Peterborough," he said.

Mr. McMillan said the Peterborough plant will supply its parent plant in Waukegan, Ill., with snowmobiles.

Personal Disarmament May Be Answer to Cyprus Crisis But How Can It Be Done?

NICOSIA (CP) — In a green and sunny land, rifles and food, bombs; a drunken burst of gunfire in the bemist night; a deserted village, its sand, hoeing pillaged and burned; a shepherd's body found in a well.

Cyprus is murder island.

But perhaps it is not as murderous as it seems. Hate between Greek- and Turkish-Cypriot flares in sudden violence and then subsides as quickly. The guerrilla war stops at dusk. It may resume in the morning but in another village far away.

On Cyprus, then, murder is sporadic when, in the last few months, it might well have become general butchery.

The Greeks, at great cost, could commit genocide because they number more than 450,000 compared with the Turkish population of 105,000. But though they have committed their share of the atrocities, it is also true that the Turks have sometimes deliberately provoked what are called here "shooting incidents."

WOULD FEEL OBLIGED

Turkey would not only feel obliged to rescue her kin in Cyprus but she will not stand for a hostile government in a country which nestles in her very armpit. Cyprus is only 40 miles from the Turkish coast. The Cyprus panhandle points like a dagger into the belly of Turkey.

What baffles the newcomer to Cyprus is the apathy of the Turks should start killing each other after centuries of refraining from war. The answer is that Cypriots have always lived under the rule of foreigners — Assyrians, Egyptians, Ottomans, Venetians, Turks and Britons, to name a few—who could impose their will and stamp out civil strife.

What can the United Nations do in the present chaotic situation?

It would seem that the UN must try to persuade both sides to give up their most extreme positions; that is, that the Greeks agree not to eliminate the Turks by murder or forced emigration to Turkey, and that the Turks forgo their constitutional veto. The Turkish veto would be roughly comparable with the Italian community in Canada having the power to veto all acts of the Canadian Parliament.

The British-Cypriots now see the UN as their protection and the means whereby their original position in the government will be restored.

SEES UN AS SHIELD

The Greeks look on the UN as their shield against any intervention from Turkey.

Thus the UN has to be most circumspect lest she make the peace force is not used in the interests of either side.

Then the lines between sporadic murder and mass killing is fine. For a time, it was feared that the fragile thread might snap. This fear is receding somewhat with the presence of the UN.

But in the meantime, a man with a rifle standing on a street corner is as common here as a man in Canada standing on a street corner with a shovel.

There are Greek, Turkish and British roadblocks throughout the island and here communication has broken down. A weapon is the common denominator.

It is unlikely that the rule of law will prevail until, somehow, there is general disarmament. How this will be achieved, nobody knows.

Partisian Politics Fought On High Plane at Parley

QUEBEC (CP)—Partisan politics are being fought here on a high plane at the current federal-provincial premiers conference.

While the participants would shy away from the adjective partisan, it is clear that the main divisions are between Tribbe of the Liberal and Conservative parties, and between the federal and provincial levels of politics.

That may come out of the conference at the end of the week under dispute may well affect the outcome of the subsequent elections in the federal or provincial fields.

For instance: Premier John Robarts of Ontario—who has been spokes of as a possible federal leader of the Progressive Conservatives—has been under something of a political cloud, the disparagement that resulted from his government's recent introduction of stern Police Act amendments in the Ontario legislature that later had to be withdrawn.

But backgrounding Mr. Robarts' participation in this conference is his long-standing dispute with Ottawa whether or not Ontario should participate in the federally-sponsored Canada Pension Plan, or operate its own previously-enacted provincial plan to supervise private pensions insurance schemes.

TAKES STAND

At noon Tuesday it was revealed that Mr. Robarts had told the conference that no province should be left in a position that would be criticized for having scuttled the Canada Pensions Plan if it stood aloof, after another province — with federal government acquiescence — announced its intention to stay aloof on the basis of a yet-to-be-passed provincial plan.

In essence, what Mr. Robarts was saying was, that Ontario shouldn't be criticized for staying out of the Canada Pension Plan because of its provinciallyapproved scheme of private pensions plans, after Quebec had been given a federal nod for starting out similarly because of the adoption of a resolution favoring a provincial universal contributory pensions scheme, not yet enacted in detail.

The immediate conference corridor reaction to this move by Mr. Robarts was an assumption that he had pulled the political rug from under the Parti Social Liberal government at Ottawa by putting it on the spot. It seemingly had appeased Liberal Premier Jean Lesage's standoffishness on the Canada Pensions Plan, while disapproving conservative Premier Roberts' same stand-offishness.

Then at the end of the day's meeting, Mr. Robarts and Pearson said on behalf of the Liberal government at Ottawa that he fully supported the principle of Mr. Roberts' position—that all provinces had not only equal rights, but equal opportunity to exercise their rights. Now the question raised among the politicians is how will the rug ruffle from under whom?

Parliament At a Glance

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

TUESDAY, March 31, 1964

Northern Affairs Minister Laing said the B.C. government has been asked for an assessment of tidal wave damage in two stricken centres.

All party leaders offered congratulatory remarks on the 15th anniversary of Newfoundland's entry into Confederation.

Justice Minister Favreau declined to confirm or deny press reports of special security measures at the start of provincial conference in Quebec.

Paul Martineau (PC—Pontiac - Temiscamingue) and Theogene Ricard (PC — St. Lawrence) urged the federal justice department comment on the reports.

Finance Minister Gordon said the intended to return to clear his name.

Toronto authorities learned early Tuesday from interpol, the international police organization, that Resnick was leaving Israel for all unknown destination. Later they learned he was headed for New York.

BUILDS BRIDGE

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP)—After arguing about it for a century, Auckland built a bridge across its harbor five years ago to link the two halves of the city. Experts estimated it would carry 8,100 vehicles a day by 1970. Already, the number exceeds 21,000 a day.

THEY NEARLY MADE IT! Mayor Jack Ellis and city council took time out yesterday to honor Mac White — getting handshakes — and his Belleville rink who set an Ontario curling finals record Monday. Also at ceremony, Mrs. Heather White, Roy Benn and Mrs. Agnes Benn, recipients of gifts from city.

Toronto Refers School Budget Back to Board

TORONTO (CP)—City council Tuesday instructed board of control to arrange a meeting between council, Premier John Roberts and Ontario Education Minister William Davis over the 1964 capital estimates of Toronto board of education.

The council referred the $53,642 budget back to board of control Tuesday, although Mayor Philip Givens said council was powerless when it comes to education costs.

The estimates, approved by the Metropolitan Toronto school board, provide for the construction or replacement of seven schools in Toronto and additions or renovations to six existing schools.

Controller Allan Lamport announced the fact that municipal councils have no control over expenditures for education.

Toronto Lawyer Held on Nine Theft Charges

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto lawyer Lionel Resnick, 43, was arrested here Tuesday and charged with nine counts of theft and one count of having stepped from a plane at Toronto International Airport.

Police said the money involved total $184,000.

Resnick flew to Israel last week and returned here Tuesday on a flight from New York. He was taken into custody on a warrant issued after he went to Israel, charging him with theft from a former client.

Resnick was disbarred by the Law Society of Upper Canada after creditors claimed after he left Canada that he owed them $400,000.

The lawyer was also involved in a controversy over the sale in Toronto of Woodsworth House, former headquarters of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation.

Resnick, with his wife and three children, arrived in Israel May 8 and investigations into his affairs began three weeks later.

The lawyer said last October he intended to return to clear his name.

The federal view is that even by giving up a sizable slice of the international police organization, that Resnick was leaving Israel for all unknown destination. Later they learned he was headed for New York.

BUILDS BRIDGE

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP)—After arguing about it for a century, Auckland built a bridge across its harbor five years ago to link the two halves of the city. Experts estimated it would carry 8,100 vehicles a day by 1970. Already, the number exceeds 21,000 a day.

Pearson Plan for Welfare, Hospital Insurance Likely To Kindle Political Fires

QUEBEC (CP) — The Pearson plan to allow some or all of the provinces to raise their own taxes to pay for hospital insurance and welfare programs—instead of relying on federal grants to meet half the costs, as they all do now—is certain to kindle new fires in both federal and provincial politics.

It was seen by some delegates to the federal-provincial conference here as a new test of Canadian federalism.

On one hand, the provinces—if they wish—could reclaim a large part of their constitutional responsibilities, to use as they see fit. One fear expressed here was that it could lead to "balkanization"—instead of one standard of services, a hodge-podge with changes at each provincial boundary.

The other question is that of federal control over the economy—a control which Finance Minister Gordon said in his March 16 budget speech must remain "strong and dynamic."

It is understood that the provinces, which now have about one-fifth of the personal income tax field, would need twice that amount — 40 per cent — to finance the programs most eligible for the non-profit, universal hospital insurance, a group of welfare schemes, and a few minor programs such as forestry work.

IS IT POSSIBLE?

Could Ottawa give up that much and still have effective control over the economy—that is the problem that Mr. Gordon's economy by manipulating tax rates?

"Certainly," Mr. Gordon said in a corridor interview after Tuesday's sessions here. But when asked how much further Ottawa could go without losing this control, the minister said only that he did not want to start discussing numbers.

At present, the provinces' 18 per cent share of the personal income tax yields them about $400,000,000. This will rise to 20 per cent in 1966. The federal share this year—40 per cent—produces about $2,100,000,000.

The federal view is that even by giving up a sizable slice of the international police organization, that Resnick was leaving Israel for all unknown destination. Later they learned he was headed for New York.

MIGHT MEAN CHANGE

It is conceivable that the report of the Carter royal commission on taxation could lead to even less federal reliance on income taxes, and more on indirect taxation — its constitutional right—of production or sales, which respond more quickly to changes in rates.

The federal Conservative party is apparently against the shift in responsibility. Speaking for the party last fall, ex-agriculture minister Alvin Hamilton said federal withdrawal from joint plans would be a "retreat from the concept of federalism." It could see Canada revert to "a league of independent states."

Said New Democratic Leader T. C. Douglas: "It will not help the provinces solve their problems if we concede the federal government of the fiscal authority it needs to lead this country along the road toward prosperity and economic well-being."

Despite Red China's Latest Blast, Nikita Still Strong

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Communist China's latest blast against Soviet Premier Khrushchev, calling for a Communist revolt against his leadership, has led to widespread speculation that some form of showdown between Moscow and Peking is imminent.

But informed diplomats who have been watching this ideological boxing match from the beginning advise that it would be a wrong interpretation to suggest that Khrushchev has gone to Hungary to whip the satellites into a frenzy against Mao Tse-tung or to announce a complete split with the Mao regime.

After all, they say, how would Khrushchev's power benefit from an attempt to force China out of the Communist camp, or disgrace? In the first place, China simply is too big to ignore and in the second place, an attempt to oust her from the club would simply mean establishment of two fixed Communist orbits, each competing for new members.

Some specialists suggest this in fact is what is happening but others, perhaps a bit more knowledgeable, note that the fire between Moscow and Peking is mostly verbal: that Khrushchev is still much in the forefront and that Mao is still a long way in the backfield.

The best Khrushchev can do, they maintain, is to continue his efforts to draw the Chinese back into line, even if this means swallowing his pride and placating the dragon that spits fire.

In labelling Khrushchev with revisionism and Trotskyism among other names shocking to Communist ears, China is well aware of the alternatives Khrushchev has. In these cases Khrushchev would gain nothing by a complete break with Peking. Tse-tung or to announce a complete split with the Mao regime.

Rather, they say, he would be a real servile army from which other provinces have withdrawn.

DOESN'T DISPUTE RIGHT

Mr. Robarts did not dispute the right of any province, or province, to elect to stay out of the federal service. This was within its right in the spirit of "co-operative federalism."

However, Ontario felt that co-operative federalism referred to a system under which some provinces joined federal approval to contract out of services, while others which did so were accused of "breaking up Confederation."

Ontario's own pension legislation has been on the books for about a year, but Premier Robarts has delayed implementing it to avoid a conflict with the federal scheme.

The Ontario legislation would not put the province into the pension business, but would set up administrements for private pension plans.

Jobless Fund Will Run Dry By End of Week

OTTAWA (CP)—The government lost the power to lend money to the unemployment insurance fund at midnight Tuesday, thus placing its reliance on parliamentary approval of new lending authority before the fund possibly runs dry at the end of the week.

A reliable source said it was decided not to set under powers granted for the 1963-64 fiscal year that started today.

An item in the final appropriations bill for the old fiscal year —still being debated in the Commons—extends the government's authority to make temporary loans to the fund from which benefits are paid to the unemployed.

With only about $17,500,000 in the kitty, the fund faced the prospect of being unable to meet the claims for benefits unless it obtained a federal loan of $10,000,000 or $12,000,000.

In the past, the fund has been empt from time to time borrowed from the government, repaying the loans when employer-employee contributions exceeded benefit payments in periods of high employment.

Pension Plan Could Operate Without Ontario and Quebec Opinion of Premier Robarts

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Robarts said Tuesday he sees no reason why the federal government's pension plan could not operate without both Ontario and Quebec.

He made this comment to reporters after telling the federal-provincial conference to effect that the federal government should not attempt to force the proposed Canada Pension Plan on Ontario against its will.

Mr. Roberts said later this should not be interpreted as meaning Ontario would not participate in the pension scheme. The content of his statement referred not only to pensions but to other federal services, he said.

But the Conservative premier made it plain Ontario does not feel pledged at present to participate in the federal pension plan. Asked by reporters whether Ontario would ever take part, he declined to answer.

"I couldn't express an opinion one way or another at the moment," he said. Ontario's reaction would not be assessed until it had a chance to study the federal pension bill section by section.

TO MAKE OBJECTIONS?

Premier Robarts is expected to present today a detailed outline of his objections to the proposed pension plan.

It was learned Mr. Robarts will not say one way or the other whether Ontario will attempt to stay out of the federal pension scheme, even if the Ontario premier Feb. 25.

The letter was in answer to one Mr. Robarts sent Mr. Pearson stating Ontario's position on the plan. Mr. Robarts objected principally to the federal pension plan's short maturity period, and to what he said was the disparity in relationship between contributions and benefits.

In reply, Mr. Pearson indicated he was puzzled by some of the Ontario premier's comments. He turned down a suggestion by Mr. Robarts that the federal pension scheme be studied by a committee independent of parliament.

Mr. Roberts did not reply to Mr. Pearson's letter.

Quebec premier Lesage said it will go ahead with its own pension scheme and thus will be exempt from the federal one. Premier Robarts, asked whether a federal plan would be applied in Quebec if it opted out, replied "Yes, I see no reason why it couldn't be."

His statement to the federal-provincial conference referred indirectly to Quebec's decision to remain outside the plan. The federal government could not logically grant this exemption to one province and refuse to reject if other provinces follow suit, he said.

Premier Roberts has denied attempting to block the federal pension plan. But he has been severely critical of some of its provisions, and has maintained that his objections have gone unheeded by Ottawa.

He has asked that the federal pension legislation be referred to an independent committee. Prime Minister Pearson has refused this, saying the pension bill will go before a committee of Parliament.

Ontario premier stopped short Tuesday of saying Ontario would not participate in the plan. But he warned the federal government against attempting to "coerce" some provinces into taking part in a federal service from which other provinces have withdrawn.

DOESN'T DISPUTE RIGHT

Mr. Robarts did not dispute the right of any province, or province, to elect to stay out of the federal service. This was within its right in the spirit of "co-operative federalism."

However, Ontario felt that co-operative federalism referred to a system under which some provinces joined federal approval to contract out of services, while others which did so were accused of "breaking up Confederation."

Ontario's own pension legislation has been on the books for about a year, but Premier Robarts has delayed implementing it to avoid a conflict with the federal scheme.

The Ontario legislation would not put the province into the pension business, but would set up administrements for private pension plans.

- Federal officials say that because the Ontario plan would not be available to every person in the province, the proposed federal plan would be applicable in Ontario. If Ontario was to provide a universally-available plan, it could — like Quebec — remain out of the federal scheme.

To this, Premier Robarts replied Tuesday:

"It is imperative that when one province contracts out of a federal plan, each of the other provinces should be able to reach its own decision as to whether or not it will participate in accordance with its own assessment of its special needs.

The Ontario premier said the real purpose of the federal-provincial conference was to discuss the responsibility between the two levels of government for cost-sharing programs.

The conditions attached to these programs by the federal government were too rigid and restrictive, Mr. Roberts suggested the federal government commit itself to cost-sharing in various broad fields of government endeavor.

The provincial governments then could decide how to direct specific expenditures within this broad range. This would still leave the federal government with some control over how its funds were spent.

He mentioned one of the main objections to these programs is their possible intrusion into the realm of provincial jurisdiction and the obvious desire of some provinces to handle these matters themselves," Mr. Roberts said.

He spoke as Quebec's desire to preserve its language and institutions.

If Quebec consistently were to contract out of federal services, regarding them as a threat to its way of life, the result would be the isolation of Quebec from the rest of Canada.

"That does not a wedge between us," Premier Roberts said. "It would make for disunion rather than union."

Resolving the problem of federal incursion into such fields as health, welfare, forestry and education must be one of the main purposes of the federal-provincial conference, he said.

Ontario Raises About 45 P. C. Of Tax Revenue

QUEBEC (CP)—The federal government now raises about 45 per cent of its tax revenues in Ontario but makes only about 30 per cent of its expenditures there.

Quebec, on the other hand, receives about 25 per cent of federal tax revenues. But Quebec gets slightly more—about 27 per cent—of all federal spending.

These figures are drawn from a federal government study of "selected" federal revenues and expenditures, made available to the provinces at the heads-of-government conference here Tuesday.

The statistics are far from complete. Expenditures include equalization payments, conditional and unconditional grants to the provinces, welfare payments to their people, university grants, and grants in lieu of municipal taxes. On the revenue side, such federal taxes and death duties are counted.

This is the end result in percentages of federal revenues and expenditures by provinces:

	Revenue	Spend.
Newfoundland	1.08	3.95
Prince Edward Island	.38	.91
Nova Scotia	2.07	3.36
New Brunswick	1.53	4.46
Quebec	25.23	27.36
Ontario	44.84	30.10
Manitoba	4.40	5.33
Saskatchewan	2.97	4.31
Alberta	7.35	6.79
British Columbia	10.38	10.62

Vancouver's Teens Take Problems to Dept. Store!

VANCOUVER (CP) — The idea that a teen-age girl often finds it easier to talk about personal problems with a stranger has led to expanded services by Vancouver department stores.

Their beauty, charm and personality courses are, in some cases, developing into full-fledged counselling departments.

"Almost everyone who comes needs to come," says Barbara Winkler, fashion co-ordinator for Eaton's. "Their problems are more easily dealt with by a stranger. Their questions are the ones they're embarrassed to ask at home."

The curriculum encompasses subjects as personal as behavior on dates, figure correction and shyness, to say nothing of the whole problem of wardrobe, cosmetics and grooming.

Mrs. Winkler, Gail McKenzie at Woodwards and Miss Sylvia at the Hudson's Bay store oversee courses that give instruction every year to more than 1,000 teen-age girls.

Each program is stamped with the personality of its author. Mrs. Winkler, for example, declares herself "dead against the phoniness that is so often associated with modelling and charm courses."

SEEK INNER POISE

Her junior deb course for girls under 17 had 100 students in three classes last fall, emphasizing character development and establishing self-confidence.

"We want inner poise. We want the girls to be thinking about things and not appearance."

Complexion problems are discussed. Wardrobe planning, grooming and hair styling, courtesy and manners complete the curriculum. Because Mrs. Winkler doesn't want the girls preoccupied with makeup, this subject isn't stressed.

She likes to think she has improved on charm schools she has studied in Eastern Canada, schools that do not strike her as being thorough enough.

Gail McKenzie takes girls 13 to 18 and places more emphasis on modelling, winding up each course with a fashion show. Individual advice is her forte.

LIKE SHEEP

"So often they tend to follow each other like sheep," she says. "You know, if one wears boots then the other does, too, even if her legs are too fat for them. That's what we try to overcome. We want each girl to know and do what is best for her."

Miss Sylvia's program, with courses for 900 a year, includes a senior school for girls 18 to 25 and a junior school for the 13- to 14-year groups.

In the younger group she passes a box for questions and often stays after class for private conferences.

Hudson's Bay also conducts a fashion course for 18 girls chosen by the personnel department. This group discusses fabrics, home furnishings and school fashions. The girls work part time in the downtown store and put on shows under Miss Sylvia's direction.

Income Tax Explained

By A. C. MILLER

A claim for foster parents can sometimes create a problem for the taxpayer, as in many cases that the writer has handled, the taxpayer was not exactly sure as to whom the income tax department considered foster parents.

Foster parents are the persons who raised the taxpayer from a child and paid his maintenance and education costs, and such child was entirely dependent on them. Now when the payer has grown up and is employed, with the foster parents depending on him for their support, he has a right to claim exemption for them if their income is less than $2650 each.

Where many taxpayers go wrong is when the foster parents were his aunt and uncle, he will claim them as such instead of as foster parents. If he claims them as an aunt and uncle he would have such claim deleted as there is no allowance for aunts and uncles, but there is a perfectly legitimate claim for them as foster parents.

If the taxpayer is single, he is allowed a $1,000 on one as equivalent to married status and $500 for the second. If he is married, he can claim $550 each for them.

It has been ruled that foster parents do not have to be of opposite sexes. In the case where two aunts raised a nephew with one of them working while the other stayed home to look after the child and run the house, the taxpayer may claim both of them when they become dependent on him in later years. In such cases full details should be given on the return.

For personal replies pertaining to income tax problems, please enclose a self - addressed five-cent stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin for each question you wish answered.

QUESTION: My parents died when I was 16. I went to live with a widowed aunt. She was the trustee of my parents estate and made all necessary disbursements for my education up to the time I received the inheritance. Can I claim her now as a foster parent?

ANSWER: No. It does not appear you were entirely dependent on her for support.

QUESTION: I never knew my parents. I was raised by a childless couple but never legally adopted. I use my own name, (not theirs). I now support them. Can I claim them as foster parents?

ANSWER: Yes, if their income is less than $650 each.

Students Aid Cripple Plan

HALIFAX (CP) — Fifteen girls at Dalhousie University are working to fill a gap which in the Atlantic provinces has hampered health services assisting in the recovery of victims of crippling sickness.

The girls enrolled last fall in Dalhousie's new school of physiotherapy. They should be ready to go to work by the fall of 1963.

They are learning the specialized physical exercises a patient needs to recover from the aftermath of a variety of mishaps and diseases, ranging from a broken leg to infantile paralysis.

The provincial governments and hospitals in the Atlantic provinces, to ensure a supply of trained physiotherapists, have offered a number of scholarships, available to girls with senior matriculation.

Mrs. Patricia Wells, the school's senior lecturer, says the first group of students "have applied themselves very well to the work and are making excellent progress."

The course involves study of functional anatomy, therapy of movement and medical physics, which teaches the uses of electricity and mechanics as part of diagnosis and treatment.

After completing the course, the girls will serve as interns for five months.

He's a Growing Boy

George, believed one of Britain's smallest babies, was just over a foot long and weighed only 23 ounces. He dropped to 19 ounces before beginning to put on fat.

Now a big boy of seven pounds, three ounces, George has at last left the maternity hospital and has been taken to his Glasgow home by his parents, Andrew Mitchell, 25, and his 20-year-old wife Helen.

"We've missed many of the thrills of the first few months of a baby's life," says Andrew. Helen adds: "I've been a mother for seven months but it hasn't seemed " was one until now."

George nearly made it out of hospital twice before. But just before Christmas, when he weighed in at five pounds, the weather turned wintry, and then two months later, at six pounds, he caught a bad cold.

Slim Chance of Tax Concessions, Quebec Turns to Joint Programs

By JOHN TORSTON

QUEBEC (CP) — Two main questions — more tax sources and federal - provincial programs—will be on the minds of the Quebec delegation at the federal-provincial fiscal conference opening here March 31.

Observers here see little chance of Quebec getting more tax sources from Ottawa, immediately, and they expect most of Quebec's efforts will be concentrated on joint programs.

In this field financed jointly by Ottawa and the provinces, the federal treasury now spends some $300,000,000 a year. Prime Minister Pearson has indicated willingness to go at least part way to meet Quebec's urging that Ottawa withdraw from many of these areas.

At the coming meeting, Quebec will propose mechanisms by which a province would be able to remain out of a federal-provincial plan but still get financial compensation.

The idea already has been submitted to federal authorities at a meeting of high provincial and federal civil servants in Ottawa earlier this year.

OPPOSITION IS OLD

Quebec's opposition to federal - provincial programs is long-standing. The former Union Nationale administration stayed out of them. Shortly after taking over the government in 1960, Premier Lesage announced his regime would enter them—to get the money—but continued to oppose them in principle and promised to get Quebec out of them.

The provincial government recessed last when Ottawa sets up a joint plan, it is not necessarily considered with provincial needs in mind. Quebec would rather establish its own priorities.

But until it can get out of these plans without losing financially, Quebec will continue to go along.

Premier Lesage is expected to push for more tax sources; though it appears unlikely he will achieve objectives for which he has set April 5 as a deadline. On that date in 1963, he set a one-year period for getting for the province one-quarter of personal and corporation income taxes and all succession duties.

The provincial share of income taxes — currently 23 per cent of corporation taxes and 17 per cent of personal—was not changed at the November conference, but the provinces had their share of death taxes increased to 75 per cent from 50. By prior agreement, the personal tax share rises to 30 per cent by 1966.

In his April 5, 1963, statement — in his budget speech—Mr. Lesage spoke of Quebec's "minimum demands" though his brief to the last fiscal conference referred to "requests."

Quebec sent a bill for $150,000,000 from Ottawa. It got $43,500,000, most of this in higher equalization payments, though it included some $8,000,000 expected in the additional death duties.

Muckle Hither - - Mickle Seed!

GLASGOW (CP) — Scotland boasts miles and miles of heather, but there isn't a seed to be bought in the land.

This situation came to light recently when a United States firm sent an order for seeds of "calluna vulgaris" — common purple heather.

Finally some seeds were discovered in London, but the English firm charged £32 a pound. Even worse, its seeds came from Germany.

The reason seed cannot be obtained in Scotland, experts explained, is that the growing season is too short and seeds are too difficult to collect.

There is only one seed a flower and it is estimated that only about one in every 10,000 will grow.

Time Is Money - - Even in Jail

WINNIPEG (CP) — Prisoners earned $9,063 last year at a work-and-save minimum security institution in the northern Manitoba bush.

The provincial attorney-general's department, which operates the Cache Lake camp, says the men get paid 70 cents a day on a six-day week basis.

They clear bush for access roads and open up and clean sites for tourist campers. These, and other, tasks are assigned by the provincial forestry service.

All the "trainees" at Cache Lake—which has a capacity of 50, plus six supervisory personnel—are volunteers serving terms of less than two years in the nearby Dauphin jail.

The men are permitted to keep 25 cents of their daily stipend to spend in the camp commissary. The remainder is kept in trust and given to them on their release.

The road also have planted close to 100,000 spruce seedlings in a reforestation program.

Attorney - General Stewart MacLean says the men also provide a ready force to fight forest fires in the area if they are needed.

Making Pearls Proves No Work for Slouches

By HAL BOYLE

Making a pearl isn't easy for an oyster. It's hard work.

Some years ago Japanese growers succeeded in stimulating oysters into growing as many as five pearls each, but then had to quit. The popped-up oysters either died or produced low-quality pearls.

Bearded lady: In ancient Egypt the people were clean-shaven but worshipped bearded gods . . . On state occasions Queen Hatshepsut wore a false beard of gold as a sign that, like all Pharaohs, she was of divine origin.

Cold weather tip: If you suffer frostbitten fingers or toes, don't rub them with snow. That's old-fashioned. Doctors now recommend carefully washing the frigid digits with warm water and soap.

Fiscal fireworks: A Maryland survey once found that 19 per cent of the fishermen caught 81 per cent of the fish, 53 per cent of the fishermen caught the remaining 54 per cent of the fish, and the remaining 37 per cent of the fishermen iked about the big ones that got away . . .

News guard: Your sense of smell is your best protection against the deadly food poisoning called botulism. If an item of food smells spoiled, don't eat it.

Main drag: Manhattan brags about its Broadway but has no monopoly on the name. At least 37 U.S. cities and towns—and some 1,900 villages—have a main thoroughfare called Broadway.

Nature notes: A kangaroo is born with its eyes closed and its mouth open . . . The chimpanzee, which pound for pound is several times stronger than man, seldom lives longer than 15 years in captivity . . . The common garden snail has 14,175 teeth arranged in 135 rows, each containing 105 teeth — so wouldn't you hate to be a snail's dentist?

B. C. Eyes Growing Pacific Marts -Wharves Expansion Is Spurred

VANCOUVER (CP)—With an eye on growing markets around the Pacific for British Columbia's natural resources, two wharfingers here are expanding facilities at an unprecedented rate.

Vancouver Wharves Ltd., established with a new terminal in North Vancouver four years ago for $2,200,000, has since increased investment to $5,000,000.

Pacific Coast Terminals Ltd., which was started the same spring, recently set a record for its Port Moody dock, loading more than 22,000 long-tons of coal aboard the freighter Kanlaka Jayanti in a 24-hour period. The coal destined for hungry Japanese mills would fill 500 rail cars.

Both companies have developed bulk-loading facilities, a system of carrying material directly from railcars or storage to a ship's hold via a conveyor belt.

Last year more than 2,000,000 tons of coal, copper concentrates, sulphur and other commodities were exported to Japan through Vancouver bulk-loading facilities.

Without such equipment, much of this material could not have been "economically" moved, for example, from the Kootenay coal fields to tidewater.

Pacific Coast Bulk Terminals would have made it uneconomical to load by conventional methods.

MOBILE EQUIPMENT

Pacific Coast Bulk Terminals was an offshoot of Pacific Coast Terminals Ltd., which has operated general cargo-loading facilities in New Westminster since 1929.

"We went into bulk loading," a company official said, "because of the general trend of world trade and the possibility of bulk commodities of Canadian origin being exported into world markets."

Both companies have added refinements to their original system in their continuing efforts to reduce cost and speedup the loading process.

At Pacific Coast, the conveyor belt carries material to a floating shiploader, a crane-like structure which is swung over the ship's hold and drops the load into the hatch. The shiploader can be quickly floated along the length of the ship, making it possible to load through all the hatches without moving the freighter.

At Vancouver Wharves, the two shiploaders in operation are also mobile but move on tracks laid along the dock.

Both terminals use automatic trimming equipment which balances the load as it pours into a ship's hold, thereby eliminating the need for manual trimming.

Officials of both companies say they plan still further expansion.

It's Spiked Snow Tires For Future

HALIFAX (CP) — Tires equipped with spikes or studs to give better traction on ice or snow are the tires of the future, says Hans Larsson, president of Volvo (Canada) Ltd.

Mr. Larsson says the spiked tires are being tested by Volvo and that his personal car has been equipped with them. He says he has never become stuck since he began using them.

Tires fitted with carbon or tungsten spikes are used extensively for winter driving in Scandinavian countries and recently a company in Toronto began fitting the spikes to tires.

Mr. Larsson says that although the spiked tires are expensive in Canada now, the price should drop as they become more widely used and production increases.

At present in Canada, the spikes, which can be fitted to most tires, cost 11 cents each, including installation. As many as from 150 to 400 spikes are used in each tire, depending on the size and weight of the car for which they are used and the amount of traction desired. The wear rate of the spikes on dry pavement is about the same as for the rubber in the tire.

Mr. Larsson says cars equipped with spiked tires can stop on sheet ice in less than half the distance ordinarily required by cars equipped only with snow tires.

Mr. Larsson says the Volvo assembly plant at nearby Dartmouth will begin turning out the PV-544 model in June. Currently, the plant is producing the two and four-door Canadian models and the Volvo station wagon. The PV-544 model resembles a 1949 Ford.

ON THE MOVE

LONDON (CP) — Britain's first "mobile petrol station"—road tankers with gasoline pumps built on the back—are to come into service next week. They are being introduced by European Petroleum, one of the smaller independent companies, to operate in areas dominated by the major oil groups.

Building of Harpsichords Flourishing in Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP)—An old-world craft, the manufacture of harpsichords, is flourishing in modern Vancouver.

The harpsichord is a stringed musical instrument played from a keyboard. It originated in the 14th century, but in later years was crowded out of popularity by the piano.

It still has its admirers, however, and craftsmen to cater to the diehard band of harpsichord lovers.

Six United States firms make harpsichords, but the Sabastill instruments are so highly regarded that they are in constant export demand. Last year, the Sabastills made 30 harpsichords in their workshop, 25 of them for sale in the U.S.

The instruments are priced from $600 to $3,000, depending on the number of keyboards. There are either one or two and each can have 54 or 61 keys.

Simon started making pianos and harpsichords in his native Czechoslovakia when he was 14. Sigurd started working for him while still a schoolboy.

When Sigurd arrived here in 1939, his luggage consisted of three harpsichords. He began selling the instruments, was "overwhelmed by such a wave of optimism" that he sent for his parents in 1940. Father and son have been a going concern since.

Local materials are used to manufacture the instruments, with the exception of the keyboard, a highly technical and specialized device which is imported from Germany.

The Land of 'Fair Cows,' Informal Votes, Laybys

By J. C. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP) — "It's a fair cow when a cow cockie buys a paddock in the bosky on the layby but the aerial topdressing joker goes crook."

This is a statement that probably could be fully understood only by someone who has lived in New Zealand.

A rough translation would be: "It's a nuisance when a farmer buys a field in the depths of the country on time payments but the airwork pilot objects to dropping fertiliser on it."

Attention has been turned to distinctive New Zealand use of words by a visit of the supplement editor of the Oxford English Dictionary, R. W. Burchfield. He has been examining local usages which are to be given a place in the supplement.

As far as is known, he says, no one but New Zealanders call a paved road a "tar-sealed road," or an incorrectly filled-in ballot paper "an informal vote."

Aerial topdressing (spreading fertilizer from aircraft), freezing works (meat processing plants where carcasses are frozen for export) and layby (in the sense of putting an article aside for instalment payments) are also words peculiar to New Zealand.

Visitors to New Zealand are often intrigued by the use of words like bosky (meaning bush-block, or the sticks), open slather (anything goes), hooray (goodbye) and the use of joker to describe almost anybody.

"She's right" (meaning the situation is under control, near enough is good enough) has often been cited as a New Zealand national slogan, and an unfortunate one.

The difference between "go crook" and "feel crook" was solemnly explained a few years ago in a diplomatic communication. A United States airport asked the New Zealand embassy in Washington if New Zealanders arriving there were liable to be suffering from any special diseases.

The embassy replied with a dissertation on "go crook," meaning to evacuate, and "feel crook," meaning to feel unwell and applying to almost any ailment under the sun.

A New Zealander recently back from a European tour has described how he identified without the slightest shadow of doubt a fellow countryman dining at a nearby table in a famous French restaurant noted for its superlative cuisine.

The neighboring diner put down his knife and fork and remarked to his wife: "Fair go, mum. I can't go this tucker."

According to the returning traveller, the sentiment and the mode of expressing it could have come only from a New Zealander.

Campbellford News

Evan Meyers New President Tennis Club

CAMPBELLFORD — The annual meeting of the Campbellford Tennis Club was held in the Council Chambers on Good Friday, at 8 p.m., with President Evan Meyers in the chair. Minutes of last year's re-organization meeting were given by the 1963 secretary, Kathy Daly and treasurer, Ken Kingston gave the financial report which showed the club to be in sound financial condition.

It was pointed out that the Club had raised as much money in special projects during the summer of '63 as it had taken in through fees. It was suggested that 1964 be known as "Bargain Year" with the fees lowered for teenagers on a trial basis to help induce young people to play and enjoy the fellowship of tennis. Club finances could be boosted by other means.

Cost of power had been moderate and the new system installed at the courts last spring but the treasurer reported that pavement on the courts showed cracks and an expert had said a resurfacing job would be required in the near future. This would involve a major expense and it was suggested that financial preparation should be made annually. The president advocated purchasing bonds with the club's cash reserve for future emergencies requiring a major expenditure of their funds.

OFFICERS NAMED

Election of officers for the 1964 season followed and Harry B. Free was named honorary president of the club. Mr. Free, a World War I pilot, who plays tennis regularly, has held this post for many years. Mr. Ole Olsen, a player of much past experience and prowess, was named coach of the tennis club. Other officers elected for the season are as follows: president, Evan Meyers; vice-president, Dwight Bennett; secretary, Peggy Fraser, treasurer, Kenneth Kingston; assistant treasurer (to assist with membership at high school), Stephen Anderson. Ground committee chairman, Jim Bennett; transportation committee chairman, Dwight Bennett; social and refreshment convenor, Bernadette McEvoy.

An unanimous vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Walter Love for his assistance toward the success of the "Money Doll" draw, won by Miss Kathleen Ferris, B.A., last summer.

The president or his appointee was authorized to assess nominal court fees for special cases such as tourists and short-time summer visitors. A member is allowed an out-of-town playing guest occasionally without fee. The courts may be used in the morning before noon only, by anyone with no fee required, but proper tennis shoes must be worn by all players. No fee will be required from newcomers to town after Labour Day.

Cancer Society Seeking Funds

CAMPBELLFORD — Dr. D. M. Smith agreed to contact ministers of local churches regarding a campaign for funds at the annual meeting of the Campbellford branch of the Canadian Cancer Society.

April is Cancer Campaign Month and the secretary was asked to send letters to all organizations and Women's Institutes asking their support in this campaign. It was suggested that daffodils be placed in the churches and to be given special mention for this reason.

The amount spent on local patients since September is $101.61. This includes transportation to Princess Margaret Hospital for treatment and to the clinic in Peterborough for follow-up treatment as well as special dressings and drugs and Christmas gifts for patients.

Mrs. L. Doherty, chairman of Women's Services, gave a resume of the conference she attended in Toronto and a report of their contributions to local patients was given.

Following are some important facts about the Cancer Society:

(A) How Cancer funds were spent in 1963 (in percentages): Research, 60.3; Education 14.1; Women's' Services, 13.7; General Overhead, 5.7; Campaign, 4.5; National Office Expense, 2.7.

(B) Research in Canada supported by Government, 15; Cancer Society, 85.

(C) Scientific Effort: number of Scientists and Technicians, 1955, 97; 1963, 266.

(D) Why a separate campaign? The Canadian Cancer Society is not a participating member of United Appeal. Their financial needs for education and welfare are increasing far more rapidly than are the average needs of the community and need a special effort.

Local services rendered to cancer patients include drugs, dressing, housekeeping service, home nursing, visiting, diversional program, nursing services, patient transportation and lodge accommodation.

Contest Air Seal Spotting

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Opinion is divided in Newfoundland whether aircraft should be used for spotting seals.

Capt. Percy Khan of St. John's, a veteran sailor and sealer, believes planes have a detrimental effect on the seal herds that move down from the Arctic on the great ice floes every year.

"Planes and helicopters should not be used, even for spotting purposes, before mid-March because they frighten the mother seals away before they have given birth to the young."

He feels that if the seals "are disturbed after the pups have been born, it's not so bad, if they are routed while still carrying the pups, they will disappear in the nearest open water and not return."

Capt. Knee says a herd that has been disturbed can split up and scatter in a hurry.

James R. Tucker, Liberal candidate in the forthcoming by-election for Trinity-Conception, says that unless planes are banned from the seal hunt the industry will disappear within two or three years.

"One of the major factors is that aircraft scatter the seals before the pups are born," he says.

However, he doesn't feel that using planes to spot seals is wrong. Just "killing seals from planes should be banned immediately."

Six Members Making Study Of Parliamentary Rules Facing Many Difficulties

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—Two events in the last month have illustrated the difficulties facing six MPs who are making a study of parliamentary rules.

The six—two Liberals, two Conservatives, a New Democrat and a Creditiste—form a sub-committee of the committee on parliamentary reform headed by Speaker Alan Macnaughton.

Their chairman comes from the Opposition side of the House — Stanley Knowles, New Democratic whip, an MP for 16 years and acknowledged expert on parliamentary rules and procedures.

One of the subjects the six will examine is the method of dealing with emergency situations, such as the government's proposal earlier this month that Parliament approve Canadian participation in the United Nations force on Cyprus.

The repercussions of this event were serious, producing a rare censure motion against Deputy Speaker Lucien Lamoureux which was defeated. Debate on this motion was marked by a spate of self-criticism by MPs over the procedural handling of the Cyprus motion.

Mr. Knowles says his personal opinion is that rules can be written which would make it possible for the government to bring emergency business before the Commons and at the same time protect minority rights.

In the case of Cyprus, the government was required by existing rules to ask for the consent of all MPs to introduce the Cyprus resolution without 48 hours notice.

RULING DISPUTED

Mr. Lamoureux ruled the consent was given. This ruling was disputed by a number of Creditiste MPs, who opposed hasty action on the Cyprus force.

When the Creditistes introduced a censure on Mr. Lamoureux, many MPs, including Mr. Knowles, blamed themselves for over-riding Creditiste objections to the proposal to ignore the 48-hour waiting period.

Mr. Knowles said the "six men" to make an uninhibited study before recommending a rule to the full committee and to the Commons.

A second problem for the six involves the planning of Commons business. The present system broke down last before Easter, resulting in an unprecedented Good Friday sitting of the Commons and a delay in the planned Easter holiday break.

Just before the scheduled Easter adjournment last Thursday, MPs found themselves asked by the government to approve $240,000,000 in government spending in a few hours. When they balked, the adjournment was postponed. MPs were left with their hopes of a holiday depending on the speed with which they approved the spending.

COULD BE DANGEROUS

Nothing raises parliamentary hackles quicker than this sort of deadline treatment. In a Parliament where the government lacks a majority it represents a real danger of defeat to the governing party.

The committee has before it an outline of how the planning of parliamentary business is handled in the British House of Commons and the French National Assembly.

In France, business is arranged over two-week periods and, in effect, there is little alternative to what is proposed by the government both as to the business to be taken up and the time to be spent on it.

In Britain, business is arranged for a week and a day ahead by consultation between the government and the opposition. To a certain extent this system is employed in Canada.

However, Mr. Knowles says there is no need for the government to leave such items as the $240,000,000 supplementary estimates until the last minute. He favors more consultation by the government and "fewer tricks" by the Opposition.

The group has held one meeting so far and plans weekly or more frequent meetings for the rest of the parliamentary session. Its members include Gordon Aiken (PC—Parry Sound-Muskoka), Gerald Baldwin (PC Peace River), Gilles Grégoire (Creditiste — Lapointe), Deputy Speaker Lamoureux and Labor Minister MacEachen.

"It is un-nerving, isn't it?—Apparently she read somewhere that a cat is better than any beauty-treatment."

New Canning Factory Bldg. Said Ahead of Schedule

BLOOMFIELD (Staff) — The Baxter Canning Company is still running into hard luck, but nothing insurmountable. They have their new building well under way, but one wall blew out the other day in a high wind.

The contractor had three walls partially built, but has had to leave one end open to allow the huge cranes used for installing the pre-cast roof to get inside.

The very high wind came along, and using the three walls as sort of a funnel, blew the partially completed end wall to the ground outside the building.

The loss was covered by insurance, and apart from a short delay, everything is once again under control.

Officials of the company told The Ontario Intelligencer on Monday that the work was ahead of schedule, and that they hoped to start moving at least some of their equipment into the new building as early as the first of May.

When completed, the Baxter's, new plant will be among the most modern and efficient on the continent.

When the Far West Quickened Imaginations in 'Old' Canada

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—One hundred years ago this month—slightly more than three years before Confederation — Canada didn't know where its western boundary was to be.

Some wanted it just west of the Lakehead, others to the foothills of the Rockies, and the ambitious wanted it to extend clear to the Pacific Coast.

There were conflicting claims to the vast reaches between the Great Lakes and the Pacific. Most of the land was left to the buffalo and the Indians—and a few hardy settlers.

With their minds already set on some form of union with the Atlantic provinces, the united provinces of Canada East and Canada West—now Quebec and Ontario—began to covet the lands held by the Hudson's Bay Company.

"The condition of the vast region lying on the northwest of the settled portions of the province is daily becoming a question of great interest.

"A definition of boundary is a desirable preliminary to further proceedings with respect to the vast tracts of land in that quarter belonging to Canada, but not yet brought under the action of our political and municipal system."

BECAME GOVERNOR

In the debate that followed, William McDougall, commissioner of Crown lands, said the first thing to be done was to determine whether the Red River territory, where the Selkirk settlers had made their start at colonization in 1812, belonged "to Canada or to some other country."

Five years later McDougall became lieutenant-governor of Rupert's Land and the new Northwest Territories.

The first move towards civil government of the Canadian West was made in 1858 when the British government decided to make Vancouver Island a Crown colony and in 1859 when it revoked the Hudson's Bay Company licence to exclusive trade in British Columbia.

As far as the interior prairie lands were concerned, the British government was prepared to extend the company's licence for another 21 years, and offered to have the Privy Council arbitrate the conflicting claims of Canada and the company to the border.

But pressures were mounting in Canada for jurisdiction over the West. In 1858, the president of the Executive Council and agriculture minister in the Tache - Macdonald government —who glorified in the name of Philip Michael Matthew Scott Vankoughnet — said Canada should press for its western boundary on the Pacific Ocean.

COMPANY UNHAPPY

With the establishment of the new Crown Colony on the West Coast, Canada proposed that a direct line of communication "by railway or otherwise" be established through the Red River and Saskatchewan territories to the Fraser River and Vancouver Island. Canada asked the Hudson's Bay Company for road and telegraph rights through the territory. The request wasn't happily received.

"The Red River and Saskatchewan valleys, though not in themselves fur-bearing districts, are the sources from whence the main supplies of winter food are procured for the northern posts from the produce of the buffalo hunts," said Alexander Grant Dallas, the resident governor of the company for Rupert's Land.

"A chain of settlements through these valleys would not only deprive the company of the above vital resources but would indirectly, in many other ways so interfere with their northern trade as to render it no longer worth prosecuting on an extended scale."

PESSIMISTIC REPORT

In the meantime, Capt. John Palliser had been sent out to explore the prairies and foothills and to assess their worth for the British government. While passages of his reports spoke glowingly of the abundance of fish, rich pastures of natural hay, ample timber, and areas readily available for settlement in the Red, Assiniboine and North Saskatchewan river valleys, the report was not encouraging.

"There would be no immediate advantage commensurate with the required sacrifice of capital" in building a transportation thoroughfare across the country, he said.

"The knowledge of the country on the whole would never lead me to advocate a line of communication from Canada across the continent to the Pacific exclusively through British territory.

"The time now has far gone by for affecting such an object and the unfortunate choice of an astronomical boundary line (the 49th parallel, established by treaty with the United States in 1949) has completely isolated the central American possessions of Great Britain from Canada in the east, and has almost debarred them from any eligible access from the Pacific coast on the west."

BOUGHT LAND

But the reluctance of the Hudson's Bay Company to have its hunting grounds corrupted by settlement and the discouragement voiced by Palliser did not daunt Edward Watkin, a British railwayman who already had become interested in linking the Atlantic provinces with Canada by rail. He saw the potentials of telegraph and transport links between Canada and the far west.

Watkin negotiated the transfer of Hudson's Bay Company land to the Crown, and reconstructed the company into a new one with plans for colonization and development. His was the Atlantic and Pacific Transit and Telegraph Company, and later he claimed a share of credit for Confederation itself.

It was then that the provincial government of Canada began to move. It couldn't help Watkin with finances out of its own limited treasury, and it was qualmish about the boundary and territorial jurisdiction problems involved.

So, 100 years ago this month, an official appeal was on its way to London from Canada seeking "some speedy, inexpensive and mutually satisfactory plan" to settle the western border question.

In 1869, five years later and two years after Confederation, Canada acquired the land for £300,000 and large land grants deeded back to the company.

Same Soil - - More Food

MONTREAL (CP) — A Macdonald College professor believes the next great increase in the world's food supply will come from soil now under cultivation.

Prof. Benno P. Warkentin says yields on cultivated soil can be increased 50 per cent through proper management and by finding a solution to the drainage problem.

Trained in soil science at the University of British Columbia, Prof. Warkentin has begun a study of more than 200 soil types found in the province of Quebec.

He says the lack of proper drainage methods has prevented farmers in eastern Canada from obtaining maximum yields on cultivated land.

"The trouble with our weather, from a farm production point of view, is that we get too much water in the winter and too little in the summer."

By finding a way to get a faster run-off of excess water in the spring, the planting season could be pushed ahead two weeks.

"The extra two weeks for growing in the spring and early summer when the days are long est would make a tremendous difference in the crop yield.

"I am so convinced of this, and of the importance of proper soil management, that I believe that the next great increase in the world's food supply will come, not through the plowing up of virgin lands as the Russians tried, but through sparingly increased yields on soil now under cultivation."

Prof. Warkentin joined the faculty of Macdonald College in 1957 and was appointed chairman of the soil science department when it was formed in 1962.

Long Way Round To See a Friend

PORT ELIZABETH (AP)—A 45-pound rucksack, just over $1,000, a newly-acquired beard and a wish to see a friend he met four years ago brought Warren Wilson more than 14,000 miles from Canada to this South African community.

Wilson, 36, son of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Wilson of West Vancouver, is a keen traveller.

In 1958, he and a group of fellow hitchhikers in Paris met another group of hikers, among them Mrs. Joy Ayton (then Joy Kisnell) of Port Elizabeth. They set off soon afterwards to Pamplona for the bull festival.

Wilson later made his way back to Canada. Mrs. Ayton, who spent several years overseas, decided to visit Canada toward the end of 1959. She stayed with Warren's family in Vancouver, where she worked at the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada before returning to Port Elizabeth in 1961.

Wilson's itchy feet started him off again last August. He hitchhiked through Europe, around the Mediterranean, Turkey, Syria, Lebanon, through Egypt, East and Central Africa, Sudan, Uganda, Kenya, Tanganyika, the Rhodesias and finally South Africa.

He gave Mrs. Ayton a surprise when she walked into her business office here. "My husband and I were thrilled to have him in Port Elizabeth," she said.

CROSSED DESERT

Among Wilson's experiences was a 2,000 - mile journey through Egypt and the Sudan which cost him about $28. He travelled by boat-deck and rail. Travelling through the desert by train took 30 hours.

He and fellow traveller Mike Northy of Seattle decided to climb Mount Kilimanjaro in Tanganyika. Kilimanjaro, Africa's highest mountain, is 19,321 feet.

"This we did without any guides," said Wilson.

"We found the path and kept on climbing. When we were really tired we decided to rest and had a good sleep. When we wakened next morning we found we had been sleeping on an overhang and that we were very near the peak. The trip to the top took two days but we took only a day to come down."

Now Warren is making plans to return home and settle down.

A graduate of the University of British Columbia, Warren was formerly employed by the lumber firm of MacMillan and Bloedel of Vancouver. He wants to be back in Vancouver before summer starts so that he can find a job.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

Some dramatic revelations have emerged from the United States Senate Subcommittee in its probe of the background of the Sonny Liston operations before the stanchiaden fiasco, called the Clay-Liston heavyweight championship fight.

Jack Nilson, "adviser" to the former world champion, testified the other day, characterized Liston as a "neurotic, hypocondriac and a victim of overconfidence and superstition."

Nilson stated that Liston was not in shape for his fight with Clay, but to ensure his good luck had imported old George "Pop" Raines, the underworld figure, to hang around his Miami training camp.

Nilon, the testimony revealed, had been acting as Liston's manager and had found him "unmanageable." He had planned to leave him after the Clay fight. Nilon expects to collect $400,000 from his share of Liston's purse.

The "adviser" testified that he tried to make Liston run five miles a day, but Sonny "dogged" training and ran only one. If Sonny caught a cold he acted as if he were dying."

There was nothing really wrong with Liston's arm before the fight, he has thought the fighter "might have had a little bursitis," said Nilon.

A "ballroom full of hangers-on" kept Liston up all night playing cards and feeding his ego, it was revealed. They would say, "Don't worry, champ, the kid won't get off his stool."

One of the "hangers-on" was Sam Margolis, a Philadelphia vending machine operator, who, it was disclosed, had been the recipient of more than half Liston's holdings in Intercontinental Sports Incorporated of which Liston is president.

The explanation for this, it was revealed, was that Margolis had expected a cut for bringing Liston and two of Nilon's brothers together to form the sports corporation.

The sinister shadow of the underworld, it seems, looms in the background. Margolis, it was revealed, once owned an apartment house in Philly with Frank "Blinky" Palermo, who, it was disclosed, is known as an associate of Frankie Carbo, underworld czar of boxing, now in prison.

Nilon stated that anything he could say about the now famous $50,000, paid Clay by Liston's corporation to guarantee a return fight would only incriminate the latter.

Said Gordon Davidson, a lawyer representing the Louisville group, sponsoring Clay, stated the payment was part of a larger package and could not fairly be called an allocation for a return match.

So boxing is once again wallowing in the muck and mire of disrepute. The Liston story of a young man trying to live down his unsavoury past and make himself a useful citizen through the talent of his glover and ring ability, has lost whatever sympathetic emotions it aroused in the minds of many.

Whether the outcome of the probe committee's investigation, the evidence revealed to date would indicate that Liston is finished as a fighter.

That is understandable, a lot more so than the series of another group that would strip Cassius Clay of his title because of Black Muslim associations.

The brash youngster from Louisville won his title "in the ring" and this solemn covenant with those who believe that is the only place he can legally be stripped of it.

The air around Cassius may be "hot" and sometimes tinged with wackiness, but at least it is clean and not grossed with the foul breezes that waft from the underworld.

Leafs 'Gave It Away'-Habs 'Stole It'

By DAVE BETTS

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs refined Bob Pulford's birthday celebrations Tuesday night by giving all the big gifts to Montreal Canadiens.

The 28-year-old centre tried to get his teammates in a party mood by breaking the ice with two festive goals, but then two of his most stalwart friends ruined the mood after by handing gift-wrapped pucks to the enemy.

"They were my best two men on the ice all night," moaned a mirthless Punch Imlach, manager-coach of the Leafs.

He was referring to left-winger Red Kelly and defenceman Allan Stanley who laid perfect passes on the sticks of Canadiens J. C. Tremblay and Henri Richard in the last three minutes of the third game of the Stanley Cup semi-finals.

Tremblay cashed Richard's goals, added to a first-period counter by Claude Provost, helped put Habitants in front and the Canadiens won 3-2, thereby taking a 2-1 lead in the series and once again establishing themselves as favorites to advance to the final.

Said Blake: "We stole it."

Said Imlach: "We gave it away."

BITTER SETBACK

Whether the win was a theft or a gratuity, it was a bitter setback to the Leafs, who had dominated play throughout most of the game and seemed to be coasting to a win before the shocking errors by the two veterans.

"I could hardly believe it when Stanley put the puck on my stick," said Richard.

Switching from English and French, the happy Habitant explained to five tiers of reporters how he potted the winning goal with just 25 seconds remaining in the game.

"I sure was a big surprise. I think Stanley thought I was one of them and passed without looking. I just took off for the goal. I had no angle to shoot at and was lucky enough to deke Johnny Bower."

Stanley didn't stick around to explain his warning. As he dashed from the oppressive silence of the Maple Leaf dressing room, he grumbled: "I never saw it. I tried to clear the puck and Richard got in the way."

The goal came only two minutes and 10 seconds after a similar flub by Kelly whose clearing pass went awry and clicked on Tremblay's stick. The Mad Bomber of defence zipped a 30-footer through a field of players and past Bower. "I didn't see Kelly's job on the pass," said Kelly. "It's as simple as that. It was a plain goof."

The Leafs blew several earlier chances to fatten their 2-1 lead. Both Pulford and Frank Mahovlich hit the goal post after beating netminder Charlie Hodge.

BLAKE CREDITS HODGE

"Charlie kept us in the game," said a subduing Blake. "Now you can see why he won the Vezina Trophy."

All is not lost, according to Imlach, who ordered his players out for a workout today and invited them to a special showing of film on the three Montreal goals.

"We have to do again what we already have proved we can do—win on Montreal ice. We're going back there to do it again."

Stanley, whose expert performance during the first 58½ minutes could easily be forgotten because of his one inside erection, set up Pulford's first-period goal with a perfect pass around Tremblay. The birthday boy beat Hodge cleanly with a short, sharp shot.

Only seconds later Richard started his personal ruination of the Leafs by setting up Provost for the centre ice zone. Provost got by Stanley, hit Bower's pads and then fired in his own rebound.

In the second period Pulford slid the lion's share of work for his own second goal by taking a hot pass from Eddie Shack in the Montreal zone. With Terry Harper leaning on him, he relayed the puck to Ron Stewart who deposited a sizzler on Hodge's pads.

The Canadiens argued that Hodge had held Stewart's shot long enough for a whistle before Pulford jammed it in, but referee Vern Buffey couldn't be sold on the idea and the Leafs took the lead.

PROVE INLACH'S THEORY

This set the scene for Tremblay's double snafu, of which Imlach commented: "I've always said hockey is a game of mistakes, and we proved it tonight.

"What could I say to those guys?" He asked rhetorically. "They were pros in the first 2½ periods. I can't exactly them for one mistake."

Only injury of the game was a split nose suffered by Toronto defenceman Bob Baun when he got in the way of a shot taken by Provost. Baun, who was shaken up by Dave Balon earlier, received a few stitches and will be ready for Thursday's fourth game here.

Balon, fanatically aggressive throughout the game, was given two of the game's 13 major penalties and was assessed a 10-minute misconduct for jostling Buffey in the third period.

In the close-calls department, Hodge lost one gobound on the back of his pads as he sprawled, made a dramatic save on Dave Keon after Tim Horton had set him up with an end - to - end solo rush and stopped Dave McKenney three times on up shots in front of the net.

Hodge's 28 saves were more vital than Bower's 26, many of which were made on shots from outside the blueline.

In The Dressing Rooms

By ARLIE KELLER

Abel was all smiles after the Wings shut out the Hawks 3-0 at Olympia Tuesday night to take a 3-1 lead in their best-of-seven series.

"This was the one we wanted to win," the big Wings boss said as the Wings dressing room as his happy players celebrated their victory.

"When we took Chicago on their ice Sunday night and evened the series at a game apiece, I was convinced that the winner of tonight's game would be in the driver's seat," he said. "I was mighty pleased at the way our kids played and at the fact that they were able to be rough and tough as the Hawks."

Billy Reay, coach of the Black Hawks, was glum behind the shutout. He barred reporters from the Chicago dressing room but did comin out of the room briefly to chat.

BEING OUTSKATED

"The Wings have been outskating us, and they have played well," he said. "We have not. It's as simple as that."

Abel had lavish praise for goalie Terry Sawchuk who left hospital at 4 p.m. for the game and was dressed and ready to practise at 7 p.m.

"He gave us a great game despite his sore shoulder," Abel said.

The Wings took some time out to toast Gordie Howe on his 36th birthday. Abel and Howe rejected the idea of presenting him a birthday cake between periods, but the stadium organist serenaded Gordie with "happy birthday, you."

Howe didn't get the present he wanted most—a goal. He was credited with hitting Hull goal in the first period, but the official scorer later reversed that and gave it to Wings MacGregor Howe had to be content with two assists for the night.

Cheers, Men They Were Only Fooling

The ina Hansen rink from Kimberley shaded the Lyall Dagg rink of Vancouver 12-11 in an exhibition match presented as part of the Canadiks fireflight bonspiel.

Dagg was leading the Hansen gals 5-3 in the fourth end and then elected to use push brooms to lend color and tradition to the game.

It was Dagg's undoing.

The Ina's ran foursome scored two in the sixth to make it 7-4 and three in the seventh to go out in front.

Committee Studies Move

Boxing Needs Federal Control

WASHINGTON (AP)—Chairman Phil A. Hart (Dem. Mich.) of the U.S. Senate Antitrust and monopoly subcommittee says boxing's future is dim unless it is put under a national boxing commissioner.

Hart's comment came Tuesday as the subcommittee ended its scheduled hearings on the Feb. 25 fight in which Cassius Clay upset champion Sonny Liston to win the heavyweight title.

The subcommittee is studying whether to recommend passage of the Kefauver bill which would set up the boxing commissioner. The measure is named for the late Senator Estes Kefauver (Dem. Tenn.) who headed the subcommittee until his death last year.

"Anyone who has sat through the hearings can depart with only one conclusion: That if the Kefauver bill is not passed the future of boxing is a dim one indeed," Hart said.

Senator Kenneth Keating (Rep. N.Y.) also urged passage of the bill. He said the federal government must move in until "the fight game is rid of the leeches."

IS HAMSTRUNG

Edward Lassman, president of the World Boxing Association, said that without federal backing his organization is "hamstrung" in its efforts to clean up boxing.

WBA Counsel Robert M. Summitt told the subcommittee that Lassman received threatening telephone calls—including one implying he would be shot—after he attempted to strip Clay of his heavyweight crown.

Lassman said his effort to remove Clay's title was not based on the champion's affiliation with the Black Muslim movement or because Clay is a Negro.

He said he was concerned about Clay's loud bragging, Clay's conduct at the weigh-in for the Liston fight in which he was fined $2,500 and "those hidden deals"—an apparent reference to giving Liston interest in Central Promotions, Inc., the right to promote Clay's next fight and part of his purse.

But Lassman said he now feels Clay "will comport himself as a true champion and the universe can honor and respect."

Bears Whip Reds 3-1 In Opener

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hershey Bears have tasted honey but they're still a long way from the big pot at the end of the American Hockey League playoff trail.

The Bears poured three goals past rookie goalie Ed Giacomin in the first period of Tuesday's Calder Cup opener and breezed to a 6-1 victory over the Reds.

Hershey had the home-ice edge in the best - of - seven three series. The second game is set for Thursday at Providence.

Cleveland visits Rochester tonight in the first game of another best-of-three series. The first-round survivors will play each other, with the winner advancing to the championship round against either Quebec or Pittsburgh.

The Aces and Hornets, divisional leaders in the regular-season wind-up, begin a best-of-seven set tonight at Quebec.

City Minors Win, Tie In Tourneys

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It was another day of close action in four minor hockey tournaments in Ontario Tuesday with most of the spotlight centred on the Easter Week Brampton novice tournament.

A total of 49 teams with two taken part in a Young Canada Week Peewee tournament at Goderich before it ends Saturday. Fifty teams have entered at Brampton; 384 boys are playing in a three-day midget all-star tournament in Trenton; and 16 teams are in the Georgetown international tournament.

Of nine close games in Brampton, four were ties while the other five were decided by one point. Don Mills and Toronto Swiss Chalet knocked off 3-3, Barrie tied Galt 2-2, Milton and St. Mary's deuled to a scoreless tie, and Bellevile and Georgetown locked 1-1.

The other tight affairs saw Don Mills blank Toronto Township 1-0, Peterborough shade Toronto Eaton Athletics 3-2, Barrie edge Galt 4-3 in overtime, Milton defeat St. Mary's 2-1 and Peterborough edge Brampton 5-4.

In Georgetown there were five close games, including two ties. Kitchener drew 2-2 with Oshawa and then defeated the locals 3-1, Garson and Brampton and the two clubs tied 1-1, and Belleville edged Riverside 4-3.

In Trenton action was fairly wide open with three exceptions — York Steel blanked Orono 1-0, Toronto Swiss Chalet shaded Don Mills 2-1 and Brampton edged Riverside 3-2.

Two ties were included among close games in Goderich with Lindsay and Leamington deadlocking 3-3 and Renfrew and Galt playing to a 2-2 draw. Games decided by one goal saw Waterloo edge Woodstock 2-1, Chatham blank Stratford 3-0, Lindsay shade Stratford 3-2 and Elmira defeat Delhi 2-1.

Other scores at Goderich: Chatham 4 St. Thomas 2; Strafford 4 Wallaceburg 1; Exeter 6 Forest 4; Exeter 3 Elmira 2; Hamilton 5 London 2.

At Trenton: Toronto 6 Welland 2; Windsor 4 Toronto 2; Yorkdale 3 Orillia 0; Stratford 4 Dixie 0; Brampton 3 Toronto 0; Orillia 4 Trenton 1; Dixie 4 Welland 1; Marlboros 2 Stamford 0; Scarborough 10 St. Margarets 0.

At Georgetown: Winnipeg 5 Verdun 2; Winnipeg 4 Verdun 2; West Kildonan 10 Paris 3; West Kildonan 12 Paris 3; Belleville 5 Riverside 2.

At Brampton: Hespeler 4 Delhi 0; Hespeler 7 Delhi 1; Belleville 5 Riverside 2; Riverside 4 Collingwood 2.

Hawks Following Last Year Script?

Sawchuk Blanks 'Em 3-0

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

TORONTO (CP)—It's beginning to look like 1963 all over again for Chicago Black Hawks.

It was the tall guy a year ago who led the Hawks were being seriously dumped out of the Stanley Cup semi-final by the underdog Detroit Red Wings. He shuffled off to the minors, to Denver of the Western Hockey League.

Rudy's bosses wanted the National Hockey League title back but the Hawks fell apart in the later stages of the schedule, blew the championship and skated right out of the post-season frolics in six games.

Now, after losing the NHL title again and taking a 3-0 pasting by the ailing Terry Sawchuk and the Wings Tuesday night in the third game of the current semi-final, it is becoming increasingly apparent that are headed for another early windup with Billy Reay in the coach's hot seat.

The Hawks are behind 2-1 in this best-of-seven set because they can't score prosperity. They walloped the Wings 4-1 in the opener last Thursday, bowed 3-1 to Bob Champoux, a raw rookie in the nets in place of the injured Sawchuk on Sunday, and rapped back to slide before 14,362 Olympia Stadium fans.

HAWKS IN TROUBLE

Unless they do some lineup juggling or somehow play up to their potential, they could be dead by next Sunday night. The fourth game is here Thursday and the action moves to Chicago for another joust three nights later.

The changes could be made today. Reay indicated this minutes after the shutout when he told reporters: "We'll have to make changes soon, but let's wait until tomorrow." He has some minor-leaguers here hitching to get into the lineup and the gossip is he may use one or two ex-NHLers, too.

His big guns are firing blanks. Centre Stan Mikita, the NHL scoring champion with 89 points and 50 assists, has scored only one goal in the three series. Bobby Hull, a 43-goal prize, is still looking for his first of the series.

And while the Hawks were trying to figure just what was wrong, Sawchuk, probably laughed all the way back to hospital for further treatment for his left shoulder. He was discharged from hospital just two hours before Tuesday night's game and headed right back after the shutout, his first in a playoff since he beat Toronto Maple Leafs 2-0 in a semi-final here March 21, 1961.

INJURY BOTHERS TERRY

Sawchuk's left slight effects from the pinched nerve that forced him to leave last season's playoff series to set the stage for the dramatic appearance of Champoux, the 20-year-old rookie who never had played junior B hockey last year.

The 35-year-old Sawchuk's latest victory stretched his unbeaten string against Chicago on Olympia ice to 14 games. And he could have stayed in the nets longer but left in favor of Roger Crozier, brought in by the Wings from Pittsburgh Hornets as his standby, because the Hawks had trouble locating the net.

Crozier made short work of stoppings from the press box and today departs for Quebec City, where Hornets open their best-of - seven American Hockey League semi-final against the Aces. He'll be back Thursday for another standby assignment.

While the Hawks were skating around and passing as if they had not been formally introduced, the Wings—with Gordie Howe dancing around like a teen-ager although celebrating his 36th birthday—did the job in workmanlike fashion. And the Detroit defence, led by veterans Bill Gadsby and Marcel Pronovost, effectively smothered any would-be Hawk offence.

Two young guys—Bruce MacGregor, 23, and rookie Paul Henderson, 21,—gave Detroit a 2-0 lead and Alex Delvecchio, a 13-year Red Wing player, put the game out of reach with his 31st playoff goal at 17:43 of the third period.

BRUCE GETS FIRST

MacGregor scored early in the first period with Mikita off for cross-checking. He canted in front of Chicago goalkeeper Glenn Hall as Howe let go with a rising 50-footer and the puck caromed off his wrist into the net.

Henderson scored at 4:51 of the third period after a goal-mouth scramble and Delvecchio took a perfect pass from Howe directly in front of the Hawk goal and casually poked Pronovost's rebound past Hall's legs.

Howe's two assists gave him 125 playoff points just one short of the record held by former Montreal Canadiens right-winger Maurice Richard. The official scorer credited Howe with the first-period goal but he asked to have it credited to MacGregor in the intermission. "We won a hockey game, an important one, and it doesn't matter who gets the goals," he said later. "Now we're ahead and the Hawks have to chase us."

For a while it appeared that Frank Mahovlich was doing the chasing. He cracked down hard from the opening faceoff, sent Howe to the penalty box in the first period and from then on things settled down. He called 20 penalties, 10 to each club.

Gerry Ehman AHL Points Champion

CLEVELAND (AP) — Gerry Ehman, Rochester right winger, won the American Hockey League scoring title with 83 points—one better than his linemate Bronco Horvath. Ehman scored four points to Horvath's three in the final week.

The 31-year-old Ehman captured his first scoring title and ended the three-year reign of Springfield's Bill Sweeney, who finished 10th with 73 points. Ehman's 83 points was the lowest winning total since 1944 when Tommy Burlington of Cleveland won with 82.

Willie Marsh all of Providence, Brian Kilrea of Springfield and Cleland Mortson of Quebec all finished tied at 83 in one of the closest scoring scrambles in AHL history.

Springfield's Jim Anderson and Pittsburgh's Yves Locas, who was the top goal-getter through most of the season, shared that honor with 40 goals. Cleveland's Les Binkley, 2.77, Ed Giacomin of Providence led in shutouts with six.

TORONTO (CP) — Track coach Fred Foot believes his two protegés—Bill Crothers and Bruce Kidd—both have "excellent" chances of winning gold medals in the 1964 Olympics.

Foot made his appraisal Tuesday as Kidd and Crothers flew home from the British indoor championships, each with a record.

Kidd, a 21-year-old University of Toronto student, beat the previous United Kingdom all-comers' record by 8.8 seconds when he ran the two miles in 8:39.0. Crothers set a European record by winning the 600 yards in 1:10.9, only eight - tenths of a second outside the world record.

Foot said he is "very pleased" with Kidd's performance.

"Bruce has raced seven times this season and won five of them," he said. "And that's not too bad."

He said both runners are training almost perfectly, although Crothers' time in the 600 yards was three-tenths of a second outside his best. The indoor track, however, was smaller than the boards Crothers is used to and contained an extra turn.

Kaminsky Trophy To Stanfield

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—The Max Kaminsky memorial trophy, presented annually to the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A player who best combines gentlemanly conduct with playing ability, has been awarded to Fred Stanfield, 19, captain of St. Catharines Black Hawks.

Stanfield is the first St. Catharines winner in the four years the trophy, named in memory of the former Black Hawks coach who died in 1961, has been presented.

The centre finished third in the league scoring with 100 points on 34 goals and 72 assists and, although an aggressive player, incurred only one major and nine minor penalties during the 56-game season.

Runner-up was Andre Boudrias, Montreal midget star, who led the league with 38 goals and 97 assists.

Ron Hansen, who disappointed Chicago White Sox with .226 average last season, turned into a one-man gang Tuesday, driving in all but one of their runs with two homers and a double in a 7-6 victory over St. Louis Cardinals. His three-run blast in the eighth inning wiped out a 5-4 lead for the Red Birds.

Bobby Wine of Philadelphia was living up to his .215 average of last season with 18 straight at-bats without a hit when he singled with the bases loaded in the 11th inning to give the Phillies a 4-3 edge over Cincinnati Reds.

And Ed Brinkman, one of the least distinguished members of the anemic Washington batting order, had three singles and two doubles as the whole team showed a bit of character in whipping Baltimore Orioles 11-5 with a 16-hit assault.

PODRES HAMMERED

It was that kind of day. Johnny Podres, one of the aristocrats in the Los Angeles Dodgers' pitching staff, was hammered for 11 hits in five innings by Houston Colts, of all people, and absorbed a 6-3 defeat that sent his earned-run average soaring to an abysmal 7.00 in the training season.

And New York Yankees committed three errors against Kansas City Athletics before Charlie Lau put them out of their misery by defeating them 8-4 with a bases-loaded squeeze bunt in the 10th inning.

Milwaukee Braves got a homer from Hank Aaron as they subdued Detroit Tigers 4-3 and Ron Santo contributed a two-run blast to Chicago Cubs' 6-3 victory over Cleveland Indians. Pittsburgh Pirates downed New York Mets 5-4 and Camilo Pascual pitched seven innings of shutout ball as Minnesota Twins overcame the Phillies' 8 team 6-4.

Veterans Jack Sanford and Billy Pierce fared only 30 betters and got plenty of support as San Francisco Giants throttled Boston Red Sox 9-1 and Los Angeles Angels outslugged their Hawaii farm team 8-5.

Lindsay Shades Picton Jrs.

PICTON (Staff) — Lindsay Lions moved into a one-game lead in their best-of-seven OHA Junior "C" playdowns in Lindsay last night by downing the Picton Merchants 4-2.

Lindsay leads the set two games to one. The fourth game is scheduled for Picton Arena on Thursday night. Game time is 8.30 p.m.

The Merchants fell behind 2-0 in the first period last night and never caught up. It was 3-1 after two heats.

In the final heat, Picton put on the pressure. Rory MacDonald scored at 10.21 to make it a 4-3 game and the Merchants carried the play during the final ten minutes only to be stopped by some terrific goaltending by Jackett.

Jackett robbed Picton time and again and the losers also rattled several shots off the post. Overall, Lindsay outshot Picton 33-24 as both goalies had a busy night. Jackett's shots, while less in number, were the more dangerous.

George Sainsbury potted Lindsay's initial goal.

Referees Gord Feveresti and Joe Sadler handled the game with iron rule, dishing out 15 penalties. Lindsay drew nine of that total and each club picked up two fighting majors.

Picton, Delhi Game Postponed

PICTON (Staff) — Picton Intermediates' scheduled playdown game in Delhi last night was postponed until tomorrow (Thursday) of this week.

Picton leads the best-of-five set one game to none, having taken a 9-2 decision at home in the opening tilt.

Third game of the series has been changed from Friday to Saturday night of this week, in Picton.

Mets Behind in Third . . . ? Then Watch—Movies, TV

NEW YORK (AP) — If the Beatles are a sort of shrieking yellow, what color are the Mets?

The scoreboard, largest in the world, is being built for the new stadium which the Mets will open against Pittsburgh Pirates April 17. The board has 36,000 lights, shows movies, plays music in color and even keeps score.

A model was unveiled Tuesday at a Manhattan Hotel, and the press was duly impressed.

First, the inventor, Bob Rosston, played some music on a tape recorder. Each musical note produced a different color on the white shell behind the scoreboard.

The board will play music, flash the colors, display the words for songs, and show color added to each player as he comes to bat.

The board can also show movies or television programs if a game is held up by rain.

This brought suggestions that the board be used to bring in other games on those frequent occasions when the Mets are behind 13-1 in the third inning.

Squirts Win, Tie
Bantams Oust Riverside

Belleville Bantam Odd Fellows eliminated a fast-skating Riverside team yesterday and squared off against Garson, from near Sudbury, in the week-long bantam hockey tournament at Georgetown.

The Odd Fellows, playing some of their best hockey of the season, tripped Riverside 5-1 yesterday morning and came back with a tight 4-3 win in the second game of the total goals series last night.

Garson and Belleville were scheduled to play this morning at 11:45 and again tonight at six o'clock.

John Delgate and Cal Wilson paced yesterday's 5-1 decision, each scoring two goals and assisting on another. Pete Fleming also scored and Bob Carter had one assist.

In the closer 4-3 win, Tom Boulter, Delgate and Fleming each collected one goal and one assist with Dave Loder notching the other goal. Clifford Scott and Bruce Gibbons drew assists.

Meanwhile, up in the Novice tournament being played in Brampton, Belleville Squirt All-Stars chalked up a win and a tie.

Belleville fought Georgetown to a 1-1 deadlock in the first game of their series then followed up with a convincing 9-1 victory in the second game.

Liaison Officer for Colored Immigrants in Birmingham Is Called Father Confessor

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

BIRMINGHAM (CP)—A bewildered old Indian immigrant stumbled up to a passerby here one day and handed him a scrap of paper on which was scribbled simply Mr. Gibbs.

That name was a sort of open sesame to this sprawling city of 1,100,000 — Britain's second biggest — because everyone knows about Lewis Allan Gibbs, 53, the city council's liaison officer to colored immigrants.

"Call him a father confessor —that's the best title I can think of for him," said one councillor.

"We're concerned with all problems of Commonwealth migrants," said the dynamic Gibbs. "That means their arrival, accommodation, sickness, health, property purchases, education, the whole range of their experience."

City fathers see this as an important reason why Birmingham has been able to absorb 70,000 newcomers from The West Indies, India and Pakistan without significant friction compared, for instance, with nearby Smethwick, where racial relations recently became a hot political issue.

JOBS LURE THEM

Birmingham, Britain's most diversified industrial complex—it has more than 1,500 types of industry—offers great employment lures to immigrants and the city council predicts this will continue.

In fact, some sources see the possibility of a labor shortage and perhaps that is one reason officialdom is determined to get along with the new "Brummies," as the residents call themselves.

"You can compare racial irritations to a bruise over a boxer's eye," said an official. "If an opponent hammers away at the bruise, a nasty battle will result. If a racial irritation is not cared for, a running sore will result.

"Somebody — I don't know who—is trying to work up something in Smethwick. But it won't go. Not even in Smethwick."

Gibbs takes an international view, saying Britain cannot expect to get co-operation in trade and other matters from its newly independent Commonwealth partners unless the immigrants — the "advance guard"—are treated fairly.

With his staff of three, he investigates complaints and if necessary requests a landlord, say, to extend to a colored tenant the same terms as he would to an old Brummie. Sometimes the tenant is advised, however, that his beef is unfounded—that he is not really being victimized.

"If it can happen to you, all right," is the invariable reaction of the immigrant in such cases.

SIKHS STAND ALOOF

From here, the Smethwick ills are traced in part to the high proportion of Indian Sikhs —members of a proud and ancient race—among the 7,000 immigrants in the neighboring town.

Indians show less enthusiasm for integration or even for learning the English language than other groups, sources said. An Indian spokesman countered, however, that a system of separate English classes for immigrants could mask school segregation and "educational apartheid."

"When these things stretch into half a day or so, taking in other subjects besides English, the children will surely feel segregated," the Indian said.

Birmingham newspapers seem to make prominent mention of the color angle in reporting crime stories and considerable resentment has been engendered by black men soliciting white women.

Questioned, the older residents invariably say they have "nothing against colored people as such." But they mentioned unsanitary habits, overcrowding, housing competition and such things as "disgusting spitting."

"Immigrants are not new to us, you know," said a civic leader. "We have more Irishmen than Brummies. And the Irishmen got into more trouble than the blacks—but for the love of St. Patrick don't say I told you so."

Sport Snapshots

By GRAHAM COX

WINNIPEG (CP) — When the stock car racing season opens this spring in Winnipeg, something different—training races will be offered by Brooklands Speedway manager Jim McKay.

The 36-year-old former Ontario driver is back from three months in Florida where he picked up a fistful of new ideas to help sell the third largest spectator sport in Winnipeg.

McKay, who has been directing traffic at Ontario and Manitoba tracks since 1953, will add two new classes of cars to the competitions, introduce a second day of racing each week and make provision for fans to claim winning cars in the two new classifications.

"I don't think any of them have ever been tried in Canada before but I don't see why they shouldn't work," he says.

"With four classes of cars racing, we wouldn't run them all on the same night, of course. But it would make two nights of racing easy to sell."

OLD CARS BIAS

McKay, who also holds down a regular job in the Trans-Canada Air Lines maintenance base here, says the two new classes both will be street classes.

One will be an older-model class for cars at least 11 years old. They'll look like the family car—with doors, fenders, windshields and lights—although roll bars for driver protection will be required. Special speed equipment will not be permitted on these and the claiming price will be $125.

The other new class will be cars less than 11 years of age. They'll be permitted certain speed equipment including racing cams, cutout fenders for "slick" racing tires and swapped engines, as long as they're of the same make as the car. These would be up for a $1,000 claim.

And, of course, the better-known standard stock and super-modified cars, some worth as much as $5,000, will still be running along with certain novelty events.

ROLE FOR FANS

The sport already draws an average of 4,000 fans a week here, and the former London, Toronto and Oshawa driver says he thinks the innovations will draw even more.

McKay, who doesn't drive any more "because I just haven't got the time," picked up his managing experience with a Brantford organization that at one time ran 19 tracks as far west as Edmonton.

For years he was Western Canada manager for Kenneth-Morell Enterprises before he took over operation of a track in neighboring St. Boniface for two years.

"It's fast, fascinating entertainment," he says. "But getting the fans participating is half the battle. That's where the claiming races come in—giving the fans the chance to really participate in the entertainment they're watching."

RACING POSTPONED

MONTREAL (CP) — A lack of entries has forced postponement of the scheduled Friday opening of harness racing at Blue Bonnets Raceway. A Blue Bonnets spokesman said only 60 entries were received when the entry box was opened Tuesday. Eighty entries are needed for the 10-horse card, he said.

BISONS FINED

CLEVELAND (AP) — Buffalo Bisons were fined $1,000 by the American Hockey League Tuesday on a charge of violating the AHL's affiliation agreement with the National Hockey League. James Ralmer, AHL president, also announced suspension of Gerald Melnyk, Buffalo centre, for an indefinite period. The fine and suspension resulted from Buffalo's loan of Melnyk to St. Louis of the Central Professional Hockey League during the 28-day period before the end of the AHL season.

New Powerful Source of Light Is Discovered

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—Two astronomers say they have discovered an incredibly powerful source of light and radio waves in space—an object moving so fast and at such a great distance that current concepts of the universe's size and age have been upset.

Dr. Marten Schmidt of the Mount Wilson and Palomar Observatories said the object, believed to be an exploding galaxy or cluster of galaxies, is the most distant yet seen by man.

"We have had to throw our yardsticks out the window," he said.

Schmidt discovered the new object with the aid of radio astronomer Thomas A. Matthews. They said it is moving faster than anything ever observed in the heavens — approximately half the speed of light, which is 186,000 miles a second.

'RED LIGHT SHIFT'

Until announcement of the new discovery, astronomers measured the speed and distance of objects in a technique called the "red shift." They said that the faster an object goes the more its light shifts into the red part of the spectrum.

All distant objects, they said, appear to be going away from our solar system. They all seem to go faster—and get redder the farther they recede.

The problem is that they keep finding new objects farther and farther away.

Does this mean they may find very distant objects going faster than the speed of light?

"No," said Schmidt. "Einstein has proved nothing can go faster than light. What it does mean is that we must begin to be more cautious in announcing distances of distance. Apparently we must crank some corrections into the distances indicated by the red shift."

Stars Make Commercials For One Reason — Money

By BOB THOMAS

They do it for money. How else could an actor earn $50,000 for one day's work? Advertisers will pay that much for top names.

Take the example of Edward G. Robinson. He's one of Hollywood's most employed actors. Yet he can be seen on television channels savoring and praising an instant coffee. Ban Starkweck and Claudette Colbert are promoting the same product.

Robinson explains:

"I hesitated about accepting the offer at first. I had never done anything that commercial, not even when I had my own radio show, Big Town. But I saw nothing wrong in it—as long as the ad was in good taste and I believed in the article that was being sold.

"The, remuneration was very good, and that is always a consideration. Everything was done with care. All in all, it was a pleasant experience."

The use of well-known actors in commercials has been increasing some performers with recognizable faces — Joe E. Brown and Buster Keaton—on their selling unbilled. Others get credit for their names and, as added incentive, the movie or television series they are appearing in.

Perhaps an advertising man: "Stars are often effective in getting attention for a commercial and for lending distinction to the product. But they must be used with care and fitted to the specific campaign."

Some stars are paid a flat fee, others receive a payment for each play. This can amount to big money, even for unknown performers. One actress, who has failed to make a name for herself in the dramatic realm, has earned $20,000 a year from a soap commercial.

"4 For Texas" Standouts of Action, Beauty and Out-Want Hilarity

The opportunity to appear in an all-both, far-out Western held strong appeal for Frank Sinatra, who had great movies. "4 For Texas" seemed for his the epitome of such a film.

His part would be that of a dashing gunslinger-gambler in wide-open 1870 Galveston. His paramour would be the statesque Anita Ekberg. As a special zoo, sparring-partner for fisticuffs and toil for wisecracking, he would have his real life buddy Dean Martin. There would be on hand the sinuous Ursula Andress, as Martin's ladylove, to add a sultry aspect to the going-on. The acting line-up would include such talented feature players as Nick Dennis, Ed Conroy, Richard Jaeckel, Mike Mazurki, Marjorie Bennett, Victor Buono and Eva Six to give color and zip to the twists of the plot. And there was a top director Robert Aldrich, to pilot "4 For Texas" to its funny finish. So Sinatra said "Yes" to Warner Bros. when offered the part, and then he relaxed.

How relaxed? Enough to be completely calm while the astounding Miss Ekberg in one scene, gives him his daily shave — with a straight razor.

"4 For Texas," a Technicolor opens tomorrow, Thursday, continuing Friday and Saturday. Performances daily at 1.00, 7.00 and 9.10 at the Belle Theatre in Belleville.

"Boy and The Laughing Dog"

A special show for boys and girls, yes a special treat for every family will be presented at 1.00 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday, at the Belle Theatre. The feature attraction "The Boy and The Laughing Dog," co-stars Walter Brennan, Phil Harris, Brandon de Wilde and Sidney Porter. On the same program a funny 3 Stooges comedy, "Pardon My Backfire"

Campaign Will Stress Recreation-Space Needs

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP)—A national campaign to impress Canadians with the urgent need for more outdoors recreation space will be mounted during National Wildlife Week April 5-11.

It was selected by the Canadian Wildlife Federation, a fledgling organization rooted in 1,500 sportsmen's clubs, to reflect the most crucial problem facing outdoors enthusiasts across the nation.

"Even now we're in bad shape when it comes to recreational lands close to our big cities," says Richard Passmore, executive secretary at the federation's Ottawa headquarters.

"Our easily accessible outdoors areas are vanishing at a rapid rate under suburban sprawl and industrial expansion. It's going to get a lot worse unless action is taken now."

This is the first time since Wildlife Week was decreed by Parliament in 1947 that it has been concentrated on a single message.

The aim is to create a public opinion so strong that action at all levels of government to provide more parklands and save prime wildlife areas from being plowed up in rapid-growth regions.

It is also the first time that a single national organization has taken on the job of Wildlife Week promotion. Formerly it was handled by regional groups.

Working on a limited budget, the federation has prepared posters, radio and TV spot background material for distribution to its eight provincial affiliates and to conservation and background material for distribution to its eight provincial affiliates and to conservation groups in Newfoundland and Nova Scotia.

Local clubs will be encouraged to stage exhibits, publicity drives, club speakers, film programs and meetings to get the message across.

Underlining the urgency of the situation, the federation points out that the use of parks by campers and picnic parties jumped 400 per cent between 1957 and 1962.

Last year there were 8,000,000 visitors to the national parks and in Ontario alone the provincial park system logged another 8,000,000 visits. Park expansion has fallen far behind the growth rate.

Wildlife Week is set each year for the week including April 10, the birthday of the late Jack Miner, the naturalist and author whose bird sanctuary at Kingsville, Ont., became world famous.

Put Clocks Back Tenth Of Second

The clocks were put back because of a slight slowing down of the earth's rotation.

Atomic clocks are so accurate that it now is possible to gauge changes in the speed of the earth's rotation.

The Royal Observatory's ultimate time standard is the position of known stars which pass directly overhead.

As the star passes over the hairline of the lenses of the observatory's zenith telescope the exact moment of time is automatically registered on punched tape which is fed into a computer.

The computer compares the observed times with the calculated times and notices any difference between the two.

Canada, Australia, the United States, Argentina, Czechoslovakia, Italy, Japan, South Africa and Switzerland all put their clocks back during the weekend.

FEATURE TIMES

AT THE BELLE — "Boy and The Laughing Dog" Walter Brennan, Phil Harris, Brandon de Wilde and Sidney Porter. On the same program a funny 3 Stooges comedy, "Pardon My Backfire" Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Performances daily at 1.00, 7.00 and 9.10 at the Belle Theatre in Belleville.

AT THE PARK — "The Cardinal", Tom Tryon, Romy Schneider, John Huston, 8.15 p.m.

At Least Twenty-Five Shows Limping Toward Oblivion

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Television's 1963-64 season has only six or eight weeks to go and the network schedules include at least 25 shows limping toward oblivion.

Some born weaklings, like The Jerry Lewis Show on ABC, Glynis on CBS and Harry's Girls on NBC, expired early and unmourned.

Others, like NBC's Richard Boone show, have suffered bravely through chronic script trouble. Route 66 on CBS dropped after co-star George Maharis left the cast.

Several programs are victims of circumstances. NBC's Espionage, a well - produced spy series, will be dropped abruptly because it occupies a Wednesday niche in competition with two of TV's most popular programs, Beverly Hillbillies and The Dick Van Dyke Show. ABC's Arrest and Trial might have survived almost anywhere — except opposite NBC's Bonanza.

NBC finally decided to dump Imogene Coca's Grisell and to fill her Sunday half hour next season with the daytime The Bill Dana Show. The Bell Telephone will have still another cartoon copy of the Beatles on next Sunday's show. There are reported to be 1,500 such groups in England, as Sullivan's programming problems may be solved for the next 30 years.

Admiralty Flag Taken Down After 336 Years

By COLIN FROST

LONDON (AP)—The crimson and gold flag of the admiralty vanished from the London skyline yesterday but naval history will never seem the same.

For 336 years the flag has flown over the admiralty building in Whitehall. Unlike other flags, it was given day and night and not just in daylight hours.

In all those years it had been lowered only for replacement or to half-mast for the death of a monarch. It was fluttering there when news came of Nelson's victory at Trafalgar.

But this morning a major change in Britain's defence planning went into effect, and as a result the admiralty has ceased to exist as a separate government department.

Instead, a new cr eat, 54, stepped up in rank from defence minister to secretary of state for defence and becomes one-third of the army, navy and air forces.

Earl Jellicoe, who held the title of first lord of the admiralty, now will be known as defence ministry for the navy.

Similarly with the army. James Ramsden, who succeeded John Profumo as secretary of state for war, becomes defence minister for the army. Hugh Fraser, secretary of state for air, becomes defence minister for the RAF.

CO-ORDINATES WHOLE

Thorneycroft will have direct responsibility for co-ordinating the roles of $60,000 servicemen and civilian defence staff with a budget this year of about £2,200,000,000 ($6,000,000,000).

His headquarters is the new defence ministry building by the Thames, a towering square block. Already Britons are calling it the pentagon because it is run on the lines of Washington's Pentagon.

Henceforth the admiralty flag —technically the flag of the lord high admiral — will be flown only when the monarch visits ships or naval shore bases.

A crowd of 300 watched as the flag was hauled down from the admiralty building Tuesday night. Some had tears in their eyes. A Royal Marine band played the Britannia and it will never sound the same again.

Teachers Ask French-Tongue High Schools

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario's French - speaking teachers decided Tuesday to urge establishment of French-language secondary schools in Ontario in a brief to be presented to the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism.

The association, L'Association des Enseignants Franco - Ontariens, spokesman for 3,200 teachers in Ontario's bilingual elementary schools, decided at its annual meeting to submit the brief this fall.

The 160 convention delegates adopted a resolution report outlining the main themes of such a brief.

The report said secondary French-language schools should be established in areas where sufficient French-speaking persons live as the only way "to bridge the disastrous gap for industrial formation" which exists between primary schools and universities.

The report said 90,000 Ontario students go to French-language elementary schools but must take their high school classes entirely in English, unless they enrol in private French - language colleges.

TEACH IN BOTH

The universities of Ottawa and Sudbury offer university and school teaching courses in both French and English.

The report said the French-language secondary school should also teach English but that it would be the main language of thought and expression.

Two Mail Trucks Robbed In Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Bandits held up two mail trucks Tuesday night in the financial area in downtown Montreal, seven armed and masked men drove off in the trucks with 70 bags of mail after handcuffing the drivers and his assistant.

The value of the bags stolen in both cases was not immediately known.

The Gazette, however, reports the loot in the Montreal holdup included $400,000 in cash. The newspaper says two of the 10 bags contained money destined for an east-bound train and was to pay workers at construction projects at Baie Comeau, Que., and Manicouagan, Que.

Police and post office officials were unable to confirm the reports. One Montreal police spokesman, however, confirmed the mail bags did contain money and the amount stolen "could be quite high."

Looters Busy

RODNEY, Ont. (CP)—Reeve Harold Howard charged Tuesday that looters have been operating in the main street stores ravaged by a $500,000 fire Monday in this village of some 1,000 persons, 40 miles west of London.

He said the block hit by the fire now has been fenced off and Chief Constable Max Lashbrook has placed two uniformed buildings under surveillance to prevent further looting.

Horizon's Narrow for Egyptians' Propaganda

CAIRO (AP)—Compared with its free-swinging past, the propaganda machine of President Nasser of Egypt now is a relative tabby cat.

The changing world and the recent Arab summit conference, which resulted in mutual pledges to frustrate the Arab Jordan waters, have cut down Nasser's target.

Once, Cairo's newspaper readers could open their papers each morning certain to see high crimes and "moral turpitude" ascribed to a generous portion of the world's leaders. The Voice of the Arabs and the newspapers were free, to lambast almost anything in sight and to rave out of hell approval from "the boss."

The approved list of targets nowadays seems more-or-less limited to Israel, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and what is called British imperialism.

There are occasional exceptions. President Johnson was raked over the Arab coals for promising U.S. aid to Israel in a nuclear project to remove salt from water. But the days when the United States was fair game are evidently over, at least for the present.

Similarly, the Russians have been largely off - limits since they agreed to finance the Aswan Dam.

The Addis Ababa conference of African leaders, with its pledges of non-interference in others' affairs, similarly cut the Africa list. Before then there had been thinly veiled charges that the former French states were still lackeys of President de Gaulle. Even Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia got an occasional arrow—but no more.

France got off the hook after peace came to Algeria and Nasser set out to woo de Gaulle from his pro-Israel stance.

Though all this, the Cairo press and radio maintained its cutting edge by attacking Arab leaders opposed to Nasser. King Hussein of Jordan was called a "British puppet in one of the

"Cheerful Cops" Show Results in Teen Problems

VANCOUVER (CP) — Nine friendly fellows in uniform are setting out to keep Vancouver youngsters cheerfully within the law.

"When a kid has a policeman as a friend it changes his attitude toward law enforcement," says Sgt. Gus Bellamy.

Sgt. Bellamy is in charge of the Vancouver police department youth preventive squad which was formed in January by Police Chief Ralph Booth.

At the start there were a lot of puzzled youngsters.

Two uniformed policemen will stroll up to a group of juveniles outside a school or a community centre, a teen dance or a street-corner gathering.

But instead of asking questions, they just pass the time of day on any topic that comes to mind. After a few minutes, just as casually as they arrived, the policemen leave.

"It took me a couple of weeks to figure them out—they aren't really after anything at all," a 16 - year - old high school girl said.

Squad members range in age from 26 to 42. They have varied backgrounds but have in common a knack forgetting along with the younger generation.

AIDS UNDERSTANDING

The friendships they are making are going to pay off, says Sgt. Bellamy.

"When a kid has a policeman for a friend, he begins to understand why the laws must be enforced.

"He learns that the policeman is there to help people just as much as he is there to catch criminals.

"Above all, this kid will always think twice before he does something that he knows is wrong."

As well as getting to know the youngsters, the squad also follows up any indication that menaces is heading for trouble, Heading off trouble is aided by the routine checks that police make on juvenile hangout spots around downtown areas at night.

The names and addresses of these youngsters are passed on to the preventive squad. The next evening, while both the juvenile and his parents are at home, a pair of the squad officers will call.

"They simply ask the parents in front of the boy or girl involved if they knew where their child was at 4 o'clock that morning," Sgt. Bellamy says. "That's usually enough; the parents take it from there."

ARRANGE RELP

After the visit to the home, the matter is generally closed as far as the squad is concerned.

"The exceptions are obvious. Some of the homes we see, I really don't blame the kids for staying out all night.

"But we're not social workers and we don't pretend to think we can do their job.

"When we see a family that obviously needs some outside help, we advise them to seek it. And we report the incident to the agency we advise them to go to, so if they don't seek it, the agency can go to them.

"Parents themselves are beginning to contact us, because they know their boy or girl is heading for trouble and they can't get him to talk to them about his problems."

Sgt. Bellamy said squad members frequently find youngsters will talk more freely to them than to their parents.

"But we can't follow any formula when we talk to youngsters. No two cases are the same. We have to play it by ear as we go along.

"Sometimes, it's a matter of introducing a youngster to the local youth club director and other times it will end up in the hands of a psychiatrist.

First World War Films Will Be Unrolled in Sections

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP)—Every Saturday night for six months, starting May 23, the First World War will unroll across British screens in a marathon documentary that may dwarf all other 50th anniversary projects this year.

The production, a joint effort by the BBC, CBC, Australian Broadcasting Commission and London's Imperial War Museum, is the star attraction of BBC2's second TV channel slated for April opening. Entitled The Great War, it will be in 26 parts of 40 minutes each and may be seen later in Canada.

Research has been a massive job for the handful of men and women working on the project since it first killed 13 months ago in the minds of BBC producers Tony Essex and Gordon Watkins. Farming out to Canada, the United States, France, Germany, Russia and the Balkans, they collected 160 miles of film, mounds of historical material and eyewitness accounts.

Toronto producer Ed Rollins made a personal appeal to Canadian veterans, received more than 300 letters and interviewed 40 old servicemen in Canada. Rollins ... a year's loan from CBC film productions, now is in London helping put the series into shape.

Altogether 35,000 persons sent letters and pictures in answer to appeals for Great War material, and some 200 filmed interviews were made. The shortest letter was a one-line summary of the 1915-1916 Ypres stalemate ... "Nothing vivid happened, it was just hold on to what you have got." The longest ran to 1,85 pages.

Chief military adviser to the series is Capt. Basil Liddell Hart, noted war historian. Several of the scriptwriters have recently published books on the First World War, including John Terraine, Barzle Price, Cornelli Barnett.

The problem of speed with the old 18 - frames - a - second movies is solved by a process known as "stretch printing." This involves doubling up the print every other frame to bring the speed up to the modern transmission rate of 24 frames a second.

Sky backgrounds have been filtered down to make foreground details stand out crisply, and the refinement of 625-line television on the new BBC2 channel will help give sorted of life to the look.

Some distinguished British actors have been engaged to read quotations from diaries and speeches of the war leaders, including Sir Ralph Richardson as Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig and Emlyn Williams as David Lloyd George. Other roles are still to be cast.

Sir Michael Redgrave is to narrate the series, which producer Tony Essex says is not solely concerned with the fighting. He intends the program to work out a developing philosophy on war and to show the political, social and economic history of a period that culminated in a conflict so traumatic life was never the same again.

Wild Geese in Prince Edward Co. Beginning to Leave for North

Mixed Spiel Giving Lots Of Enjoyment

On tricky ice, where weight was a big factor, the mixed bonspiel continued at the Quinte Curling Club on Wednesday evening. As in the other draws there were some surprises and upsets but on the whole the games went according to form.

First wild geese of the year have been resting in Prince Edward County for several days, according to a Department of Lands and Forests report, and as unofficial report has it that a flight winged northwards over Belleville last night.

William Tinsley, William Bittle of the Department of Lands and Forests has had no word yet, from his staff in the lookouts of a northbound flock. He does not doubt the unofficial reports though — this is about the season of the birds headed north last year. The birds will keep moving north, he said this morning, as long as there is open water and soon some grass ahead of them. There is some open water and grass near the centre of swamps at the north end of Hastings County, he added.

The birds that passed Belleville last night probably started somewhere around Florida or Bermuda, and have been working northward in easy stages, heading for the James Bay area. Some birds may stop and spending up to a month on the way. Later arrivals, the birds will be coming through for (about a month), will make the trip in a few days flying at up to 1,000 non-stop-miles at a time.

Canadian and U.S. authorities have been co-operating in their migrations with a banding program. Hunters and others who receive banded birds are asked to turn the band over to the nearest official wildlife agency, mark down the spot in the central registry of bands in the program. A report, including that it is a wild goose and the movements, will be forwarded to the agency forwarding it the band and another to the person who found the banded bird.

There are two kinds in the area, too. Mr. Brittle reports. Black ducks, mergansers, mallards, wood-ducks, whistlers and bluebills have all been reliably identified near Belleville this year. Most of the ducks have come up the Atantic flyway from the east coast of the U.S., others have come from inland lakes in the U.S. Several hundred ducks spend the winter each year on Lake Ontario.

Rumor Dies on Chrysler Here

In the past week city business circles had exchanged whispers that Chrysler Canada Ltd. intended establishing an industrial complex in the Belleville area.

Today the sound was muted—following an announcement by Mayor Max Mills.

Monday evening, the mayor squelched the volume when he told city council he had contacted Chrysler officials about the rumor.

Any plans Chrysler might have for the area would strictly concern a dealership outlet, he said.

"In relation to manufacturing they have no plans for the city of Belleville. It's unfortunate — and perhaps we will eventually get them," said the mayor.

The newly-regrouped city industrial commission is exploring several promising contacts, he added, but "this is not one of them."

Concert Pianist Collapses, Dies Of Heart Attack

DETROIT (AP)—Concert pianist Bonnier Kune collapsed in the wings and died of a heart attack after performing one of his own compositions with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra Wednesday night.

The 60-year-old Yugoslavian composer, pianist and conductor was stricken while his sister, Metropolitan Opera star Zinka Kunc, played and orchestrated Kunc wiped his brow three times and once momentarily held his head in his arms, witnesses said.

He took a bow alone and bowed to the applause a third time with Conductor Sixten Ehrling.

As Miss Milanov finished an encore just 35 minutes later, Ehrling came back to announce Kunc's death.

Mr. Hall could not make the trip to Montreal and may not be able to come this week.

Hall, Herbert H. Millard and Judge Rene Lippe, both members of the board, have said they are optimistic about a settlement being reached with Mr. Hall on a new labor peace on the Great Lakes.

The SIU's administration in Montreal is being run by Mr. Millard, Charles Turner, who was made president of the union by the federal trustees.

It is considered this likely will continue through the shipping season that candidates for the leadership could make a bid for the top job when union elections take place in November.

The board is considering affiliation of the union to the Canadian Labor Congress since a firm commitment to the effect that Hall and Banks was removed.

Also conferring are two brothers, Albert of Detroit, Michigan and Frank of Belleville and five grandchildren.

Political Issues Overshadow Trade Talks

GENEVA (Reuters) — Political issues overshadowed the world trade conference Wednesday, prompting a walkout by Soviet bloc delegates and a demand for the withdrawal of Portugal and South Africa.

When the delegate of Nationalist China rose to speak, the representatives of the Soviet bloc left the hall. Earlier in the debate they deplored the absence of Communist China from the conference.

In still another political note injected into the session, Cambodian Trade Minister Nouth Kim reiterated the proposal of Cambodian head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk for a 14-nation conference to be held here to guarantee his country's neutrality.

Ghana's foreign minister also accused Portuguese of "slaughtering our defenceless brothers and sisters" in Portuguese East Africa.

Latin American delegates were reported to be generally opposed to ousting South Africa but were believed willing to demonstrate their opposition to the policy of apartheid (racial segregation) by with drawing from the conference when South African Trade Minister Nico Diederichs delivers his speech later in the conference.

Apparent Split In Communist Party in Cuba

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The Cuban Supreme Court sentenced a Communist leader to six years in the climax of a trial that made public an apparent split in Cuba's Communist party.

The verdict, announced by Havana radio monitored in Miami, seemed to have no bearing on the outcome of the apparent party fight since Castro was believed to have been trying to maintain unity.

The Communist, Marcos Rodriguez Alfonso, 26, was convicted of betraying four revolutionaries to police during the regime of Fulgencio Batista in 1957.

Reports circulated that testimony in the first trial had been suppressed to spare high-ranking old guard Communists in the Castro government. The premier then intervened and demanded the new trial. Proceedings were carried by the Cuban radio network.

Prince, Beatles and Profumo Lumped Together as Sinners

LONDON (AP) — Prince Philip, the Beatles, John Profumo and Harold Macmillan were among sundry Sunday sinners listed today by the Lord's Day Observance Society in its report on British manners and morals during 1963.

"A most distasteful and extraordinary year," said the society.

"The most alarming feature of 1963 was the Profumo affair followed by the almost unbelievable exploit of the mail train robbery," the report said.

"Important and serious though both these incidents were, they were but symptoms of a serious condition in the life of the nation as a whole."

The society, taking note of Prince Philip's habit of playing polo on Sunday afternoons lamented that members of the Royal Family "continue their indulgence in Sunday sport."

The Beatles were lumped with "bingo, bowling alleys and other bamboozlers" for playing their trade on Sunday.

As for others who work on Sunday, the report said:

"The ultimate fall of Mr. Harold Macmillan might never have occurred if the leaders of the nation had paid heed to God's word and sought His ways—instead of holding political conferences on making journeys upon His day."

37 Associations Get $540,396 In Sport Grants

OTTAWA (CP) — Grants totalling $540,396 to 37 national associations connected with sports ranging from cricket to snow-shoeing were announced today by Health Minister Judy LaMarsh.

The grants, designed to give priority to leadership training, were made on recommendation of the National Advisory Council on Fitness and Amateur Sport. Awards under the program, which came into effect two years ago, now total $1,700,000.

Largest grant was $51,133 to expand the Royal Canadian Legion's national track and field clinic and establish coaching clinics in each province.

The Amateur Athletic Union of Canada receives $50,383 towards holding national championships and coaching clinics, as well as for a junior Olympic training plan for track and field.

L'Association Canadienne des Centres de Loisirs receives $42,000 towards leadership training courses, the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association is given $50,000 for national hockey leadership courses at five universities.

Coaching and leadership training is also featured in grants to the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association, Canadian Lawn Tennis Association and the YMCA and YWCA.

Assistance is given in the Canadian Olympic Association — $30,000 towards meeting teams and the holding of championships and tournaments in such sports as soccer, table tennis, basketball, skiing, lawn bowling, swimming, cricket and golf.

STEP U PPROPAGANDA

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. information agency says Communist propaganda aimed at the West reached a record high of 4,288 hours a week in 1963. This represents an 11-per cent increase over 1962, USIA said Wednesday. Among the 67 languages the Communists use to beam their propaganda are such obscure ones as Bambara —spoken by about 3,000,000 people in West Africa—and Guarani—a dialect of Indians in Paraguay.

Pressures Must Be Resisted Boards Told

OTTAWA (CP) — Some 375 members of Ontario's French-language school boards were urged Wednesday to resist pressure from taxpayers who think only of their individual interests.

The advice came from Msgr. C. A. Demers of Ottawa, moral adviser to the Ontario Association of Bilingual School Boards (L'Association des Commissions des Ecoles Bilingues d'Ontario), in an address to the group's annual meeting.

School board members must act and make decisions according to their conscience and the common good of the students, he said, without regard for the electoral concurrence or the narrow opposition of a few taxpayers.

Msgr. Demers said some school boards have been denounced unjustly because their decisions are the due for a school, the hiring of certain teachers or administrative matters did not please a small group of citizens or even one individual.

The three-day meeting was opened by outgoing President Raymond Cote of North Bay.

He and other speakers expressed satisfaction with the increased grants to separate schools announced by the Ontario government in January.

Mr. Cote said the new plan already has made it possible for a number of separate school boards to reduce their taxes.

HALIFAX (CP) — Richard Astop of Montreal, a 19-year-old sailor who missed a trip to Cyprus aboard the aircraft carrier Bonaventure, was fined $100 in police court here Wednesday for stabbing another sailor.

Astop was on remand when the Bonaventure sailed. He pleaded guilty to assaulting Wayne Chesley, March 16. Chesley has been released from hospital.

Ice Jam in Moira Fifty Years Ago

Fifty years ago yesterday, on April 1 of 1914, the ice on the Moira River, broke loose at the Grand Trunk Railway bridge, (the CNR bridge at College St.) and began to move down through the city. When the ice reached the upper bridge, according to reports in the newspapers of the time, it piled up against the piers and up to the superstructure. The deck of the bridge was shifted along the piers, and one pier was shifted from its base. People watching the ice from the bridge ran for their lives. Howard Aselstine of Belleville was just 21 years old when it happened and he was standing by with his new camera, a British-made Ensign camera. He snapped this picture minutes after the pier, (farthest from the camera in this picture) shifted. The picture was taking from the left hand side of the roadway, looking south over the bridge. Water at this point was more than three feet deep at the time, because of Cooper's dam (behind the present Gerald Joyce Real Estate office).

Students Want EOKA Leader Back on Cyprus

CP from Reuters-AP

NICOSIA — Several thousand Greek-Cypriot students paraded through the streets of Nicosia today calling for "Enosis"—the union of Cyprus with Greece—and the return of former EOKA leader Gen. George Grivas to Cyprus.

The students marched to the presidential palace of Archbishop Makarios.

"Dighenis must return to this Greek island of Cyprus," students placards said. "Dighenis" was General Grivas' underground name during the EOKA campaign against the British.

A United Nations spokesman said the island was quiet today. There were no major incidents overnight.

ORDERS RETURN

In Athens, the Greek government ordered Greek troops stationed in Cyprus to leave their positions and return to their camp.

Turkey has refused to return her troops to barracks in the island.

While Nicosia and the surrounding suburbs were quiet, a Turkish-Cypriot was killed and two were wounded in the northwest area of the island Wednesday near the Turkish village of Seimani.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said the government is hiding facts about the unemployment insurance fund.

Labor Minister MacEachen angrily denied it and a hassle broke out over the issue, leading to a special night sitting.

External Affairs Minister Martin declined to give details of the UN's directives to the Cyprus peacekeeping force.

Mr. MacEachen reported that the unemployment insurance fund was $4,500,000 in the red when the fiscal year ended Tuesday night.

Michael Starr (PC — Ontario) said the government tried to hide the fund's bankruptcy but didn't get away with it.

Bldg. Permits During March Total $82,900

TRENTON—Building values in Trenton for March stood at $82,900, and eight permits were issued from the office of building inspector William Anderson.

In March, 1963, nine permits were issued and the value was set at $8,845.

From Jan. 1 to March 31 of this year, 26 permits, valued at $229,170 have been issued. For the same period last year, 25 permits were issued; value, $52,398. This is (obviously) an increase of one permit... but ...an increase of $176,772, moneywise.

In 1962, the first three months of the year saw two permits issued for new dwellings with the value set at $10,040. The nine permits for new dwellings issued in the first three months of this year, were valued at $196,440, roughly ten times as much.

In March of this year, two permits, valued at $18,000 were issued for new houses; three valued at $57,000 for semi-detached dwellings; two for dwelling repair, valued at $4,900 and one fur a commercial premises repair, valued at $3,000.

"Wild Ones" Challenged to Come Over

DOUGLAS, Isle of Man (AP)—This resort island in the Irish Sea challenged Britain's teen-age "wild ones" Wednesday to come over, cause trouble, and get a thrashing.

"We still have the birch here for people up to 21," warned William Quayle, chairman of the island's juvenile court.

"It is the greatest deterrent against hooligans. If they try to invade and terrorize our island this summer their activities will be nipped in the bud."

The Isle of Man is part of the United Kingdom but has its own laws. Birching has been abolished in the rest of Britain.

Hugh Radcliffe, a member of the island's ancient Parliament, said he believes British should bring back the birch.

"The ignominy is the real deterrent."

timates for speedy pre-recess handling. The plight of the insurance fund showed why this was done, he said.

ASKS REASON

Former Conservative labor minister Michael Starr asked why the spending estimates had been delayed for 25 days if the unemployment insurance fund was in urgent need of help.

Mr. MacEachen said it was reasonable to expect the supplementary estimates to be passed with normal dispatch.

He said facts about the fund were available from the Unemployment Insurance Commission and also from the budget while paper tabled last month. The Opposition should do its homework rather than shout about concealment.

Part of the appropriations bill was approved by the Commons. During study of the final spending items for the external affairs department, Mr. Diefenbaker said the United Nations peacekeeping force in Cyprus is being generally criticized as powerless.

While not endorsing this view, he said Canadians had a right to know about the general directives for the force and how it was to discharge its duties. The UN presently has a large Canadian troop contingent.

External Affairs Minister Martin declined to give any details of the UN directives, although he told the House that the government is satisfied they will permit the force to discharge its obligations as effectively as circumstances on the

Target of Satirists

The medical profession is in trouble.

Suddenly doctors have become a favorite target of cartoonists.

And of satirists working in other mediums.

There was, for instance, that wicked little sketch in "Spring Thaw" at the Collegiate here last week, in which the disappearance of a small doctor was diagnosed by the hospital chief of staff as "the explanation of why that pregnant woman left here larger than when she came in."

The jab had its origin, of course, in the two recent inquests in Ontario into the deaths of women who had had surgical implements left inside them after operations.

But the assault on the profession is not confined to Ontario.

Just the other day we saw a cartoon originating in Denmark in which a doctor agrees with a patient that her plight is unusual—her broken leg has been set back to front.

Nor are operating room mishaps the only targets. The Vancouver Sun prints an acid cartoon in which a doctor explains to a friend why he refused to answer a call from his brother, dying after an automobile accident. "I finally had to ask myself 'Am I my brother's doctor?'", he explains.

This difficulty in obtaining a doctor is not confined to Vancouver. We have heard of people here who have had similar trouble. Basically, it is much more serious than operating room mishaps. The latter are rare and even the controversy with political overtones in one of the recent Ontario cases would probably have failed to fan the fire of satirists had there not already existed a tide of feeling against the profession.

It is deplorable that such feeling should exist. Of all the professions, that of medicine makes probably the heaviest demands upon its practitioners.

Many a doctor has served to the limits of physical endurance.

Yet the profession cannot afford to ignore criticism, for it clearly has some basis in fact. Conditions have changed. Prosperity and insurance plans have made it financially possible for many people to consult doctors in cases which, in other years, would have gone untreated. It is scarcely surprising, for a profession being human, are not immune from that desire for shorter working hours which is displayed in practically every other line of work. These facts, combined with the increased mobility of the country's population, have severed those once-close ties between doctor and patient.

Perhaps the medical profession needs to make some provisions to assure that there is always medical care available to meet cases of emergencies.

India's Multiplying Millions

Ten years ago only one-third of the babies born in India lived to reach adulthood. Today two-thirds survive to that age.

The Associated Press is authority for those statements, both of which will come as a shock to the average Canadian reader.

Despite all we have read about poverty and disease in Asia, it seems incredible that only a decade ago two out of every three children in India should have perished before reaching manhood or womanhood.

It is equally surprising is the fact that in such a short time the death toll has been halved. It speaks highly for the energy and efficiency with which the Indian Government has attacked the problem.

Yet this success is, in itself, a danger, for it has resulted in the population multiplying at a rate which threatens to produce an eventual catastrophe beside which the old death rate will appear almost inconsequential. It could lead to a situation unique in the history of the human race and comparable only to what sometimes happens in the animal kingdom, when a certain species multiplies so rapidly that it outgrows the available food supply, and decimation results.

Now a more drastic remedy is being tried—sterilization. The Hindus has no religious scruples against either contraceptives or sterilization. Still, to date those who have been saving lives and increasing the life-span of Indians have been meeting with much greater success than those who have been attempting to limit reproduction.

This is no problem for the distant future. Within the lifetime of many Canadians the population crisis in India will have been reached and the result—either population control by famine or by voluntary measures—will be evident.

Ottawa Offbeat
Private Members' Hours Often Very, Very Private Indeed

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Parliamentary Easter Recess notes off the reportorial cuff . . .

A dream, he says:

Once again Prime Minister Pearson has been reminded of his statement last fall, when boosting Parliamentary pay from $10,000 to $18,000, that being an MP had become a "full-time job," presumably requiring full-time attention.

He still hasn't altered such formula for bringing about the highly desirable state of attendance-attainment among MPs and just possibly during this holiday recess of the Commons may be interesting on the wryly wise words of one of his own followers in the House on this still very live issue, at least among the taxpayers — subject of heeping noses to the Parliamentary grindstone.

David G. Hahn, Liberal MP for Toronto Broadview, was speaking, and this is how Hansard records his words of wisdom.

"Once upon a time I had a dream, and in that dream I was up on my feet speaking to an empty House of Commons. Then I woke up and realized that it was not a dream at all. It was a real life Friday afternoon in the Commons and Private Members' Hour."

HIGH PRAISE FOR CHALK

"I don't mind standing before an empty House speaking in Private Members' Hour on Friday afternoons.

"It is useful to get experience in speaking in this Chamber at any time, and I have also in mind the cost of operation of this House, I think this experience is extremely costly one".

Now, whether, indeed, it is costly depends on how you view the little matter of $40,000.

That is what the cold-eyed accountants in the Federal Finance Department have decided it will be the cost of that salary increase for the MPs, apart altogether from the higher price tag for the Senators.

Last year, reports the Finance department in the Federal Estimates, it took $2,849,000 to pay the Honorable Members.

This year, it's going to cost just short of twice as much: $5,333,000.

The difference: $2,484.00.

The whole Parliamentary package — MPs, Senators, officers, staff, travel expenses, phones and all things in "hospitality", as the cocktail hour is known on The Hill—runs to a total in the $13,550,220, up $3,442,335 from last year's $9,107,885.

Now just how "expensive", as MP David Hahn put it, is the "experience" of standing up before "an empty House during Private Members' Hour"?

Well, the House sits an average 25 hours weekly.

And the average Session or Sessions in almost any ordinary year occupy three quarters of it, running to some 40 weeks.

$13,456 AN HOUR

So, take that total, 40 times 25, or, 1,000 hours.

Then divide $12,550,220 by 1,000 and you get the hourly cost of Parliament: $13,550. All chargeable, really to the MPs.

For the whole Parliamentary establishment of officers and staff, even, in a sense, the Senate, for all practical political purposes exists for and because of the House of Commons.

But even at $12,550 an hour, there is at least one MP who doesn't think that's worth it. A freshman, he, of course.

Says the Grit, Liberal MP for Renfrew: "There are potentially many great firebrand orators who would never get out of the bullpen if it weren't for the Private Members' Hour."

But while Private Members' Hour — when the usually silent and often sat-upon Backbench MP can speak his piece — ordinarily sails on Fridays other and more important business is always scheduled.

Like that recent Friday when the Commons sat late to over-ride Real Caouette and his Creditistes and give the Van Doos their marching orders for Cyprus. That was as important a day and question as there has been this Session.

Another Link To Past Gone

Toronto Globe and Mail

Tears flowed last week when they closed down the Aragon Ballroom in Chicago. Here it was, in the 1930's, that band leaders like Wayne King, Benny Goodman and Harry James made music as sweet as was heard before or since. Here it was, under cardboard moon and paper stars, that they played Deepthing, Sweethearts, Good night Sweetheart, Whistling in the Dark, and King's theme song, The Walk You Saved for Me.

So vanishes yet another remnant of the days of wonderful, terrible, unforgettable time it was — poverty and passion, Prohibition and moonlight, a brave new world in every nickel and dollar. Days of wine (40 cents a jug) and roses (the ones Aimee Semple McPherson always sold) — days of William Powell and Myrna Loy, Father Divine and Father Coughlin, Amelia Fox's Terrible Trolley and Walt Disney's Three Little Pigs, swagger suits and Eugenie hats, peewee golf and triple-header ice cream cones, Rudy Vallee and Corrigan flew the Atlantic; Joe Penner tried (unsuccessfully) to sell a duck; everybody talked about a new novel called Gone With the Wind. And the whole population of York Township was on relief.

Those who lived through it will never forget it. Those who didn't, will never understand. They were living, perhaps, to have missed the misery of the 1930s, but they missed the magic, too — a magic missing from any subsequent decade, and certainly missing from this one. Knock, knock! Who's there? Automation, nuclear fall - out, and The Beatles.

Cash Payments Will Be Made On Retirement

OTTAWA (CP)—The defence department is considering a plan to make cash settlement to members of the armed forces who will be forced to retire before reaching retirement age by integration of the services.

A defence department spokesman said Wednesday that the plan still is in a tentative stage. A firm decision on how the plan will work will not be made until present proposals have been sifted by treasury board.

Under the service integration plan announced by Defence Minister Hellyer, some 10,000 service personnel will become surplus over the next three years.

During this period this figure will be reduced by attrition—deaths, normal retirements and personnel leaving the services on their own initiative before reaching retirement age.

For the balance who will be forced to retire, the idea is to give them a cash settlement to compensate them for the fact that they will be retiring with a smaller pension than they would have received if they had served until retirement age.

The amount of each cash settlement would be governed by the amount of pension to which a serviceman will be entitled at earlier than normal retirement and his age and consequent ability to obtain a job.

That was the last report Wednesday when doctors had noted a slight improvement in the 84-year - old general's lowered blood pressure and control of the troublesome and sporadic internal bleeding.

Minas Gerais marched into the city. They were reviewed by Gov. Carlos Lacerda of Guanabara (Rio) state, arch foe of Goulart.

Goulart fled from Rio de Janeiro Wednesday as rebel army units and civil militiamen marched on the city, vowing to force him from office and into "the red yoke" from Brazil. He flew to Brasilia and then to Porto Alegre, 670 miles southwest of Rio de Janeiro.

CLAIMS ARMY SUPPORT

There, in his home state, he claimed support of the strong 3rd Army. A statement read in his name over Porto Alegre radio declared: "The hour of mobilization, the hour of vigilance is here."

Radio Liberty, in the industrial city of Sao Paulo, an anti-Goulart stronghold, said there were unconfirmed reports Goulart had fled to Asuncion, Paraguay, and asked for political asylum.

In Brasilia, Auro Andrade, president of the Brazilian senate declared the presidency vacant. Mazilli, next in line because Brazil has no vice-president, took the oath of office at 3:30 a.m. today.

The revolutionary generals met in Rio and announced that calm reigned throughout the country.

Reuters news agency said Mazilli was given Goulart's post after the Congress declared it vacant because Goulart was away from the seat of government—officially Brasilia is the capital—too much during times of stress. Mazilli is president of the Chamber of Deputies.

The chief of the president's household told the summoned Congress that Goulart flew to Porto Alegre, capital of the southern state of Rio Grande do Sul.

The official Radio Liberty network of the new regime said Gen. Amaury Kruel, who was commander of the rebel 2nd Army based at Sao Paulo, was appointed commander of the "democratic forces."

ORDERS STANDBY

It also issued an air force command to all personnel to stand by on alert "due to grave developments in the last few hours."

Government sources in Brasilia said Goulart was understood to have resigned early, but he said on arrival from Rio de Janeiro here Wednesday night: "I will not resign nor shoot myself in the heart."

Under the constitution, Mazilli was next in line for the presidency. Brazil has no vice-president.

However, The Associated Press said that legally Goulart would remain president as long as he didn't resign or leave Brazilian territory.

As Goulart made his dash south, the navy ministry announced a destroyer and a submarine were sailing toward Porto Alegre to block the harbor entrance. A spokesman said three or four navy ships were "standing by to sail at any moment."

Reuters reported the switch of the loyalist 3rd Army to the rebel side, quoting the army spokesman.

Goulart's brother-in-law, Leonel Brizola, had been reported in control of the 3rd Army, based in Rio Grande do Sul and the most powerful of the country's four armies.

UNIT REBELS

But rebel leaders had said one of the 3rd Army's strongest units had rebelled against Brizola at a rail centre near the Uruguayan border and was headed toward Porto Alegre.

Brizola, a Yankee-baiting politician with workers' support, is a former governor of Goulart's home state and a power in Brazil's southland.

Although the revolution began Tuesday, it has apparently been almost bloodless. Only two casualties were reported — pro-Goulart students killed in a clash Wednesday with troops at Recife.

Goulart scoffed at rebel victory claims as he left by plane with his wife and two children in Joao Brasilia for Porto Alegre, 670 miles southwest of Rio de Janeiro and the capital of Rio Grande do Sol.

The coalition of anti-Goulart governors and military chiefs, [illegible] Goulart's ouster [illegible], accusing him of seeking to turn Latin America's largest country of 70,000,000 population into another Cuba.

The rebel proclamation of victory [illegible] demonstrations in Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo, Brazil's largest cities. A carnival mood reigned along Rio's Copacabana as servicemen showered the streets with paper and waved sheets, towels and handkerchiefs from apartment house windows.

In Sao Paulo, ticker tape descended from skyscrapers and streets were filled with cars, their horns blaring. Radio announcers shouted jubilantly, "Long live democracy, long live Brazil."

An apparent strong man in the revolt was Gen. Amaury Kruel, war minister in Goulart's cabinet in 1962. Thousands of troops under his command headed toward Rio from Sao Paulo to take control of the city. Goulart's steady drift to the left had aroused staunch conservatives, anti-Communist and Roman Catholic opposition. The tensions came to a climax last week with a 40-hour mutiny by 1,425 sailors against conservative control of the navy.

Monday, a U.S. state department official in Washington said the situation in Brazil has "steadily deteriorated" and expressed concern over increasing Communist influence in the largest and potentially richest country in Latin America.

Although he has insisted he is not a Communist, Goulart said in a nation-wide television address Monday, "there is no force capable of turning us aside from our program."

That program was most recently capped by decrees expropriating land for landless peasants and seizing Brazil's remaining private oil companies. He also urged legalizing the Communist party, outlawed by the courts in 1947.

LEFT HASTILY

Goulart, a wealthy rancher who succeeded to the presidency in 1961, hastily departed from Rio as the rebellious armies headed toward the city Wednesday and at least eight states were reported lined up against him.

In an apparent gesture to show he still exercised presidential authority, Goulart signed a decree nationalizing all gasoline distributing companies shortly after arriving in Brasilia.

Goulart's chief aide went on television in Brasilia to dispute a rebel claim that the president had resigned and said Goulart would make a stand in Porto Alegre.

"My mandate is untouchable," Goulart was said to have told a group of pro-government deputies.

Governor Carlos Lacerda of Guanabara state, an avowed opponent of Goulart, said on television in Rio Wednesday that Goulart tendered his resignation to Congress "after hiding all day" in Rio and then flying to Brasilia.

The army-controlled Brazilian Radio Nacional announced that Congress President Mazilli succeeded Goulart. It said a jetliner was requisitioned and Goulart might be going into exile.

ARE NEGOTIATING

After Goulart's departure from Rio, the army said rebel chief Kruel was negotiating with Acting War Minister Morais Accorsa. The radio also arrested the pro-Goulart governor of Rio de Janeiro state.

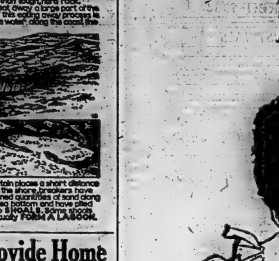
In Porto Alegre, a radio station identifying itself as Radio Legality said "Brazil will not accept dictatorship." It said Brazil's strongest military forces was united in its support of Goulart.

Mazilli, 53, is a lawyer. He has been acting president four times in the past three times in the absence of Goulart or President Janio Quadros from the country, and when Quadros resigned in 1961 while Goulart, then vice-president, was on a trip to Communist China.

Goulart was [illegible] vice-president of the country in the elections of 1960 which saw Quadros elected president.

Quadros resigned in August, 1961, and Goulart succeeded him in September of that year.

Goulart was a member of the minority labor party in the Congress and reorganized his cabinet in June, 1962, to form a coalition in order to institute a series of economic constitutional reforms.



The next election for the president was set for 1965.

Halifax May Provide Home For Models of Ships, Relics

HALIFAX (CP)—The biggest and best collection of original ship models and marine relics in Nova Scotia is gathering dust in a brewery warehouse in downtown Halifax.

The city, conscious of its seafaring history and aware that the tourists will pay to see things marine, may be on the brink of providing a permanent home for the collection.

The Maritime Museum Association, a private organization supported mainly by grants from the province and city, has been dismayed by the many times over the years its precious and fragile collection has had to be moved.

It originally was displayed in a building in the navy dockyard here. The structure was torn down in 1950 to make way for the foundations of the Angus L. Macdonald bridge linking Halifax and Dartmouth.

The federal government invited the association to transfer its collection to the Citadel, a fort started in 1749, the year Halifax was founded, on a hill overlooking the downtown area.

But, says association director Niels Jannasch, the transfer was never meant to be anything but temporary since a marine museum didn't fit in with the federal government's plan to restore the Citadel.

By 1958 the portion of the fort housing the marine collection had deteriorated to the point where the need for new quarters became urgent. But it wasn't until 1961 that the association found a place to store its displays.

Oland and Son Limited, a Halifax brewery, gave the association use of an empty warehouse and the models and relics haven't been open to the public since.

Seeking a new home, the association found two stone warehouses on the Halifax waterfront that had been built before the War of 1812. One had been owned by Enos Collins, a Nova Scotia privateer who stowed in it loot taken from American merchantmen during the war.

The roofs were gone but otherwise the buildings were confirmed by an architect to be in excellent shape.

In 1962 the city bought the land and buildings and plans for using them to house the museum were drawn up.

The museum association, recalling that 200,000 visitors a year had seen the museum when it was on Citadel Hill, advised the city that at least 75,000 could be expected at the new site. It estimated admission fees would bring $43,000 a year and offered 10 per cent of the first $20,000 and 50 per cent of all remaining profits to the city.

Consideration was given to a proposal to build a marina for motorboats along the waterfront site and a seafood restaurant on the property.

However, since then Charles Vaughn has been elected mayor by replacing John Lloyd, now Liberal MP for Halifax, and there are several new aldermen.

Mr. Jannasch says it's not certain that Mayor Vaughn will want to stick to the plan, and at least one alderman, Harry Butler, says he disapproves of the site.

"He's late starting the fight all over again," says Mr. Jannasch of the new uncertainty.

Malenkov Still Free in Russia

LONDON (AP)—Moscow radio said today that former premier Georgi M. Malenkov is no worse off than former presidents Truman and Eisenhower.

Broadcasting in English to North America, a Moscow commentator said a listener had asked what had happened to Malenkov.

This was the answer:

"Mr. Malenkov was released from his post according to legal, constitutional procedure by a democratically elected body, the Soviet parliament.

"Now who said what happened to him? Why should something happen to him?

"There are no political prisoners in the U.S.S.R. and Mr. Malenkov is no worse off than Mr. Truman or General Eisenhower."

Malenkov and other members of an "anti-party group" were ousted from the Soviet inner circle in 1957. The Soviet government later announced Malenkov had been assigned to operate a hydroelectric station in Siberia. In 1960, he was reported still somewhere in the east.

K...PECTED TROUBLE

Trouble had been expected during the eve of EOKA Day on Cyprus Island where fighting between the Greek and Turkish communities resulted in UN intervention. But there was nothing more than a few stray shots overhead from the usual and inaccurate exchange of fire between Greeks and Turks on opposite sides of the cease-fire line.

The Turks are hemmed in in the Trathonas area but still control the highway to Kyrenia, 18 miles to the north on the coast. If there is more trouble, it is expected in this area.

The British Sherwood Foresters battalion shares policing of this district with the Canadians.

It is hoped to remove all British soldiers from such sensitive areas and replace them with other United Nations soldiers of the Finnish, Irish and Swedish contingents when they arrive.

It is believed there would be fewer repercussions if a Canadian, Finn, Swede or Irishman from the UN force shot a Cypriot than if a British member of the UN force did.

RELEASE AGREEMENT

Meanwhile, at the United Nations headquarters in New York a detailed agreement outlining the legal status of the UN force on Cyprus was made public, disclosing that the UN and Cyprus have agreed that Cypriot security forces will assist the UN force in maintaining order.

The agreement was reached Tuesday in an exchange of letters between Greek - Cypriot Foreign Minister Spyros Kyprianou and UN Secretary-General U Thant.

It says that in event the UN commander, Lt.-Gen. P. S. Gyani, said, he did, it is to be provided "as far as possible" in a spirit of co-operation, the Cypriot security forces request assistance from the UN force. It will be up to the UN commander to decide whether he may meet such requests within the framework of the Security Council resolution of March 4 that called for the creation of the UN force.

In another development, Premier Ismet Inonu of Turkey rejected a request by Makarios for the withdrawal of the Turkish army contingent based on the island from its present position on the outskirts of the Turkish quarter of Nicosia to its permanent camp.

WANTS ORDER FIRST

In a note to Markarios, Inonu replied: "The withdrawal of the Turkish contingent from its present secure position can be taken up only after security and constitutional order are completely restored throughout the island."

A Cyprus government spokesman said Turkey violated Cyprus territorial integrity when it ordered its troops to move out of their base last December. He added that Cyprus has already complained to the Security Council about the matter.

The spokesman said Turkey's continuing refusal to have its troops withdraw to their camp creates an intolerable situation.

A high Greek-Cypriot source said the president Markarios may call for the immediate abrogation of the treaty of guarantee and alliance under which both Greece and Turkey have troops permanently based on the island. The source said Markarios may claim that the Turks have violated the treaty by deploying their contingent without government authority outside their base.

Four Members Of Family Killed, Car Hits Tree

AYR, Ont. (CP)—Four members of a family were killed Wednesday when the car they had just bought bit a tree beside a country road near this village, 15 miles northwest of Brantford.

Dead are Lloyd Harvey, 37, his wife Theresa, 37, their daughter Anna Marie, 5, and their son John, 6. They all lived near Bright, 10 miles west there.

with a handful of young men—university students or otherwise — carrying a placard with the first two words of the old French revolution rallying call: "Liberty — Equality — Fraternity." Never, in this case, the last word was torn off.

WORK WITH POLICE

Leaders of the group met with police authorities an hour before the march started and cooperated fully. The demonstrators gathered first at Laval University and met the out-of-town contingents on the Plains of Abraham—where Wolfe defeated Montcalm in 1759 — before marching to the legislature.

Their leaders were equipped with walkie-talkie radio sets, sound amplifiers and a public address system mounted on a truck.

The temperature was 19 degrees, and a 15-mile-an-hour wind swept the open area in front of the legislature.

The chants of the demonstrators could be heard faintly in the federal - provincial conference room, whose second-floor windows faced on the demonstration outside, but a source said proceedings carried on normally. Some delegates went to the windows during a tea break.

Later, Prime Minister Pearson commented he had heard the commotion during the conference meeting and that it seemed from the sound to be "a normal student demonstration."

He said he has found from experience that "students are passionately interested in change."

KEPT OUT

None of the demonstrators or their leaders was permitted to enter the building. Security precautions, unusually tight for such a conference, were strengthened during the march.

During the industry minister's address the crowd's mood changed from one of curious youthful jubilance to angry disappointment at not hearing directly from Premier Lesage.

The speeches were made from a stone parapet in front of the main door to the legislature, beside a blue and white provincial flag and a bronze monument depicting the original Indian residents of Quebec. One snowball caught the Indian chief square on the nose.

While Mr. Levesque and Albert Gervais, Union Nationale MLA for Montmorency, addressed the crowd from one side of the statue, march leaders on the other side led the crowd in shouts of "We want Lesage." Many in the crowd turned their backs on the speakers.

After Mr. Levesque's speech the crowd dispersed rapidly. The last act was to burn the placards in a huge bonfire built on the roadway leading to the main door.

textbook publisher, said S. R. Coles, a public school principal, looked at different sides of educational advancement and came up with demands for changes.

Mr. McMaster said untold numbers of students are still being sacrificed by a lack of liaison between elementary and secondary school authorities.

Mr. Coles, principal of a Toronto public school where grades are actually being eliminated, said pupils are entitled to an education that "is not humiliating or a breeder of inferiority."

Mr. Coles said a child "never shouldn't be expected to advance at the same speed through each grade" and should be put in various rooms according to ability.

Psychology Professor Ralph W. Dent of the Ontario Agricultural College in Guelph told teachers that children with low IQs can't learn as much as other children, although it may take them longer.

He suggested teachers can "manipulate" their teaching so there is no temptation for the slow learner to retreat.

strong ones—over the federal government moving into Quebec's educational field with new plans for interest-free loans to university students and family allowances for 18- and 17-year-olds who stay in school.

3. Several Prairie and Maritime premiers said the federal student loans should be administered by their governments, meshed with existing provincial loan plans. A federal official indicated this may be done.

Premier Stanfield of Nova Scotia pressed for federal acceptance of provincial jurisdiction over offshore mineral rights—a question in which the Atlantic provinces, Quebec and British Columbia have common interests. The federal government, while not agreeing to the request, promised to consider it.

4. There was further discussion of the complex problem of how provinces could "contract out" of certain shared-cost programs—assuming full responsibility for their costs while getting extra taxing powers as compensation. Officials indicated no final solution to this complex matter can be expected soon.

The hottest issue, however, was the pension one, and in it were signs of a political pressure-play between the federal and Ontario governments.

WANTS ONTARIO IN

Ottawa wants Ontario, with its big population and wealth, to be covered by the Canada Pension Plan. Premier Robarts has said Ontario shouldn't be "coerced" while Ottawa allows Quebec to be exempt.

Mr. Robarts told the conference Wednesday his province would enter a national plan which "embraces all of Canada." But if it wasn't "truly national," Ontario reserved the right to decide whether to go along with Ottawa or to introduce its own pension plan.

Finance Minister Gordon said he believes only one province—Quebec—will stay out of the federal scheme.

"This is something that everybody wants and I can't believe anyone will knock it on its head," he said.

But Robarts disagreed that he is in the role of making or breaking the federal plan.

"I don't think Quebec has been killed this morning," he told reporters, following his conference statement.

THEY BICKER

There was some bickering over a constitutional issue in the pension talks.

The federal legislation before Parliament contains one term—Section 94—providing that the federal plan won't apply in any province that decides to implement a provincial plan giving comparable benefits available to everyone.

Both Premier Robarts and Premier Roblin of Manitoba argued in short whether this is constitutional. Mr. Roblin said it appeared to empower Ottawa to decide whether the provinces are fulfilling their constitutional responsibilities. It would open the door for various kinds of contention" in future.

But Prime Minister Pearson said it is not unconstitutional "in any way, shape or form."

Premier Roblin also asked that 100 per cent—not just half —of funds in the federal plan be guaranteed in provincial and municipal bonds.

..RE WARMER

Other provincial delegations are warmer towards the federal pension legislation.

All four Atlantic premiers and those from British Columbia and Alberta expressed approval. Saskatchewan's Health Minister Blakeney said his province will join too provided four or five others are in it, including neighboring Alberta and Manitoba.

There were some reservations, from Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Manitoba, that the federal plan won't cover a large enough share of their provinces' people. Mr. Pearson was reported to have expressed the hope that the federal plan could be improved in time to meet these objections.

Women's Institutes

MELROSE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The Melrose W.I. convened at the home of Mrs. Roy McLaren for the March meeting with an excellent attendance of members and several visitors. The president, Mrs. M. Lester welcomed all and presided over the business period during which a nominating committee, comprised of Mrs. H. McMechan, Mrs. A. English and Mrs. L. Gnaedinger, was appointed to bring in a slate of officers at the next meeting. Committees were chosen to make final arrangements for the dance April 3 in Melrose Hall to help finance swimming lessons for young people this summer; a "Spring Tea" in May with Mrs. J. Haggerty, president of F.W.I.C. as guest; also a banquet in the near future were planned.

Mrs. K. McMechan reported on the District Directors' meeting recently held in Belleville and announced the "District Annual" for next Hastings on May 21 at Foxboro.

In the absence of the convener on Canadian Industries, Mrs. Ross Bissell, Mrs. Earl Badgley acted as leader for the balance of the program which proved most interesting. She introduced the guest speaker, Mr. Keith Bennett from the Ontario Hydro Commission who showed an educational film entitled "Correct Wise" along with a taped commentary which stressed and illustrated basic electrical safety. Some important points to remember were: use appliances approved by Canadian Standards Association; make sure extension cords aren't frayed or damaged; select the proper fuses for regular circuits; turn off main switch when changing fuses; never use a substitute for a fuse; use proper guards on lamps on extension cords; don't climb trees near electrical wires; fly kites a long distance from power-lines, keep away from fallen wires and report quickly to local authorities; keep ladders and aerials away from overhead wires; have all wiring installations inspected for your own protection.

A question period followed and Mr. Bennett obliged by answering all inquiries. Pamphlets were distributed outlining the safe use of electricity in the home with a list of "Do's and Don'ts".

Mrs. R. McLaren moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Bennett for his most interesting and informative film and explanation.

Several 4-H club girls were present who contributed to the program as follows: a piano solo by Miss D. Osborne and a speech "What Electricity Has Done for Farmers" given by Miss S. Laney who had recently given it at a speaking contest. Mrs. Badgley read a short poem and Mrs. D. Thompson conducted two timely contests in keeping with the topic which closed a most worth-while program, after which refreshments were served by the lunch committee.

Only Plastic Surgeon Can Advise on Nose Surgery

DEAR DORIS — Please, help me! I have had a few compliments on my figure and compliments on my large eyes and dainty mouth (as they say it to be); but no one has ever mentioned my nose, except my sister. She says it's too long and too hitnpy.

It's true. I broke it once, but it was not knocked out of place so I never had it set, and now I do have a fairly wide bridge on my nose, and a fairly large complex!

Now my sister points it out to a lot of people and they start looking at me and noticing too. I'm simply miserable. I find myself staring at all these models' profiles and wishing I had a nice shaped nose like them.

DORIS CLARE

Please give me some information on plastic surgery. Tell me, please, how much it would cost and if they can put you to sleep or do you have to stay awake? — TROUBLED.

DEAR TROUBLED — Silence your sister. She cannot realize what she is doing to you by drawing attention to this supposedly less attractive feature. In beauty work we concentrate on bringing out the good points.

Noses are often altered for the cosmetic effect, but this depends on how serious the situation is. Go with your mother to the doctor and talk it all over. Method, type of anaesthetic, cost, depend on the surgeon.

DEAR DORIS — Is it abnormal for one to daydream and talk to oneself? If so, what should a person do about it? — MRS. MUMBLE-JUMBLE.

DEAR MRS. MUMBLE-JUMBLE — No. Daydreaming is often creative and may mark the beginning of important action. We all do it. If truth were told, we'd find that most of us even talk out loud to ourselves, at least occasionally!

But if, in your case, daydreams are replacing activities in the real world, you'd better get a baby sitter and get mixing more.

DEAR DORIS — My parents are very understanding but do not allow me to have friends in while they are out. I have a responsibility to watch my five-year-old sister, and to make sure that my two brothers stay out of trouble. My mother trusts me; but it is O.K. to have a girl friend in, but when it comes to a boy it is out. She lets boys in when she is home. I am 14.

I am going steady with a boy for four months now, and would like to have him in for company. What do you think? — WONDERING.

DEAR WONDERING — That your mother has her head screwed on right. She knows all about the attraction two young people can have for each other; and that you can be happier, and safer from your own physical urges, if she is around.

Incidentally, 14 is far too young for going steady. There are the years for circulating.

Paris Abounds With Ideas Easy to Copy

By PEGG THARSIN

PARIS (Reuters)—Trimmings and accessories borrowed from the 1930s emerge as the most pleasant to the new spring fashion models here.

The mood epitomized by the "man's woman" is based on minute detail, rather than any vital change in silhouette. For once, last year's dress is just as good as it was last year.

Paris abounds with ideas which are easy to copy and adapt.

The essence of this year's "look" emerges in many details, ranging from a deflated hair style to the revival of belts and low-heel, two-toned shoes.

The new look decrees a small head. Hair is either bobbed in charleston styles or worn twisted back in a chignon, Coiffures are trimmed with hair bows and bandeaux, or hidden under symmetrical toques and turbans.

The dominant millinery trends are the Greta Garbo cloche, the sou'wester with stitched brim folded back off the brow, and Yves St. Laurent's squared brim sailor hats.

CAMELLIA STYLISH

If a single accessory could symbolize Paris fashions this spring it would be a white camellia. Every couture house revives the artificial camellia or gardenia buttonhole. Dior even discarded the traditional sprig of lily of the valley in favor of white camellias or burgundy red carnations pinned on a jacket revers, caught at the base of a white collar, or looped through a narrow, sash belt.

The most popular collections in Paris score with simple navy or black dresses, spotlighted by white collars and white accessories.

St. Laurent handles the effect with Puritanical simplicity. Other designers, like Cardin and Crahay of Lanvin, prefer frothier effects with layer-upon-layer collars of white organdy which appear as light as French pastry. Waistcoats, jabots, and modesty vests fill scooped neklines; Crahay shows double collars of white over black organdy.

Glenhyrst Gourmet Desserts

by Mary Moore

(First of Four Instalments).

In 1955 the City of Brantford, Ontario, was the recipient of a unique bequest from the late Edmund L. Cockshutt: Glenhyrst Gardens.

The bequest was accompanied by conditions which led to the appointment of an administrative commission.

A community arts centre was their goal and it has been attained with resounding success.

Dinner Menus

THURSDAY

Beef Biscuit Roll; Spanish Sauce; Buttered Carrot Coins; Spinach; Celery; Rhubarb Crunch; Tea.

SUNDAY

Roast Shoulder of Lamb; Mint Sauce; Curried Rice; Buttered Limas with Green Pepper; Perfection Salad on Crisp Lettuce; Mayonnaise; Butterscotch Sarvelan (see Friday); Coffee.

To maintain active progress Glenhyrst Arts Council, under sponsorship of the commission, co-ordinates dozens of cultural activities, accessible to all Brantford citizens, young and old.

As a showcase for their talents and skills the Council supports an annual Summer Festival. This Festival has a second major purpose of raising funds.

Highlighted on May 6th, 7th and 8th will be their annual Antiques Show and Sale. Rare treasures will be on display by selected dealers from all over Ontario. Another feature will be Chez Gourmet Pavilion—and there is where I come into the picture.

Some of the commission members made up four gourmet desserts and brought them to me to taste. In May they plan to make up these desserts and serve them to the hundreds of enthusiasts attending the Antiques Show and Gourmet Buffet.

I will give you the recipe for one of the four desserts now and follow up with one each week for the next three weeks. Hostesses with gourmet inspirations should start clipping.

STUFFED BAKED PEACHES.

6 large firm peaches (or 12 large canned peach halves), 3 tablespoons butter, 1½ tablespoons sugar, ¾ cup macaroon crumbs, 2 tablespoons chopped pecans (or peanuts), 1 egg yolk, beaten, 1 tablespoon cognac, 4 tablespoons Marsala wine or sweet sherry; ¼ cup peach juice or water.

Peel peaches, cut in halves, remove pits. Scoop out a little pulp, to enlarge hollow. Mash pulp. Cream butter and sugar, add macaroon crumbs, mashed peach pulp, nuts, egg yolk and cognac. Stuff peaches. Arrange in buttered baking dish and sprinkle with lemon wine on each. Pour juice or water into dish and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 30 minutes or until peaches are tender. (Bake canned peaches only 15 minutes.)

Note:—Next week I will give you the recipe for Egg Nog Mousse.

"You won't believe your eyes!"

I couldn't believe mine. I said it was time someone thought about the housewife — and now HOOVER has! They've taken the drudgery out of washday with a miracle machine that makes it fun. No wonder it's the most talked-about new appliance in Canada!

SEE THE NEW

HOOVER Washer-Spin Dryer

Washes and dries

24 lbs. of clothes in 30 minutes

YOU'LL SAY IT'S A WASHDAY MIRACLE

Here's what I saw! I saw a miracle in front of my eyes! I thought the man was crazy when he gave me a new white towel and told me to take it out and get it as dirty as I could. I did it because it was his towel! while he filled the stainless steel washer part of the machine with water, added a few-suds detergent, set the washing cycle for ONE MINUTE, and dropped in the towel with an armful of other things. I was fascinated by that crisscross washing action and before I knew it, he was putting the things in the spin-dryer basket, the suds and soapy water were streaming back into the washer part. He put the pump hose into the sink, rinsing the things right in the basket with water from the tap, and I watched the rinse water disappearing down the drain until it became clear. Out came the clothes. The white towel was snowy clean and it had so little moisture I could have ironed it then and there, and it all took just THREE MINUTES. I think this is the biggest favour to housewives since nylons — and it's made by Hoover. Besides, it's fun — so I bought one. And it's on it... it's all up to the pink . . . makes such a useful counter top in between washings . . . such fun to watch — the kids love it. Take a look! Bring your husband!

"I didn't ask for an opinion! I asked for $25!"

'Lines on Life'

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

Not long ago, an official of the forthcoming World's Fair at New York was quoted by the press as saying that it will surely be "the greatest single event in history."

Sometimes it takes something so naive and childish as this, to make us realize how unbalanced is our outlook upon life, and how prone we are to overstate events in history. We often make them momentous when, in fact, they are but tiny, fragmentary moments.

We live in a time which affords many reasons for feeling that we are in the worst possible international mess, that the world is nearing its end, and that never has there been a crisis as difficult as ours. Yet, not long ago, the New York Times printed two front pages — one for that morning, the other a reprint of ten years before — and the headlines were actually identical. It might seemed as if nothing had changed — not even trouble.

TENDENCIES

It is surely difficult to face up to the menacing headlines of each day — which is all the more reason why we need a proper perspective on history. Such a view will inevitably reveal that all life which is worthwhile is lived under tensions. Life that has any meaning is usually "wound up". A watch operates only when the spring is wound up, not when it is relaxed. Is there ever a time when our children are not a source of some concern for us, regardless of their age or their status?

What is true of our children is true of the world. A sensitive person always has a concern for the peace of the world. It was so in the days of Isaiah. A sensitive person is hurt by the unbridled passions of nations. It was so in the days of Ezekiel. A sensitive person is distressed over the lack of morality in high places and low. It was so in the days of Amos. And all these are still with us today.

To announce that "this is the year of", or to proclaim that "this is the year of decision" is a bit less than wise in terms of our perspective on life. The ongoing rush of life is filled with years of crises and decisions. To say that "this is the end of the world" is to speak like an adolescent. We smile at the young teenager, whose first experience with what she calls love, leads her to insist that she would rather die than give up this boy — for her, the only boy in the entire world! No perspective on life, we tell her!

But do we, who are older — and who should be wiser — talk and act differently when we nervously react to the day's events — as if they were the first and last crises we face? When we, on hearing threats of nuclear attack, rush to build private shelters, have we not also lost our heads?

DYNAMICS

Every day is a day of crisis and every year is a year of decision. What is has been, and thus, it shall always be, for these are the dynamics of life.

We must not be afraid of life and run for shelter. The real coward is not the man who is afraid to die, but the one who is afraid to live. And to live, we need to be ready to face the terrors and violence of life, intelligently and courageously — especially when the lights seem to be going out.

Mailman's Job Not All Fresh Air and Exercise

DEAR ANN LANDERS — May I offer a bit of advice to the college graduate who wants to be a postman because he thinks it will be a life free of pressure, aggravation and grief? All he sees is fresh air and exercise. Well, I've been a postman for 19 years and I can tell him a few things he doesn't know.

ANN LANDERS

He will have to get up at 5:00 a.m. in the morning and report to the terminal at 6:30 a.m. For the first two years he will "run spare" which means he may be sent anywhere in the city to deliver mail on a route he never saw before.

And there's more than mail, Friend. There are magazines, parcels, C.O.D. items, registered mail and sometimes that bloomin' bag weighs 45 pounds.

Fresh air? Indeed. Also rain, snow, sleet, fog, and hail. And please don't forget about those dogs who think a mailman is lunch.

I'm now kicking myself because I thought two years of high school was plenty and a civil service job meant the end of all my worries. — FLAT FEET.

DEAR FEET — Thanks for the letter. It's not every day we get a letter straight from a mailman. Here's one from the wife of a colleague of yours.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — For the past seven years I've been the wife of a postman so I feel qualified to answer "Pick-A-Dilly."

What a man does for a living should be his choice. If the girl he wants to marry cannot be proud of him and his work, he should marry someone who can.

A college degree does not guarantee success or contentment in a job. What is important is that the man enjoy his work. My postman husband does.

His pay is not high but the work is satisfying and challenging. He is usually home when the children arrive from school. We do a great many things together, as a family.

My husband is a respected member of the community. He has made more friends than most executives make in a lifetime. He doesn't have ulcers, high blood pressure or heart trouble. I would not trade him for the highest paid executive in America. — WIFE OF A FIRST CLASS MAILE.

DEAR FIRST CLASS WIFE — Thanks for the cheers. You sound like the kind of a gal many an executive wishes he had.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — The secretary of a close friend stole $20,000 from him by altering and forging cheques. This close friend is a sensitive person and was terribly upset when the theft was discovered. Now the poor soul can't decide whether to press charges or let the woman off.

My husband is an attorney and my father is a judge, so our friend feels we can make the decision for him. My husband believes the man should discharge the woman and try to recover as much of the loss as possible. She is a wife and mother and if she has to go to prison he feels it would be a terrible blow to her family.

As an attorney I say my husband ought to realize this woman committed a criminal offense and that she should pay the penalty. We have argued this back and forth and now we want your opinion. Thank you. — TEN TO ONE.

DEAR ONE — What good are laws if people decide for themselves they are going to ignore the law and make up their own rules?

The judge will decide if this woman is entitled to probation. If she has children living at home she could conceivably escape prison and be required to repay the money over a specified period of time.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

Question: My aunt and uncle have a large house and have offered it to me for the reception after my wedding. My parents appreciate their generosity but are reluctant to accept for the sake of "appearances". They think it might look strange to people if the reception is held at a relative's home instead of our own. I prefer not to go to the expense of a hotel reception, since I can use the money to better advantage for furniture and the like. Naturally, my parents will assume whatever expense is involved, regardless of where the reception is held. Would it be permissible to take my aunt and uncle up on their kind offer?— E. F., Trenton, N.J.

Answer: Of course it's permissible for the reception to be held at the home of a relative. The only instance where it would be incorrect is when the reception is at the home of a relative of the bridegroom. Only a relative of the bride may correctly offer this type of assistance to her and her family.

Question: I'm on a strict diet and the types of foods I may eat are severely limited. When my husband and I are invited out to dinner, is it permissible for me to specify exactly what foods I may eat when I make my reply? I know this may seem like an imposition, but I do want to have as normal a social life as possible despite the diet. What would you suggest?

Mrs. R. C. H., Pittsburg, Pa.

Answer: If the hostess is an extremely close friend, you might let her know your dietary limitations when you reply. Generally, though, it's impolite to take your chances and trust there will be something on the menu that you can eat. The problem is minimized, of course, if the meal is self-service and you can choose what you want. It's also permissible to decline a certain food if serving is done by a waiter or waitress. Then declining anything, though, even when the hostess is serving, it's necessary only to say "No, thank you," without giving any explanation.

U.C.W. Meeting

MELROSE U.C.W.

MELROSE — The Easter Relief Fund. A bulletin from the district secretary of Christian stewardship was read by delegates who attended the Presbytery conference.

Bible study was conducted by Mrs. R. Badger. Her lesson was based on "Beliefs That Count" by G. Harness. The prayer of her message was God's way of speaking to men in a modern world where insecurity and hate reign. The latter is due to the misuse of God's gifts, especially the gift to act freely.

Mrs. G. McLaren, assisted by Mrs. J. McLaren, Mrs. T. Bates Jr., and Mrs. T. Howard presented a play. Its message was that women must be willing to give up their children to lead their own lives. Trust in God's guidance and protection must equal that of Abraham's when he was willing to sacrifice his son to God.

A social hour concluded the evening.

REPRESENTED WOMEN

By the end of the Second World War, 16,700 Liaison officers from women's organizations were working with the Wartime Prices and Trade Board's consumer branch.

60 Per Cent Of Doctors in Russia Women

MONTREAL (CP) — Medicine, mainly the men's domain in North America, is a traditional profession for women in Russia, says a Russian woman doctor.

Dr. Natalie Vorobieva, chief of the international department of the 4,000,000-member medical workers trade union in Russia, said in an interview 60 per cent of all general practitioners in Russia are women.

"It started even before the revolution," said Dr. Vorobieva, here for the international conference on general practice. "Medicine was the first field of higher education which allowed women."

"Many people consider that women are better doctors than men. They say we are more sympathetic and motherly."

Dr. Vorobieva, whose husband Alexander is a musician, said the union she represents is made up of all workers connected with medical service, such as doctors, nurses and pharmacists. She leaves her husband and two sons, aged nine and 13, two or three times a year for trips.

She learned something not connected with medicine here. A temperature-like freak has been in the 20s in the daytime and the doctor said "this is Moscow weather. I wish I had brought my fur coat."

"But I looked at the map and Montreal was so much farther south than Moscow I figured it would be quite warm."

Mr. McKay is a prominent Catholic layman and is much in demand as a speaker. He has chosen a provocative title for his talk — "Pepper, Vinegar and a Loaf of Bread."

Canadian Fashion & Fad

BY PEGG ROGERS

REMINISCENT OF THE 1930'S

This season's panorama of fashion is now spread before our eyes in the newspapers, the magazines and on TV. We are told that it is the "Frosty Look" — reminiscent of the 1930's.

I have attended 28 fashion showings this season and at 21 of them, this phrase — "reminiscent of the 1930's", was used by the commentator!

So let's look at the 1930's, where fashion is concerned. To start with, Greta Garbo was the reigning beauty and what a beauty! She has classic features a slim athletic figure and according to legend, big feet. Set her against the backdrop of the 1930's, with F.D.R. and the New Deal south of our border, Hitler in power in Germany, Farmers smashing the scene, the abdication crisis in Britain, the Spanish Civil War, bread lines here at home, the Royal Visit in the spring of 1939 and the declaration of war only a few months later.

What was happening to fashion while the world was getting ready to turn itself upside down? The boyish bob of the 1920's had been replaced by shoulder-length tresses, modelled after Garbo. Or the hair was severely parted down the centre and drawn into a neat ball at the nape of the neck in the Wallis Simpson manner. Hair ornaments — many off-the-face or tipped crazily over one eye. Garbo set millinery styles and Loretta Young helped her establish the soft felt hat as a necessary fashion accessory.

Suits were in for daytime wear with loose or semi-fitted jackets. Skirts were long, varying from 8" or 9" off the floor in the early 1930's, to a more practical 13" or 14" by the summer of 1930. Both suits and dresses had scarves, either tied under the chin in cat's whisker bows, or allowed to flow in the breeze. The clutch handbag, also called "the underarm bag" was a hit. It was long and narrow, but without a handle. Costume jewelry was making its appearance, some of it attractive and low-priced. But a woman's taste was questioned if she wore big diamonds and their validity tended to raise doubts in the minds of others.

Floor-length evening gowns with low necklines, long hipcut skirts and wrist - length sleeves were almost staples. Taffeta was popular for the debutante's "coming out" gown, always with a low neckline, sometimes with the skirt banded with trapunto work to make it sway becomingly on the dance floor. Long, white kid gloves were absolutely necessary for the receiving line and everybody wore high-heeled silver or golden sandals.

All in all, I suppose it was a pretty look. Certainly the young lady of the 1930's spent more time, but less money, to obtain and keep her pretty look, than her daughter does in the 1960's.

If you have a question on fashion, just write Pegg Rogers care of this paper.

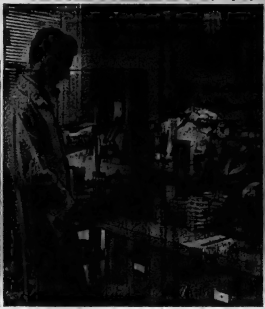
British Columbia's Modern Fisheries Grow in Value

Canada's Pacific Coast Catch Goes Worldwide

Ten thousand fishing boats, large and small, are reaping an ever-richer harvest off the scenic shores of British Columbia. Doubling in value over the past few years, the province's $90,000,000 fish industry exports half its products, accounts for 25 per cent of Canada's foreign exchange earnings from sea and lake. While world population growth and economic development boost the demand for fish, overall market competition remains stiff among fish-producing nations. Answering this challenge, British Columbian fish processors are stepping up already high standards of efficiency, hygiene and food quality. In experimental laboratories and research institutes, ashore and afloat, increased standards of purity and new techniques of processing are evolving. In Europe, Asia, Australasia and the Americas, B.C. salmon, halibut and other fish continue to hold a high place in the international fish market, maintain a standard renowned for nearly 100 years.

West Coast fishermen hoist their purse seine net aboard off San Juan, B.C. Exports of chilled salmon by air-freight and new freeze drying will open new markets for fish.



Salmon are unloaded from pressure-tank packer ship, Vancouver. Five species of Pacific salmon — sockeye, spring, coho, pink and chum — accounts for 90 per cent of value of province's annual fish harvest.

Canadian Forces on Cyprus Will Not Be Hamstrung By Directives, Says Martin

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said in the Commons Wednesday that the general criticism of the United Nations peacekeeping force in Cyprus is that it is powerless.

He said it wasn't for him to conclude whether this view was correct, but the people of Canada had a right to know about the general directives for the force and how it was to discharge its duties.

Mr. Diefenbaker said he didn't understand the secrecy over the directives.

He spoke after External Affairs Minister Martin told the House that the government is satisfied that the UN directives to the force will permit it to discharge its obligations as effectively as circumstances on the island permit.

Mr. Martin declined, however, to give any details on the grounds this would be violating the wishes of the UN and other participating countries in the force.

EXPRESSES HOPE

NDP Leader Douglas said Canadians had committed their sons to what "could become a battlefield, and he hoped the 1,100 - man Canadian force wouldn't be hamstrung by directives.

Mr. Martin said they would not be hamstrung but the directives would permit troops to defend themselves to the full. He decried the attempt to discredit the UN and the good work it has done.

Mr. Diefenbaker said it was extraordinarily strange that information of the general basis on which the UN force operates should not be made available to the Canadian people.

"Surely Canada should be entitled to more information than the minister provided today," he said.

Mr. Martin asked whether the previous government had not taken the same position on directives when The Congo force was established in 1960.

Mr. Diefenbaker said he didn't accept the analogy; The Congo situation was quite different.

The exchange on Cyprus occupied the House for the opening hour of the final supplementary spending estimates of the external affairs department, for the fiscal year that ended Tuesday.

Today, as they continued to consider bills of liberating debris and trying to get schools, transportation facilities and the economy going, Alaskans were cheered by the news that President Johnson has ordered quick federal aid for the state.

Governor William A. Egan, who plans to meet with President in Key 4 in Washington, probably Monday, says he will ask for $500,000,000 in federal aid. Robert E. Baker, president of the Matanuska Valley Bank, says he thinks the request should be for $1,000,000,000.

Both men said the money should be grants, not loans, in order that the hard-hit individuals and businesses will not be burdened by additional debt.

Egan told a press conference he would ask the legislature, which convenes on a after an earthquake recess Friday, to a $50,000,000 bond dsine—more than double the state's present bonded indebtedness.

Two Coroners Overlooked Bullet Wounds

TORONTO (CP)—The roles of coroners in two fatal shootings in Ontario are under investigation by the province's supervising coroner, Dr. H. B. Cotnam.

Dr. Cotnam said in an interview Wednesday he began his studies when provincial police told him coroners may have first presumed the victims to have died of natural causes.

Bullet wounds to both men—one in Kitchener, and the other in Smiths Falls — were discovered after the bodies had been removed from the scene.

Walter Giffy, a Smiths Falls store proprietor with a history of heart disease, was found dead Sunday on the floor of his store.

There was no sign of violence or robbery and a doctor and coroner brought to the scene decided Giff had died of a heart attack, police said. Only a bullets were discovered in the victim's body after it had been removed to the undertaker.

BODY FOUND

Joseph Arcistrong, 43, of Waterloo was found slumped in his car on the outskirts of Kitchener March 18.

There was considerable blood on the body and it was after the body had been taken to a morgue and cleaned that three bullet holes were found in the neck.

Dr. Cotnam said coroners were instructed to protect the original condition of a site when a body is found, which means no moving of the body if it is apparent a crime has been committed.

In some cases this is not so apparent, he said, and mistakes can be made.

No charges have yet been laid in the Giff slaying, but a former Kirkland Lake man has been charged with capital murder in the shooting death of Mr. Armstrong, an Anglican minister who left his post to sell insurance for a living.

Air of Normal Living Returns To Anchorage

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP)— An air of normal living has returned to the streets of Anchorage, but here and elsewhere in Alaska a lot of work remains before the devastation of Friday's earthquake is repaired.

Today, as they continued to cope with tons of liberating debris and trying to get schools, transportation facilities and the economy going, Alaskans were cheered by the news that President Johnson has ordered quick federal aid for the state.

Governor William A. Egan, who plans to meet with President in Key 4 in Washington, probably Monday, says he will ask for $500,000,000 in federal aid. Robert E. Baker, president of the Matanuska Valley Bank, says he thinks the request should be for $1,000,000,000.

Both men said the money should be grants, not loans, in order that the hard-hit individuals and businesses will not be burdened by additional debt.

Egan told a press conference he would ask the legislature, which convenes on a after an earthquake recess Friday, to a $50,000,000 bond dsine—more than double the state's present bonded indebtedness.

Can Sustain Men in Outer Space Long Time

SEATTLE (AP)—Space officials say 30 days of confinement in a sealed chamber for five men have led to a "major breakthrough" in research into whether U.S. astronauts can live indefinitely in the hostile environment of space.

After the men emerged from their cramped quarters Wednesday, Dr. Eugene B. Konecci said: "We are now confident of being able to sustain men in outer space for as long as we want."

Picture Will Be More Closely Viewed

By GERRY McNEIL

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec royal commission into the Coffin murder case today takes a close look at a piece of evidence possibly never closely examined at the trial of Wilbert Coffin in 1954.

It is a picture showing a Gaspe woodsman standing in a clearing, ringed by tall birches holding an object that might be a pistol — or anything else.

Mr. Gravel was asked whether he knew what the unidentified man in the photo was holding. Was it a pistol?

CAMERA NEAR BODY

Inspector Hebert couldn't say. He told the court he had found a camera near the body of Frederick Claar, 20, one of three Pennsylvania hunters slain in 1953. He developed the pictures and they were entered en bloc as evidence at Coffin's trial. Coffin was hanged for murder Feb. 10, 1956.

Mr. Justice Roger Bessaret, the one-man commission, then asked whether there weren't methods to make the object in the picture more visible.

Inspector Hebert said there were. He was told to use them to produce a better image for the commission today.

Mr. Gravel also pounded away at the relation between the lone man and a figure in another of the photographs which showed Claar, Eugene Lindsey, 47, and his son Richard, 18, with several Gaspe men.

122-Country Trade Talks Follow Dry-as-Dust Pattern

By Joseph MacSween
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Some mind - boggling warnings were produced by the United Nations conference on trade and development in Geneva.

As expected, the 122-country talks are generally following a dry-as-dust pattern, but occasionally the urgency of the trade situation is dramatically underlined by a statement or statistic.

The UN reckons, for instance, that at present rates it will be 200 years before living standards in the have-not countries reach the present standards in Western Europe.

The trade gap between rich and poor, in fact, has been growing wider because of falling prices for the primary products of have-not countries. This has wiped out the bulk of what the poorer countries have received in foreign aid in the last 10 years.

The political dangers of the gap, and the need for new approaches to remedy it have been underlined by speakers at the conference and elsewhere.

TIME IS SHORT

One political judgment was made by Harold Wilson, Britain's Labor Party leader, in a recent Montreal speech. He said the world has no more than 5 years to heal the gap—otherwise the fissure would be out of control against all future efforts.

TIME IS SHORT

One political judgment was made by Harold Wilson, Britain's Labor Party leader, in a recent Montreal speech. He said the world has no more than 5 years to heal the gap—otherwise the fissure would be out of control against all future efforts.

One aim, of the conference is to ensure that the underdeveloped countries reach the modest growth rate of five per cent by 1970, but is clear that this in itself would mean nothing unless it is protected.

Argentina's Dr. Paul Prebisch estimated if present trends continued the trade gap of the underdeveloped countries may reach an order of magnitude of about $20,000,000,000 by 1970.

All this puts into context such warning statements as that made by Philippines President Diosdado Macapagal in a message to the conference. He said failure of the talks would plunge developing nations into a new depth of hopelessness and frustration.

"Failure is, indeed, unthinkable," he added.

POLITICS OUT

As seen from London, one encouraging feature of the conference is that most underdeveloped countries have not allowed themselves to be led astray by political propaganda regarding Red China, East Germany or South Africa.

Delegates are apparently convinced they must keep their richer colleagues talking about economic matters and let political stuff for another day.

One of the most distressing features is the clash between Britain and France on how to improve the situation. Britain is calling for a freeing of trade in manufactured goods while Europe, under French leadership, is stressing plans for increasing world food and raw material prices.

A possible compromise is seen in a suggestion by President, who is conference secretary-general, that broad targets be established for manufactured goods, foodstuffs and raw materials which the industrialized countries will buy from the poorer nations.

Some observers believe this would cut across the differences between the French and British plans, enabling headway on at least one of the innumerable issues facing the three-month conference.

Nothing of a concrete nature can be expected soon—probably not for a long time. Dozens of sometimes conflicting proposals will have to be developed in committee.

The toughest bargaining is expected to come in the early part of June when final recommendations will be hammered out for presentation to the UN economic and social council.

Store Owner Freed on Charge

SARNIA (CP) — Charges against store owner John J. Polk of possessing and selling articles containing pictures of nude women were dismissed by Magistrate J. C. Dunlap Wednesday.

The charges were laid last month when police seized six sewer drivers and two key chains from Polk's store.

Magistrate Dunlap said the articles showed pictures of women in bathing suits, some front and some back views. When the articles were inverted, the bathing suits disappeared.

"I find nothing suggestive in any of the poses, and I am very doubtful if such pictures of nudes would tend to deprave and corrupt those who see them," the magistrate said.

Considering the "skin - tight bathing suits and very brief bikinis which we see on our beaches, I cannot find these pictures unduly exploiting sex."

'Mom' Whyte Plans Tour to Raise Money

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Bertha Mom Whyte, whose Whytehaven homes for underprivileged children in Ontario and British Columbia were visited by health authorities in 1959 and 1960, plans a speaking tour of Canada and the United States this summer to raise funds for be African mission.

Mrs. Whyte left her home at Bowmanville, Ont., in 1961 to set up a children's home in the village of Akpetorre in Nigeria. She has since added a farm, an ambulance and first-aid service, a youth training centre, a school and a non - denominational chapel.

Mrs. Whyte said in a letter to the Peterborough Examiner she also hopes to build a hospital and maternity ward, and seek funds for the building program during her speaking tour in May and June. Exact dates and places of her appearances were not known.

The Whytehaven homes at Bowmanville and at Summerland, B.C., were closed by health authorities because of overcrowding. Mrs. Whyte said she never turned anyone in need away.

HAD BUSY TIME

She wrote The Examiner that she has just nursed her entire crowded family of 24 through measles and whooping cough, without fatalities or a mishap. The nearest doctor is 14 miles away.

She has been assisted by supporters who went with her to Nigeria from Canada, by donations from Canadian supporters and by Nigerian villagers. She has also been encouraged by the Nigerian government.

Mrs. Whyte said she and her workers have been applying basic farming methods to the local farmers, training orphans to return to their communities as leaders, and giving school instruction to village children. She said: "I feel it was for the best that my homes were closed to Canada," she wrote, "as now I am serving where there is the greater need.

"It breaks my heart to see the poverty and sickness here. But when I observe the natives pit. Now a week ago by a government backbencher's speech in the provincial legislature.

The speech was made by a freshman member, A. B. R. (Bert) Lawrence (PC—Russell), amid opposition jeers that the government was "flying a kite" by picking the young lawyer to say something that Ontario's administration did not want attributed to itself in testing public reaction.

"In my view," Mr. Lawrence said, "if Quebec stays out of the Confederation it will not be unnoticed. for they were deliverged in the legislature the same day the explosive bombshell blew up over Ontario's so-called "police state" legislation.

"I believe in Canada, and indeed every province in Canada must remain in Canada, whether it will go into the Canada Pension Plan without Quebec," said Mr. Lawrence.

WARNING INTENDED?

Some observers say his words apparently were intended by the government as a preliminary to what was to happen at the federal-provincial conference. Premier Robarts told essentially the same thing to the conference Wednesday.

Mr. Lawrence said Ontario would take part in a federal pension plan only if it were truly national and embraced all of Canada. But it was doubtful there would be such a plan. In that case, Ontario reserved for itself the right to decide how to provide pension benefits in the province.

The stand taken by Mr. Robarts on pensions is expected increasingly harder since he objected at the federal-provincial conference to the proposal that some of the provisions of the proposed federal pension scheme.

Premier Robarts apparently left the conference feeling Ontario has taken the brunt of Ontario's objections. But when reporters in were announced by Prime Minister Pearson in February, Mr. Robarts complained they had not incorporated any of Ontario's representations.

The premier demanded an inquiry into the federal pension proposals by a committee independent of Parliament. In a letter to Mr. Robarts, Prime Minister Pearson turned this down. Premier Robarts made no further comment himself on pensions until the start of the federal-provincial conference Tuesday, and again Wednesday. On each occasion, he appeared to take the hard line.

Fifty Million Dollars Asked For Alaska Fund

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson will ask a $50,000,000 emergency earthquake appropriation and is creating a federal reconstruction and development planning commission for Alaska.

The White House announced Wednesday that Johnson named Senator Clinton P. Anderson Dem. N.M. to head the 10-man commission which will recommend long range plans to restore the Alaska earthquake area.

Other sources described the $50,000,000 of proposed now disclosed as only a first step in measure to help restore vital roads, bridges, utilities and other public facilities damaged.

And the two Alaska senators, after a two - hour conference with Johnson and other officials, estimated it will take $500,000,000 of federal aid to restore a going economy in the stricken state.

Senators Ernest Gruening and Senator E. L. Bartlett, Democrats, hinted that Johnson may ask congressional action to provide an unprecedented type of federal disaster aid — direct financial assistance to private industry.

As for th $500,000,000 estimate, Gruening and Senator Bob Bartlett and Bruening said the huge figure was their personal estimate and does not commit Johnson to ask Congress for any specific sum.

Presumably one of the tasks of the new presidential commission will be to weigh proposals for helping to rebuild the wrecked fishing and canning industries on which the Alaskan economy was based.

QUEBEC (CP) — Nearly 97 years ago the fathers of Confederation first sealed agreement in principle here on the formation of Canada.

Seeking further ways of cementing that union, the modern fathers—Prime Minister Pearson, nine provincial premiers, and their cabinet advisers—are meeting in the same ancient capital this week.

When the original fathers met here Oct. 10, 1864, this was the capital of Canada, then the united provinces of Canada East and Canada West (Quebec and Ontario). In those days the capital shifted periodically to Montreal or Kingston, before finally being located in Ottawa.

The current federal - provincial conference of premiers is meeting in the legislative assembly chamber of the provincial Parliament Building, so mellowed with age and ornamentation that it feels almost cozy in comparison with Ottawa's big, bare conference rooms.

The original fathers met in the main room of a three-storey new government office building about which little is known now, its three high-arched windows overlooking the St. Lawrence River were made famous as the background of a painting of the fathers done long after the event. The building was swept by fire and blown up in 1883.

Even before the opening of this conference there was talk that it might signal a new era, two or three days' work to meet again in October in Charlottetown.

That was the site of the September conference in 1864 at which John A. Macdonald and the Canadian delegation invited the Maritime provinces to consider joining a union of all British North American colonies.

This is the second federal-provincial conference of premiers to be held here—the first was in 1960—but its significance in this centenary of those pre-Confederation meetings in 1864 is being noted.

The Queen will visit Charlottetown and Quebec in October. Convening a further conference in the Prince Edward Island capital just prior to her visit there would do honor to Charlottetown, but as Quebec is being honored this week.

Then the premiers, as the modern fathers of Confederation, could be present for the royal festivities in Charlottetown and come back to Quebec.

Centennial planners, working mainly towards the big observances in 1867, have toyed with some means of representing the original fathers of Confederation. Because of the political implications they hesitate to attempt that the federal cabinet alone should play the role.

The mixture of party politics represented by the prime minister and premiers, and their cabinet colleagues, would more closely reproduce the cross-currents of politics that prevailed in 1864-67.

Of the 11 governments represented here now, four are Liberal, four Conservative, two Social Credit, and one CCF. It was only in a coalition of Macdonald-Conservatives and George Brown's Reform Party in 1864 that unity was achieved on the Canadian goal of Confederation.

PC Backbencher Gave Advance Warning of Ont. Stand on Pension Plan

QUEBEC (CP) — The strong possibility posed Wednesday by Premier Robarts that Ontario is staying out of the federal pension plan was signalled about two weeks ago by a government backbencher's speech in the provincial legislature.

The speech was made by a freshman member, A. B. R. (Bert) Lawrence (PC—Russell), amid opposition jeers that the government was "flying a kite" by picking the young lawyer to say something that Ontario's administration did not want attributed to itself in testing public reaction.

Teachers' Body Worried About Pension Plan

OTTAWA (CP)—The Ontario Teachers Federation has expressed concern about the proposed Canada Pension Plan and the new social insurance numbers being issued by the federal labor department.

The federation executive will say its opposition to the plan will be based on the impact the federal pension plan would have on existing plans for Ontario teachers, it was announced Wednesday.

The meeting also will consider the federation's stand on the social insurance numbers.

"Serious questions about the effects of both programs were expressed by the federation in a report to the annual meeting here of the Ontario Federation of Teachers," said Wednesday one of the groups affiliated with the federation.

All Ontario school teachers are being asked to refrain from registering for their social insurance numbers until the federation decides its policy April 11.

The report said the federation fears the insurance number scheme will lead to the compulsory imitation of teachers in the unemployment insurance plan.

The federation sent a circular letter to all Ontario members of Parliament last month, opposing the Gill committee recommendation that teachers be compelled to contribute to the unemployment insurance fund, along with others who earn more than $100 a week.

The letter said teachers face little risk of unemployment and would get little or no benefit from participation in unemployment insurance.

Use Ontario Experience In Jamaica Experiment

By RUSSELL ELMAN

COBBLA, Jamaica (CP) — High in the mountains in this Caribbean island, two Jamaican youths are using experience gained in Ontario camps last summer to help in a unique social experiment.

Aubrey Campbell, 19, a counsellor at a YMCA camp at Norval, and Marcus Wright, 20, who was at a Sherwood Forest camp near Minden, are youth leaders in this permanent year-round camp for 800 underprivileged Jamaican boys.

The camp, operated by the Jamaican welfare ministry, is the brainchild of George Cadbury of Toronto who some years ago was an economic adviser to the Jamaican government.

The campers, who range between 15 and 20, belong to the Jamaican age group with the highest incidence of unemployment. During an average 18-month stay at Cobbla they do forestry work and, since it is hoped many will return to the land rather than drift into the city, they swell the ranks of the jobless.

MAY LEARN TRADE

They also are given an opportunity to learn a trade such as mechanics, bakery or tailoring. Some of the tools come from Toronto and some courses are given by U.S. Peace Corps volunteers.

Two members of the Canadian volunteer organization, Canadian University Service Overseas, are at Cobbla. They are Dave Bier, 22, of Newmarket, Ont., and the University of Toronto, and Jim McGregor, 23, of Carleton Place, Ont., and Queen's University.

Jim, in charge of a group of boys, helps with a literary program and the camp choir. Dave is more active in sports. Both are involved in production of the camp magazine.

"In a place like this where we're short of staff and gaps always have to be filled," says camp director Owen Bachelor, "the volunteers' adaptability and versatility has been their greatest contribution."

The two Jamaicans went to Canada under an exchange scheme.

"I think I learned about boys in general," says Aubrey Campbell, son of a carpenter. "I liked the Canadian attitude towards work; they go about it in a businesslike way.

"In Jamaica, our attitude is a bit lardy. I believe I now can show our boys why work is important and draw references from what I saw in Canada."

TWENTY CENTS

Marcus Wright, who comes from a country district and whose mother died when he was only five, says he learned two new skills at Cobbla—operating a movie projector and welding. What impressed him most in Canada was the outlook on education. It seemed to him that each individual was expected to continue his education as far as he could and to be able to make a contribution to the country.

The boys, who live in 12-20-bed dormitories, keep a busy day. Up at 5:30 a.m., they whip up an appetite before breakfast by doing the cleaning chores in the camp. Most of the day is spent on work projects followed by sports. Lights out are at 9:30 p.m.

Campers are paid five shillings (75 cents) a week, of which one shilling goes into compulsory savings. They are given one set of work clothes and another for Sunday wear.

Plans now are being made to expand the camp's activities following acquisition of more land, and also to set up a girls' camp on similar lines in another part of the island.

PRAIRIES DRY — With the exception of several small areas, the Prairie provinces received 10 to 49 per cent less precipitation than normal during the fall and winter months. A part of northwest Saskatchewan was better than average and a part of northwest Saskatchewan was normal. (CP Newsmap)

Prairie Grain-Growing Areas Get Less Than Normal Rainfall in Past Winter

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Almost without exception, the Prairie grain-growing areas received far less than normal moisture during the fall and winter months.

In the three provinces, only northwest Saskatchewan bettered the average. Northeast Saskatchewan was normal. Elsewhere, precipitation ranged between 10 and 49 per cent below normal.

For all Alberta, the fall was 22 per cent below the 30-year average between 1921 and 1950. Saskatchewan was seven per cent under, and Manitoba was down 35 per cent.

The figures from Aug. 1 to the end of February were provided for The Canadian Press by the meteorological branch of the federal transport department, which also reported that precipitation in the first half of March was below normal in most districts.

DRIEST AREA

For the eight months covered by full figures, eastern Manitoba was the driest area with precipitation 49 per cent below normal. Western Manitoba was 31 per cent down—

Southwest Saskatchewan was down 22 per cent and southeast Saskatchewan 10 per cent.

Southern Alberta suffered the largest drop in precipitation in that province, falling 29 per cent below the normal. North central Alberta was 25 below, and the central and Peace River districts each 18 per cent under.

In the same months of 1956-57, there was an excess of precipitation over the normal fall almost everywhere on the Prairies. Only southern Alberta—seven per cent—and southeast Saskatchewan — 14 per cent — were sub-normal.

In that period, Alberta was 14 per cent above, Saskatchewan one per cent and Manitoba 13 per cent over.

FOUR DRY MONTHS

By regions during the recent period, Manitoba precipitation was below normal for the four months to the end of November. It went above normal in December, but there were deficiencies again in January and February.

In the first 18 days of March, the moisture fall was about 20 per cent above normal in the Brandon area but elsewhere in the province it fell about by between 40 and 60 per cent.

In Saskatchewan, August precipitation was 10 to 15 per cent below normal in the northeast and southwest quarters of the grain area, but 40 per cent above in the southeast and more than twice normal in the northwest. In September there were deficiencies of 15 to 40 per cent in all areas while in October there were deficiencies of 25 to 70 per cent.

Again in November, there were shortages of 10 to 20 per cent in the northern districts and 70 per cent in the southern areas, but in December most districts experienced excesses and this held for the northern parts in January. During the latter month, the southern areas fell short of normal by 10 to 15 per cent.

DROP IN MARCH

Precipitation was near normal in the northern Saskatchewan grain areas in February but during the first half of March moisture was deficient, particularly in the southwest corner where less than a third of normal was reported.

In Alberta, precipitation was below normal in all crop areas in August and in all but the central area in September. It was one-third of normal or less throughout most of the province in October.

In November, there were also shortages ranging to 40 per cent except in the Peace River district, where there was a 50 per cent average. January was down 18 to 30 per cent except in the area from Calgary south, where excesses averaged 40 per cent.

In February deficiencies were 40 to 60 per cent in all areas, and in the first half of March most areas had received less than half the normal fall for the period. Exceptions were Pincher Creek, up 25 per cent, and Whitecourt and Wagner, up more than 50 per cent.

Barcelona to Beirut They Just Hate Porpises!

Just invent a way to imitate the sound the porpoise and his big cousin the dolphin make under water to warn each other to flee for their lives.

Want to make the fisherme even happier?

A study written by a French fisheries expert, C. Ravel, and published by the Food and Agriculture Organization tells why.

The average landsman thinks the porpoise and dolphin are man's best friends in the sea. Fond of humans, remarkably intelligent, incurable show-offs, both these fish-like mammals are popularly pictured as playful princes of the deep.

But that landsman's view is not shared by the fishermen of the Mediterranean. From Barcelona to Beirut, from Trieste to Tripoli, porpoise and dolphins are detested as pests, robbers and the natural enemies of all who make their living from the sea.

RUIN MANY NETS

They destroy hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of nets each year. They chase away schools of tuna which are the highest commercial catch on any scale in the Mediterranean. They feed ravenously on the diminutive sardine, anchovy and sole that make up the bulk of the Mediterranean catch.

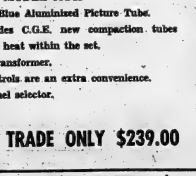
What makes the fishermen even angrier is that landsmen are all on the side of the porpoise and will never stand for any major campaign to exterminate them.

Fishermen, on the sly, are doing the best they can. Porpoises and dolphins are shot at with rifles, without any real effect on their number. Underwater grenades are used and scare the dolphins and porpoise away for a few minutes, but seldom kill them.

Ultrasonic wave transmitters have been tried. But Ravel suggests that these will never be very effective until some way is found to learn and transmit the underwater warning signal which dolphins and porpoises themselves give off. That might scare them away, but they'd be back, and even this system would not put any additional profit in the fisherman's pocket.

To do that, he'd have to be able to catch and sell the dolphins and porpoises as food. Says Ravel of dolphin and porpoise meat:

"It tastes very good, rather like venison."



But the bright color of the meat makes it unpopular in many lands and unacceptable in France. It is eaten, however, in the United States and England, and Canadian canned dolphin meat is a success.

Ravel suggests that if more people could be persuaded to eat the porpoise and dolphin hunting might become so profitable that the fisherman's worst enemy might prove to be a boon to him.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Besides being good hockey players "Rod" Kelly and Allan Stanley of the Maple Leafs have a generous streak of altruism.

Both gave outstanding performances in the Leafs-Canadiens game Tuesday night which to all intents and purposes ,imlach's Gardeners had tucked away.

The Toronto faithful were riding Cloud Seven. They were pulling on the mink and cruise, car-coats and coveralls and readying themselves for the victory post-mortems at their favorite soda dispensaries or cocktail lounges.

After all, hadn't the Leafs outplayed, outskated or otherwise proved themselves worthy victors. Less than three minutes to go and the way the Imlachs were going it was in the bag.

But they hadn't reckoned with the gentlemanly qualities of Messrs. Kelly and Stanley.

Let's say it was not sympathy for the fallen from Montreal. Rather a new version of that trite, "If you can't beat 'em—join 'em."

It looked from my television fifty-yard line box that Kelly and Stanley felt "Now we've got 'em beaten —let's join 'em."

I've known Red Kelly personally for a number of years. He is kind, generous and in general a helluva good fellow.

He has a wholesome respect for opposing players and seldom resorts to anything resembling mayhem.

But one can overdo anything — including generosity.

"Rod" knew in the minute he flicked the puck out and found J. C. Tremblay, alerted, with elite swiftness. The Canadiens made no mistake and off came the mink and cruise, the car-coats and coveralls of the astounded faithful.

But, "they ain't seen nothing', yet."

Allan Stanley decided to get into the Alphonso-Gaston act and he did as effective a job as his scrip-topped mate.

With the clock ticking off the fateful minutes, the big defencemen handed the Garden pewsters their second "Anchorage" felt when he placed the puck on stick of "Pocket" Richard and the Canadiens centre swished through to snatch the victory.

The respective coaches summed it up correctly in this corner's opinion. Said Blake, "We stole it." Said Imlach, "We gave it to 'em."

But the eyes of the Peavers are gleaming with happiness. The eyes of the O'Meara's are tear-glinted with sadness.

The Wings lead the series 2-1 with tonight's game in their Olympia nest and if they grab a victory then they'll bid fair to pluck the Hawks of their playoffs plumage.

In all fairness, the Chicago crew has not been "up" in this semi-finals jousting. Their shooting eyes may as well have been in the backs of their heads. Their passes have been well off target.

Desperation may give the visitors the only scene needed incentive. After their shutout at the hands of the Wings Tuesday night they'll have to come up with a lot of their potential if they want to survive for the gold and glory spot-light.

So all four squads go into action tonight with the "big one" at stake.

Canadiens and Black Hawks are still in hostile country with the back-room boys rating the odds against them.

The Leafs, after two outstanding displays despite the "gut-away" setback are favored to square the series in Toronto.

In Detroit, a fired-up Wings flock is confident they can repeat and grab a stranglehold on the series.

But if the Hawks forget about sitting on the nest and try some high-flying for a change, the situation could be all even-stephen.

Senior 'A' Semi-Final Series

Bulldogs Whip Komets

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Windsor Bulldogs scored four goals in the first six minutes in the first period Wednesday and coasted to a 6-2 victory over Fort Wayne Komets before 1,843 fans.

The victory tied the best-of-seven International Hockey League semi-final series at one game apiece. Third game is in Fort Wayne Saturday with the fourth here Sunday.

Wayne Schmautz, Jim Sasher, Bob Brown and Irwin Gross gave Windsor its early edge. Jerry Reiter tallied in the second period, then after Marv Dubinski and Norm Waslewski tallied for the Komets in the third session, Jack Costello scored the clincher.

Fort Wayne has two defencemen, Nels Bullock and Lionel Repka, and goaltender Chuck Adamson out with injuries. Wilf Keating, a Junior B grad from Wallaceburg, replaced Adamson and kicked out 34 shots.

Bullock suffered a fractured hand three weeks ago and is not expected to return this season.

Repka has bursitis in an arm and Adamson pulled a muscle in his leg while playing in Fort Wayne last Tuesday night. Neither could possibly return before the series is finished.

Reay Makes Lineup Changes ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Favor Wings Over Desperate Hawks

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

DETROIT (CP)—The law of averages say Chicago Black Hawks are due to bomb Terry Sawchuk and his Red Wing playmates right out of Detroit Olympia Stadium. But, as Black Hawk general manager Tommy Ivan says, "hockey is a funny game."

Right now, it isn't so ridiculing to Ivan, coach Billy Reay and their collection of National Hockey League stars and super-stars. The bookies installed Hawks favorites to whip past the Red Wings in the current Stanley Cup semi-final. But they probably for got that some games would have to be played here, a favorite burial spot for Hawk teams.

The two clubs get together in the fourth game of their best-of-seven set, with Wings ahead 2-1 in games. No one would be surprised if they had another scalping celebration and took a 3-1 lead into Sunday's fifth encounter at Chicago.

The desperate Hawks, who probably will come up with one or two lineup changes, are fully aware of the Detroit jinx. They've faced goalkeeper Sawchuk on Olympia ice 16 times since Feb. 24, 1957, and haven't been able to beat him, including a string of three victories in the 1963 cup semi-final.

HAWKS FACE JINX

And they haven't pulled out with a decision in seven outings on Detroit ice during the regular NHL schedule this season, with Bobby Orester, Red Wings' standby goalkeeper, between the pipes.

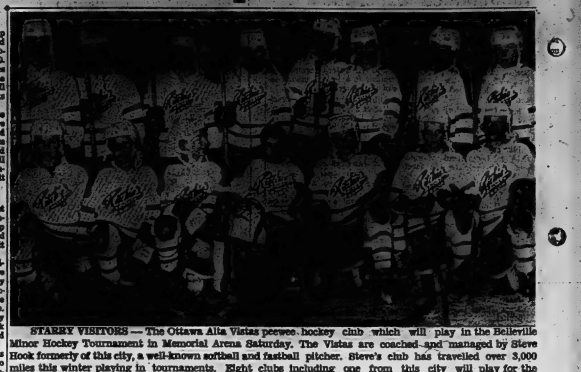
The answer to this, particularly in the cup playoff games, is that the Red Wing elder statesmen are playing like youngsters and the big guns on the Hawk roster have suddenly become trigger shy.

The 35-year-old Sawchuk left hospital two hours before the opening faceoff in Tuesday's third game and, with the help of 26-year-old Gordie Howe and Bill Gadsby and Marcel Pronovost, 33, blanked the Hawks 2-0. Chicago had opened the series with an easy 4-1 win at home Tuesday and then fell apart and lost 5-4 three nights later.

Gadsby, his defence mate Pronovost and Sawchuk have been hi e defensive stars and Howe, playmaker and team leader, has effectively shackled Hawk super-star Bobby Hull while making his own tremendous contribution to the Detroit offence.

HOWE SHACKLES HULL

This was particularly evident Tuesday night when Howe, celebrating his 36th birthday, set up two of the three goals. Hull had only two shots on the Detroit net.



And the big three on Chicago's attack all season—centre Stan Mikita, right-winger Kenny Wharram and Hull—have accounted for only one goal in the three playoff games to date. Over the 70-game schedule they contributed 121 to the Hawk cause—Hull 54, Mikita 43 and Wharram 39 each.

There's the difference in this series, and Reay is expected to make a change or two for tonight's game. He says he definitely will not bench goalkeeper Glenn Hall in favor of Denis Dejordy.

"I don't think Billy will make up his mind until tomorrow about personnel changes," Ivan said Wednesday. "I'll back him up on whatever he does."

The gossip is that Robinson will take over from Ron Murphy, a seven-year Hawk. But Murphy refuses to commit himself.

STARRY VISITORS — The Ottawa Alta Vistas peewee hockey club which will play in the Belleville Minor Hockey Tournament in Memorial Arena Saturday. The Vistas are coached and managed by Steve Hook formerly of this city, a well-known softball and fastball pitcher. Steve's club has travelled over 3,000 miles this winter playing in tournaments. Eight clubs including one from this city will play for the tournament championship and the handsome trophies up for grabs.

Sues Gordie Howe, Red Wings

Fan Says 'Punch' Worth $25,000

CHICAGO (AP)—A Chicago Black Hawk fan sued Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League and their star, Gordie Howe, Wednesday for $25,000 damages for a punch in the mouth.

Robert Rosenthal, 30, charged in his court suit that "Howe's unprovoked attack humiliated, embarrassed and held (him) up to public ridicule."

In Detroit on Monday, Howe said he punched "an abusive Chicago Black Hawk fan a good one" as the Red Wings were leaving Chicago Stadium after their 5-4 victory over the Hawks Sunday night.

On Monday, Rosenthal attempted to obtain a warrant against Howe, but Judge John Sullivan refused to grant one.

"On the basis of the evidence you've given me," Judge Sullivan said, "any judge in my opinion would find Mr. Howe not guilty, since you admitted that you provoked him."

Rosenthal's suit said a cut he received on his lip from Howe's fist required eight stitches and had become infected and swollen to three times its normal size.

MIAMI (AP)—Pitcher Juan Pizarro signed his contract with Chicago White Sox of the American League Wednesday for an estimated $25,000.

Pizarro, who had a 16-8 record last year, was one of the last holdouts of baseball spring training, and will be in uniform today. He is expected to be in good condition after playing winter ball in Puerto Rico.

Bantams Lose To Garson In Tournament

Belleville Oddfellows bowed out of the Bantam hockey tournament at Georgetown yesterday when they dropped a pair of games to the strong, fast-skating Garson (Sudbury) squad.

Garson topped Belleville 8-2 in the first game of the total goals series and came back with a 7-3 decision in the second encounter.

Both games were well played with plenty of fast, clean but hard - hitting hockey and the losers were far from disgraced. Earlier the Belleville team had eliminated Riverside in a similar series.

A Belleville team spokesman said the players were treated in fine style by the citizens of Georgetown. The boys were split into pairs and housed in Georgetown homes.

CNR All-Stars To Play In Tournament

Belleville's CNR All-Star hockey club will be travelling to Stratford, Ont. for the annual CNR tournament being held there this Friday.

Team coach Fred "Windy" Bishop announced plans for the Belleville club's participation earlier this week. The team will leave here by special coach at 3.30 Saturday morning. They are expected to arrive back in Belleville early Sunday morning, and, as manager Bishop puts it, "with the championship trophy."

Teams will be competing from North Bay, Stratford, Belleville, London, Windsor, Hornepayne and Niagara Falls. London currently holds the championship.

Opponents are selected by draw prior to the start of the tournament so the local boys do not know at this time which team they will meet in the first game.

Woodstock Meets Alouettes

NORANDA, Que. (CP) — Rouyn-Noranda Alouettes of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association will attempt to break a four-year jinx when they open the Eastern Canada senior hockey semi - finals Friday against Woodstock Athletics of the Ontario Hockey Association.

In five seasons of operating in the NOHA senior circuit the Alouettes have won only four times but have never advanced past the winners of the OHA series.

Last year, Alouettes were eliminated in the Eastern Canada semi-finals by Windsor Bulldogs who later went on to win the Allan Cup. In the 1959-60 Allan Cup playoffs Alouettes were defeated by Chatham Maroons. The previous year Galt Terriers defeated Noranda on their way to the Allan Cup.

A second game of the best-of seven series will be played in Noranda Sunday with the series then moving to Woodstock for the next two games April 7-8. If necessary a third game will be played in Woodstock April 10 and then the teams return to Noranda for games April 12-13.

Imlach Worrying About Fifth Game

"Will Win Tonight"

By DAVE BEYER

TORONTO (CP) — Jacques Plante, the asthmatic goalie who helped win six Stanley Cups in his 11 seasons with Montreal Canadiens, is performing the feat again in abentia, says coach Toe Blake.

Tuesday's remarks by Plante after he was traded to New York Rangers last year fired up the Canadiens so much, says Blake that the under-rated club rocketed to the league championship "on little more than sheer desire, born, of anger.

Blake explained his theory Wednesday after he put the Canadiens through a light workout in preparation for tonight's fourth game of their cup semi-final against Toronto Maple Leafs. The Montrealers lead 2-1 on the strength of a come-from-behind 3-2 win here Tuesday.

Plante, shuffled south of the border in a three-for-four swap last summer, informed the Manhattan press corps that his old team was coming apart at the seams, that Henri Richard was lacking in talent and Bernie Geoffrion was too old for the game.

"His remarks naturally made us mad," said Blake. "But after the first time we met New York we fired 59 shots at him and we beat the Rangers 11 times in 14 games this season, mostly because our guys wanted to show Plante we still had it."

INSPIRED BY PLANTE

Blake even suggested that Plante be named Coach-of-the-Year for "inspiring the rookie-laden Canadiens to such unexpected effort.

While Blake was savoring a cigar and the sweet taste of success, the Leafs were undergoing hockey therapy in the form of enforced entertainment.

Manager - coach George (Punch) Imlach treated his wards to two films, one a religious biography, the other a horror movie. The first was On Man's Way, the life of Dr. Norman Vincent Peale. The other was a rerun of Tuesday's game which the Leafs lost with 25 seconds left to play.

Earlier in the season Imlach gave each of his players a copy of Dr. Peale's Power of Positive Thinking after he learned that Hobby Rousseau of Montreal had been back tender scoring five goals in one game.

Their thinking may have been positive, but the score was negative. The Leafs promptly lost 3-2 to the Canadiens.

Although Imlach frowns he his gone out of the predicting business, he seemed to be taking a grim delight for general and was peering forward into the unfriendly Forum at St. Catherines and Atwater Streets in Montreal where the fifth game will be played Saturday.

"We've proved we can win in Montreal, and that's what we have to do again," he said. "Tuesday's game is over and we're forgetting about it."

SERIES MISS PLANTE

Imlach assigned extra practice duty, as usual, to his goalie warming brigade of Jim Pappin. Billy Harris and defencemen Carl Brewer, Larry Hillman Pappin and Harris have not yet been used in the series and Hillman has had only a stint.

Hillman holds the dubious distinction of having played in more playoff games without ... ing than any other man in the series. He has been in uniform for 26 goalless games with Detroit Red Wings, Boston Bruins and the Leafs.

Goalie Charlie Hodge of Montreal called up from the American Hockey League last fall to replace injured Gump Worsley, is not a stranger to Stanley Cup competition. Hodge, who has allowed only four goals in the three games this year, had a 1.50 average back in the 1961 finals when he allowed six-Detroit goals in four games.

This was four years before Toronto's Johnny Bower joined the Leafs and saw his first playoff action.

Blake credits Hodge with a large role in Montreal's surprising success story this season.

"When the tekt was the toughest, Hodge was the best." Hodge won the Vezina Trophy and had the most number of shutouts of any goalie in the circuit—eight.

Track Star Widely Travelled

USES HIS THUMB TO RUN — Hyike van der Wal has been nicknamed "Hike" for good reason. The University of Western Ontario student has hitchhiked to run in track meets across North America. He recently thumbed his way to San Francisco and beat the listed world's best time for the mile steeplechase at the Golden Gate indoor meet. (CP Photo)

Thumbed Way For 75,000 Mi.

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — When it comes to running, Hyike van der Wal is all thumbs.

He thumbed his way to San Francisco where he set a world mark for the mile steeplechase.

He helped himself get to Australia in 1962 by thumbing his way to the British Empire Games trials that summer.

And, by thumbing rides, Hike, as he is nicknamed, has travelled more than 75,000 miles to attend track meets in various parts of Canada and the United States.

They have carried Hike to victory at the Golden Gate International indoor meet in San Francisco's Cow Palace. His time of 4:25.5 beat the listed world's best time for the one-mile steeplechase by nearly two seconds.

His time by nine minutes flat for the 3,000-metre steeplechase gave him a victory in the Penn Relays last spring. It would have been good enough to win the last Pan-American Games in that event.

Hike has run in meets in New Zealand, Tahiti, Samoa, Fiji and Hawaii as the only Canadian member of a post-British Empire Games tour, and on the other side of the world in meets at Stockholm, Germany; Turku, Finland; Malmo and Goteborg in Sweden, and Kiev in the Soviet Union, as a member of the Dutch junior Olympic track team.

CREWCUT HELPS

Obviously, he hasn't hitchhiked to all these spots. But his educated thumb has done pretty well for him.

"I bet I can beat anyone hitch-hiking around the world," he says, adding that there is a technique.

You stand a better chance when you have a crew cut or blond hair than if you have dark hair and a dark complexion, he says. And it helps to know your geography because you know where the cars are headed.

Hike was born in Groningeat, Holland, and came to Canada with his family to settle in Watford, Ont., as a child. He's 25 now and a graduate student of the University of Western Ontario after athletic scholarships at Oklahoma Baptist, East Texas State and Nebraska State.

Hitch - hiking has produced some excitement. He says he was once held at gunpoint and forced to drive an escaped convict and his girl in Oklahoma. Another time he was in an accident in St. Louis that left the car a total wreck but just shook him up.

He says he seems to be overlooked when track meet promoters are figuring out expenses. But he knows how to assure one all-expense trip. If he can meet the Canadian standard of time in the 2,000-metre steeplechase, van der Wal expects to go to Tokyo as a Canadian representative in the summer Olympics.

And he's running 17 miles a day six days a week to build some necessary stamina into the 140 pounds he carries on his five-foot-9½ frame.

Girl, 16 Picks $112,000 Winner

The money came from a winning one-shilling (1.4 cents) bet on the British soccer pools.

The men were searching for the teams to name on the coupon when Arthur Drain, a 37-year-old bachelor, suggested: "Let Brenda pick the teams out with a pin."

So Brenda Vth Lear, Drain's 16-year-old niece, stabbed away with the pin. Result: $112,000.

Said Drain: "Well Brenda won for us so we'll have to give her a share."

MADE GOLD COINS

Although provision was made for a Canadian gold coinage, less than $5,000,000 in $5 and $10 pieces was ever coined.

Force Seventh Game

Hawks Tie Baby Habs 5-5

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—St. Catharines Black Hawks clung to life in the Ontario Hockey Association ... r As... ... Wednesday as they played to a 5-5 tie with Montreal Jumer Canadiens. No overtime games will be played in the series.

The draw left Montreal with three wins, two defeats and one tie and forced a seventh game to be played in Montreal Saturday.

A victory for the Canadiens in that game would send them into the finals against Toronto Marlboros.

However a Black Hawk win would extend the round to eight games with the final played in St. Catharines. No date has yet been announced for this possibility.

Montreal took a 2-0 lead early in the first period but the Hawks tied it up on late goals by Fred Stanfield and Brian McDonald. Never more than one goal separated the teams the rest of the way.

LEMIEUX TIES GAME

The Canadiens earned the draw when defenceman Bob Lemieux bounced a shot off Stanfield's leg with less than five minutes remaining in the game.

Stanfield and McDonald scored the goals each of the St. Catharines while Dennis Hull had a single. Goal scorers for Canadiens were Jacques Lemaire, Andre Lacroix, Leo Thiffault, Jean Claude Hebert and Lemieux.

Hawks lost the services of regular goaltender Bob Sneddon early in the second period when he pulled the hamstring muscle of his right leg while making a stop from Thiffault.

He was replaced by spare goaltender Bob Grohe who played only four scheduled games and one playoff this season.

Soccer Surprise

Selectors Drop Greaves

LONDON (AP) — England's soccer selectors Wednesday pulled one of the biggest surprises in years by dropping goal poacher Jimmy Greaves for the match against Scotland at Hampden Park April 11.

Greaves has played in 18 matches for England since he returned to Tottenham Hotspur from Italy in late 1961.

He has been an automatic choice for England from the moment he came home—except for illness.

But in recent weeks Greaves has lost his touch near goal in a spell that has seen Tottenham tumble to fifth place in the First Division—five points behind Liverpool.

Roger Hunt, Liverpool's inside forward, will take over from Greaves.

England's team for the match against Scotland: Banks (goal); Armfield Blackpool, captain); Wilson (Huddersfield); Milne (Liverpool); Norman (Tottenham); Moore (West Ham); Peacock (Middlesbrough); Hunt (Liverpool); Byrne (West Ham); Eastham (Arsenal), and Charlton (Manchester United).

Scotland's team will be:

Forsyth (Kilmarnock); Hamilton (Dundee), Kennedy (Celtic); Greig (Glasgow Rangers); McNeill (Celtic, captain); Baxter (Rangers); Henderson (Glasgow Rangers); Cushley (Tottenham); Gilzean (Dundee); Law (Manchester United); Wilson (Rangers).

Aces, Barons Win AHL Openers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Wayne Hicks couldn't have picked a better time to recover his shooting eye.

The 22-year-old Quebec right winger, who slumped all the way to seventh place in the American Hockey League scoring race after starting at the point or two of the leaders all season, snapped out of it Wednesday night with an overtime goal that gave the Aces a 3-2 victory over Pittsburgh Hornets in the first game of their best-of-seven semi-final.

The Cleveland crowd of 9,767 could see it coming.

Roger Crozier, who commutes to Detroit between games to stand by for Terry Sawchuk, the ailing Red Wing goaltender, in the Stanley Cup playoffs, made 35 saves for Pittsburgh before Hicks beat him. Ginny Hornet drives, none in the overtime period.

In another Wednesday night game, Cleveland Barons opened their best-of-three quarter-final against Rochester Americans with a 6-3 victory, paced by Joe Sanza's three-goal performance.

The Aces, Eastern Division champions of the AHL, carried the play most of the way against the Hornets, their opposite numbers in the West, but were hampered by erratic shooting. Hicks broke it up at 2:33 of the extra frame.

Wayne Freitag and Leon Rochefort were the series Quebec marksmen. Norm Beaudin and Yves Locas clicked for Pittsburgh.

Sanza was supported by Ray Kinasewich, with two goals, and playing-coach Fred Glover in the scoring department for Cleveland. Wally Boyer, Kent Douglas and Al Arbour replied for Rochester.

Horsemen Want Bigger Purses

OTTAWA (CP) — Members of the United Harness Horsemen's Association have decided not to enter horses in races at Blue Bonnets and Richelieu tracks in Montreal until purses there are raised, an association spokesman said Wednesday.

Vice-president Harry Van Alten of nearby Kemptville said the decision will take effect Wednesday and affects 97 per cent of the owners, drivers and trainers at the tracks.

Blue Bonnets was to open Friday but the racing card was called off because of insufficient horses entered.

Robot Director

Ding-Dong Speeds Chess

VICTORIA (CP)—One ding (or dong) at the Victoria Chess Club and you've just about had it.

The dings and dongs come from a robot-type machine that times the moves in games of lightning chess.

Like the Robot Lightning Chess Director, the machine gives a player 15 seconds to make his move, unless his king is in check in which case the time limit is removed.

If he doesn't make his move in the allotted time, a ding or dong sounds (depending on which side of the board is to move) and the move is lost.

While chess played this rapidly is less scientific than the ordinary game in which time provided for each move is more liberal, it has an extra measure of excitement.

The club has employed it for tournaments and Mr. Bennett says a competition that used to take six months now can be finished in a single evening.

He had to make one change in the original robot. At first it rang "ding-dong" for each play. But the players were under such tension that at the sound they were sometimes confused and both were prepared to make moves. That was what prompted Mr. Bennett to adjust the robot to "ding" for one player and "dong" for the other.

Bill Prest Heads Quinte Driving Club

The Quinte Riding and Driving Club at a meeting held recently elected Bill Prest as president and Richard Zebedee as treasurer.

A spokesman for the club said the meeting was well attended.

A committee of Mr. Prest, Gib Zebedee and Bob Barlow was appointed to act on the club's behalf on any matter needing attention between regular meetings.

Any two of the named three were authorized to make final decisions on such occasions.

To aid the club in making every possible effort, the spokesman said, to conduct every phase of activities in a manner consistent with the demands of all concerned, it was decided to retain the services of a lawyer.

After weeks ago the "Belleville Raceway to be operated by the Quinte Riding and Driving Club" was organized.

The spokesman said the club executive will wait on the Parks Board next Monday in an effort to secure the race privileges at the Fair Grounds.

Braves Win Ten In Row; Mets Hurler Hot

By THE CANADIAN PRESS -

When a baseball player gets his name in the record book, he usually feels he has a reputation to live up to.

Tracy Stallard's problem is rather different. He achieved immortality three years ago by throwing the ball that Roger Maris hit into the stands for his 61st home run.

A rookie with Boston Red Sox at the time, Stallard didn't mind his fortunes particularly by finding his way to the battle-scarred pitching staff of New York Mets. Even in that undistinguished company, his 6-17 record and 4.70 earned-run average last season wasn't particularly impressive.

direction Wednesday, going all the way as the Mets blanked Cincinnati Reds 3-0 and permitting none of the Redlegs to get past first base. He has yet to three runs to achieve a shutout in league competition.

Stallard struck out eight and three of the six hits off him were of the scratch variety.

BRAVES WIN 10TH

Elsewhere in the spring exhibition circuit, Milwaukee Braves won their 10th straight against American League opposition as Hank Aaron's homer powered them to a 5-3 victory over Chicago White Sox. The Braves' over-all exhibition record is 10-3.

National League clubs, which have won 66 games in 99 meetings with AL opposition since the training season began, won 36 times out of five Wednesday. Cincinnati Reds edged Boston Red Sox 8-7 and Los Angeles Dodgers clobbered Minnesota Twins 7-3.

The successful American Leaguers were Baltimore Orioles, who blanked Pittsburgh Pirates 4-0 on two-hit pitching by Robin Roberts and Harvey Haddix, and Los Angeles Angels, who outslugged San Francisco Giants 10-7. It was only the second interleague defeat for the Giants in 17 outings.

Johnny Blanchard and Tony Kubek hit homers for New York Yankees in a 4-3 victory over Detroit Tigers, a three - run homer by Johnny Lewis gave St. Louis Cardinals a 4-3 edge over Philadelphia Phillies and another contingent of White Sox belted Washington Senators 12-7.

OTTAWA (CP) — Veteran hockey executive Jack Roxburgh says Canada should be represented at international hockey competitions by national teams.

The past president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association holds the CAHA should ditch for all time its former practice of sending Allan Cup winners to world championships and Olympics games.

His views will be aired before the annual meeting of the CAHA meeting here in May when Canada's representation at the 1959 world hockey championships is to be chosen.

The CAHA departed from its usual practice last year when it decided to send a team from the University of British Columbia to the 1956 Winter Olympics. It placed fourth.

COACH FIRST STEP

The MP-sports official thinks the first step for Canada should be the hiring of a national coach.

"He should be one who has the confidence of National Hockey League teams since we'd be asking them to supply players who, were not yet ready for the NHL.

"The idea would be that these players would develop under the national coach as well as they would on NHL farm teams."

NHL scouts who comb the countryside for hockey talent also could suggest names of players perhaps not good enough for professional ranks but who would fit into the national team.

Roxburgh pointed out that the UBC team was whipped together in a relatively short period of time.

TALENT AVAILABLE

"I'm sure there's a lot of good hockey talent in the country for a national team if we take the time to search it out."

The CAHA executive also said that a national team would be "more amateur" than teams from other countries in the world competitions.

The Russians, he said, could be compared to Canadian minor professionals. Hockey was their full - time job. The Canadian team members would be together only six months each year and then would return to their career jobs.

Roxburgh believes it would cost the CAHA about $100,000 a year to have a national team. About two-thirds of this would be recovered in national and international tours.

"That means it would cost the CAHA about $30,000," he said. "And we are paying that out now under the old system."

London Jrs. Defeat Waterloo

WATERLOO (CP) — London Nationals Wednesday downed Waterloo Siskins 5-2 to take a 1-0 lead in the best-of-three Ontario Hockey Association Junior B semi-final series.

Second game will be played in London tonight with the third, if necessary, here Saturday.

Larry Davenport and Dave Gorman paced the winners with two goals each. Gilles St. Jacques had the other.

The game got out of hand in the final period when three players were awarded match penalties. Ron Gerhardt and Jack Kline took one each for Waterloo while Darryl Edistrand was the London culprit.

Wins Junior Hoop Crown

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Mount Pleasant Legion hung on during the last half to defeat Hamilton Kittens 56-51 and win the Canadian junior women's basketball championship in three games.

Defending champion Vancouver finished the first half with a seemingly comfortable 33-23 lead, but Hamilton, striving to get back in the best-of-five series, outscored Vancouver 28-18 in the second half, to close the gap.

The same two teams met in Hamilton last year, Vancouver emerging the victor in four games.

Chatham Jrs Assured Of Entry

CHATHAM (CP) — Chatham Junior Maroons of the Border Cities Hockey League have been assured of acceptance by the Western Junior Hockey League next season, says Harold MacFarlane, club secretary-treasurer.

The Maroons have applied for membership in the WJHL and several Ontario Hockey Association executives have given assurances that the application will be accepted, MacFarlane said.

If Maroons are successful in entering the league, Detroit Red Wings of the national Hockey League would be interested in sponsoring them, Jack Patterson, in charge of junior operations for the Red Wings, said in Detroit Tuesday.

Chatham would replace Tillsonburg in the six-team league with London, St. Thomas, Sarnia, St. Mary and Ingersoll.

Vancouver Takes 2-1 Lead

The Saints can wrap up their second successive national title by winning Friday's fourth game against the penalty-prone Quigleys.

The Quigleys, with only seven able players, were forced to play the final three minutes of the game with only three players. They lost four through personal fouls in the last quarter.

Lavorante Unconscious For 18 Months
Argentine Boxer Dies

BUENOS AIRES (AP)—Funeral services were scheduled today for Alejandro Lavorante, former Argentine heavyweight boxing champion who died more than a year and a half after collapsing at the end of a fight in Los Angeles.

Lavorante, 27, died Wednesday in Mendoza, never having fully regained consciousness. He was knocked out Sept. 21, 1962, by heavyweight Johnny Riggins and then underwent three delicate brain operations.

"I just kept hoping and praying, he would come through," Riggins said in San Francisco upon hearing of Lavorante's death. "He was a good fighter and could have gone up."

The 1962 bout was stopped in the sixth round after Riggins, who appeared to be trailing through the first four rounds, landed three solid rights in the fifth and sixth. Lavorante returned to his corner, then slumped off his stool unconscious.

An emergency brain operation was performed to remove a blood clot. A 3-by-5 inch section of his skull was removed in a second operation to relieve pressure but later was reinserted.

Lavorante remained in Los Angeles until June 30, 1963, when he was taken back to Argentina. He received therapeutic treatment at a clinic, then returned home.

Prior to the Riggins' knockout, Lavorante had been stopped by Archie Moore and knocked out by Cassius Clay, all within six months. Before the three fights, he had been rated fifth in the heavyweight class.

Riggins said Lavorante fought well in their bout.

"He was real sharp," Riggins recalled. "In the sixth round I landed two shots on his jaw. He hit the ropes but didn't go down So I figured he was just hurt and landed a chin shot. He never got up."

DESERONTO

Meeting of School Board, Committee Barred to Press

DESERONTO—Although representatives of the local school board requested that the press be allowed to remain at a Monday night meeting between the finance committee of the town and board reporters from two newspapers were asked to leave by Reeve Alfred of Deseronto.

The two committees had gathered to discuss the estimated figure of $109,357 for elementary and secondary education in Deseronto.

When the press arrived the Finance Committee of the town, the Mayor and Town Auditor Mr. Parkes were elected in the clerk's office.

Although the Chairman and members of the Finance Committee of the School Board were seated in the chambers awaiting the start of the meeting there was some indication that the Reeve and his committee wished to hold the meeting in the small room allotted to the Town Clerk.

When informed that the press were present the Reeve requested that they leave the meeting.

Questioned by a reporter as to why this was necessary when School Board members were willing to have them remain the Reeve replied that the Finance Committee of the Town had not had a chance to discuss the figures being presented and would therefore prefer the reporters leave.

OPINIONS DIFFER

One reporter asked the Reeve if it was not obligatory under the Secondary Schools Act that the municipal council receive the audited statement of the Board and budget accordingly. The Reeve replied indicating the contrary.

The Chairman of the School Board then asked if the Reeve objected to the Board releasing the content of the meeting after. Although the Reeve was not in favor he stated that the Board would do as they felt necessary.

Some question was raised also as to the auditor's position. It is understood that the town and school board auditor also serves the same position for the Napanee School Board.

Considering the delicacy of the issue governing secondary school education for Deseronto students many reporters are asking if this represents a conflict of interest on the part of the auditor.

Although the press was excluded from the meeting that followed it is reliably reported that the town is not in favor of the cost of education figure so presented.

It is understood that the Reeve questioned why the figure could not be deficit financed. It was indicated to him that though the town can do so the School Board cannot.

CONCERNED OVER RATE

Reports show that the town's Finance Committee has been concerned over the rise of the mill rate in Deseronto and that at their own budget meeting had stripped committee budgets in order to keep it down.

The cost of education for the following year would add over a hundred mills to the town's budget.

In the light of the town's reported indebtedness of close to two hundred thousand dollars this increase in education cost for 1964 becomes difficult to finance.

One way in which the town hopes to solve its problems is by having the town joined to the Napanee School Area. This would raise the assessment figure of approximately one million one hundred thousand for Deseronto (as part of Hastings county) to about 1,800,000, the equalization figure reportedly agreed upon by the Reeve and Lennox and Addington officials.

VAST COLLECTION

Education Costs For Deseronto Are $109,357

DESERONTO — The cost of education for Deseronto students has risen sharply, according to figures released by the local school board.

In a statement to the press, chairman of finance, Maurice Parker, indicated that the board had been forced to peg Deseronto's share at more than 109 thousand dollars.

Quoting from a copy of the letter sent to the local council Mr. Parker said the figure of $109,357.55 was "the estimated coverage for the operation of the Elementary and Secondary Schools in the town of Deseronto for the year 1964."

"Due to certain items the cost appears rather high. In the first place we paid tuition in the year following but under new regulations it is necessary to pay tuition in the current year," he explained.

The chairman said that there had been an increase in assessments over the size of the figure and that some pressure from outside sources had been brought to bear to deficit finance the sum.

"But we have no opportunity to do this," he said. "The board has unanimously approved the tendering of this figure to be sent to the fiscal body.

"We realize the hardship this involves tax-wise and would like to point out that this figure would be reduced substantially in the following year."

"A reduction of more than 25,000 is possible," he added.

The cost of education breaks down in two basic sums of $38,501.07 for Elementary Education and $71,856.48 for Secondary schools.

Although town council and some local residents have contested the expenditures on the vacant high school as being extreme the released figures show only $740 set aside for fuel, light and water for the presently unused building.

The board has indicated that they will keep the local build ing closed as a school. A recent appraisal shows its standing value to be in excess of $90,000. Members of the board feel the small expenditure justifies protecting the investment this people of Deseronto have in the building.

SHAPING the EARTH

THE BARREN EARTH — WHAT WAS IT LIKE?

Certainly, 600-500 million years ago, the earth was a miserable place. There was NO VEGETATION and NO LIVING CREATURE on land. Cracks and Mountains, long glacial periods covering many hundreds of miles. MASSIVE DEPOSITS of Eastern Greenland WERE BLOCKED DEEP LAND AREAS were covered with ice - thick glaciers were not merely in mountainous regions.

Then the ice melted and the earth's climate improved, but the LAND WAS BARREN. Rivers and rock pinnacles were in places rent by day and severe cooling at night. Winds built into a storm quickly. With no vegetation, the Ice vers carried away ENORMOUS QUANTITIES of mud and sand.

You may not realize it, but it is years since a new brand of Canadian whisky has seriously challenged the leaders in the better price class but new Park Lane 10 has advantages of age and quality to do it

For one thing, Park Lane 10 is aged in wood for ten years. That's an advantage. It is a soft, satisfying whisky, and very, very palatable. That's an advantage. It has a subtle difference in flavour that sets it apart from other whiskies. That's an advantage. So if you are in the habit of buying whisky in the better price class, ask for new Park Lane 10. You'll get the best.

Corby's Park Lane 10 true Canadian Whisky

Fully matured 10 years in wood

P.S. Corby's fifteen year old Park Lane whisky (in the elegant decanter and golden container) is still the best buy in the premium class.

Ice Company Treated Coolly In Indonesia

VANCOUVER (CP) — Indonesian ice men failed when the people learned the band of foreigners was not "Finnish" but European and North American.

It prompted cool treatment and made the land of Sukarno least enjoyable during a hectic 17-month tour by the Holiday on Ice Company — a tour that included demonstrations and celebrations, gun battles, three earthquakes and a flood.

Donna Kulai, 22, performed in the American show and told about the Asian tour after returning to her home here.

It was in Japan that a flood almost washed away their ice rink and forced them to make the streets. In the Philippines, they encountered scenic of the election fever that left 125 people dead.

"One man was shot right outside our hotel in a crossfire of bullets," said Miss Kulai. "Everybody had an escort after that."

In Rangoon, there was almost an international incident when the Communist Chinese football team and the American ice show booked into the same hotel. The route of the football team was altered and the two groups did not meet.

In Bangkok, they were paid an unexpected visit by the King and queen of Thailand and spent an hour teaching the royal family how to skate.

They also met two of President Sukarno's wives and were told to address the senior one as Madame Sukarno and the junior as Mrs. Sukarno.

Miss Kulai looks forward to the next tour, to Moscow and Communist capitals of eastern Europe. She hopes these people will prove a little more knowledgeable about Canada. The Asians, she says, think all Canadians live in igloos.

Company Will Not Send Ship To Chicago

OTTAWA (CP)—Upper Lakes Shipping Limited of Toronto made the decision to delay the dispatch of the Montreal John Jacobsen to Chicago where the Great Lakes cargo carrier was unable to load last year, Labor Minister MacEachen told the House of Commons Wednesday.

But he said that the Canadian marine union trusteeship had expressed its concern and may have made its views known to the company.

Replying to Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, Mr. MacEachen said he hopes the delay signified settlement of the labor problem on the Great Lakes in which Upper Lakes vessels have been involved in American ports because of a dispute with the Seafarers' International Union of Canada (Ind.).

Mr. Diefenbaker had asked whether the delayed sailing for the Montreal had been directed or suggested by the trustees, created last year to supervise the SIU and four other unions.

WILL FILM BOOK

Stanley Kramer will make a movie based on Katherine Anne Porter's bestselling novel Ship of Fools.

At the Park

"The Cardinal"

6 Academy Award Nominations

Tom Tryon originally planned a career as a cartoonist, and studied art at Yale. But the stage bug bit and he gave up his cartoonist's pen to be an understudy in the Broadway hit musical, "Wish You Were Here." He went through the familiar vicissitudes and small successes almost all actors experience while waiting for that "one good break."

The "break" came when producer-director Otto Preminger signed him for the title role of "The Cardinal," the Columbia Pictures release at the Park Theatre for a limited engagement in Panavision and Technicolor, based on the best-selling novel by Henry Morton Robinson.

For his first really important screen role, Tryon found himself in a distinguished company of co-stars including Romy Schneider, Carol Lynley, Jill Haworth, Raf Vallone, John Saxon and Maximilian Burgess Meredith, Ossie Davis, Dorothy Gish, Tullio Carminati, Arnoldo Foa, Bill Hayes, Cecil Kellaway and producer-director John Huston, who plays Cardinal Monitor. Robert Doner penned the screenplay.

In such an atmosphere of creative talent, Tryon found experience in the theatre, the movies and television reportedly was just the right training.

"I played the part by trying to think of just one day at a time," he said. "I don't know whether I would have made it otherwise, but it's a bonus that nobody could Clerq, on Thursday, and on Saturday they were accompanied by Gordon Hamilton to Washington for the weekend.

In the second contest, Belleville held locals of 1-0, 2-1 and 3-2 but each time Brampton tied it and finally broke away for the 6-3 win in the final 14 minutes.

Mail Sacks Found Empty And Slashed

MONTREAL (CP)—Three big canvas mail sacks and 31 smaller ones that once contained money and banknotes were found slashed and empty in a railway yard on Street Wednesday following the hijacking of a mail truck by seven armed men last week.

Estimates of the amount taken in the holdup—second of its kind in 24 hours—ranged from $100,000 to $400,000. But postal authorities said the figures were premature and that it might take a week to complete an inventory of the contents of the sacks.

The downtown robbery, committed Tuesday in the shadow of the CNR's Central Station, and a second mail truck holdup by two men in suburban Caughnawaga, came only 30 minutes apart.

In Caughnawaga as in Montreal, the amount taken couldn't be established immediately.

OTTAWA (CP)—Works Minister Deschatelets told the Commons Wednesday that the amount of loot stolen from a post office mail truck in Montreal Tuesday will be known until a full check is made.

He said the truck was carrying 31 money pouches, including some payrolls, when it was held up in downtown Montreal. He was replying to J. A. McBain (PC—Elgin).

Mr. Deschatelets, reporting on behalf of the postmaster-general, said he has no knowledge of any trucks carrying as much as $42,000,000 without armed guards, as suggested by Mr. McBain.

Locals Lose Tough Series

Brampton Ousts Specials

BRAMPTON (Special) — The Belleville Squirt All-Stars, leading in both games all during the day's play, were defeated by the hometown Brampton team here Wednesday to climax a tremendous week for the Bay of Quinte area kids.

Belleville fought the larger Brampton squad 2-2 2-2 in the first game of the total-goals series and led three times before losing the second 6-4 6-4.

This series was played before the biggest crowd of the week-long tournament as fans in this minor-hockey mad town turned out in full force to support their youngsters.

The Belleville boys, managed by Ed Adamson and coached by Lionel Bolly, did themselves proud. They were finally worn down by the Brampton team but not without giving it everything they had.

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. lives, money and material are deeply involved in South Viet Nam's struggle against communist Viet Cong guerrillas.

CBS Reports Wednesday examined the "nasty little war," as narrator Charles Collingwood called it. It showed the difficult conditions — experienced guerrillas, the problem of identifying ally from enemy, and the Vietnamese people's lack of enthusiasm for the war, which began in the early 1950s.

The program emphasized the United States position, particularly the reasons behind its determination to give South Viet Nam all possible help.

The show would have been interesting and effective if it had been edited to about half its length.

A camera crew worked for months under physical hardship and mountain heights which required oxygen. Cameras for oxygen—to make the record!

Result was more than 40,000 feet of film—much of it "staggeringly beautiful," said author Linda Cain of Collingwood, who was to narrate a television show using the material.

The film was to be used in a documentary about the Indian Chinese border conflict, scheduled for showing May 18.

Wednesday, the show's sponsor, an oil company, announced the program would not be broadcast. The sponsor's representative explained: "Certain contents of the film would be incompatible with the company's business policies."

An NBC spokesman said that the India-China show would be "rescheduled."

AT THE MOVIES — There may be a few broken dishes now and then, but temperatures hovered Ursula Andress, owner of a gambling boat, has been tamed by gunslinging gambler Dean Martin in this scene from "4 From Texas". The new comedy-drama Western in Technicolor, from Warner Bros., opens Today at the Belle Theatre. Martin and Miss Andress are starred, together with Frank Sinatra and Anita Ekberg.

BUDAPEST (AP) — Frigyes Dolschall, 67, health minister of Hungary, died Tuesday, the Hungarian news agency MTI reported.

HE Measures Up!

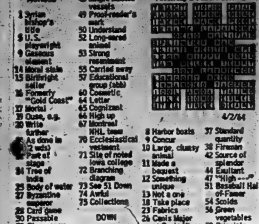
Benjamin Franklin and many other great men got their first business training as newspaperboys. Men whose names make headlines in today's newspapers . . . men like J. Edgar Hoover, Walt Disney, Lowell Thomas, Bing Crosby, former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, and Astronaut Virgil I. Grissom.

And in tomorrow's headlines, will be many of today's newspaperboys.

Why? Because today's newspaperboy is learning the principles of business early in his career. This Junior Independent Merchant buys his newspapers at wholesale and sells them at retail to his customers. Just like any other businessman, he learns that in order to make a profit he must keep accurate records, collect and pay promptly, and plan his time.

Equally important, he learns to meet people easily and how to close a sale. He finds that dependability, punctuality, courtesy, and thrift are more than just words and must be put into practice if he is to succeed.

Today's newspaperboy measures up to the proven standards for success which prepare him for leadership tomorrow.



If you have a son that you think might be interested in a newspaper route, why not write or phone us.

In a Little Flemish Town --50 Years After 'Wipers'

By CAROL KENNEDY

YPRES, Belgium (CP)—The soldiers will be returning this summer, 50 years older, to the little Flemish town among the poppies they called "Wipers." Reborn from the ashes of the First World War, Ypres is commemorating the anniversary of 1914 this year with a special program for veterans of the allies' trenches.

The inaugural ceremony takes place April 16 in the cobbled market square with its Gothic cloth hall and brown gabled houses that were rebuilt stone for stone after the town's three-year ordeal by shellfire.

Ambassadors from 14 nations that fought at Ypres, including West Germany, will watch their flags hauled up here to signal the start of a program of remembrance. Afterwards they will be received by the burgomaster (mayor) and take part in a wreath-placing ceremony at the Menin Gate, the white marble monument to the Commonwealth dead where the Last Post is sounded every night.

Canada will be represented by Sydney Pierce, ambassador in Brussels.

The town council is keeping the anniversary program flexible to meet the requirements of veterans' groups wherever possible. Guided tours of the Flanders battlefields will be arranged on request.

MEMORIES FRESH

Scheduled events include band and carillon concerts, exhibitions in the expanded Salient Museum and memorial services in St. George's English Church —shrine of many a regimental banner—and the "Ypres 15 Hayloft Chapel at Poperinghe.

About 40 groups of veterans have indicated they will make a pilgrimage to Ypres this year. The first Canadian contingent arrived in May and a group of survivors from the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry plans to come in mid-August.

Ypres decided to commemorate the war this year rather than 1968, the 50th anniversary of the Armistice, because the number of veterans would inevitably dwindle over the years. Each veteran visiting the town in 1964 will receive a souvenir certificate.

A reporter touring the battlefields recently found memories of 1914-18 still poignantly fresh in a countryside that has known many wars and was once more invaded by the Germans in 1940.

The placid burghers of Ypres still cherish a sense of gratitude to the Commonwealth that defended their town at a loss of 90,000 men, and many seem to have a special affection for Canadians.

Around the town in the flat, spongy fields that once formed the dreaded salient, Canada's sacrifice lives on in maple trees and stone memorials at Sanctuary Wood, Passchendaele, St. Julien and Frezenberg Ridge.

Bulletins From Birdland

By WINIFRED E. WILSON

Could you identify a pine siskin if you saw one in your row? If so, you belong in the minority. For one thing, they are very small, under five inches, so inconspicuous. But their preference for isolated areas in summer and their extremely irregular habits all year round also add to the difficulty. They confine themselves to the coniferous forest and are most erratic in their movements both on the breeding grounds and when visiting our Canadian settlements.

Pine siskins nest in evergreen forests from the northern limit of the tree belt and spilling over our southern boundary into the most northerly states. But they also live in forests in mountainous regions in North Carolina and the far west. Their nesting date varies considerably. And although from October to mid-May there is a chance of encountering a flock (which at times comprises several hundred, together with their friends the goldfinches, redpolls, and crossbills), yet some years not a single siskin is seen.

HUSKY VOICE

As a matter of fact, our ears are more likely to detect a flock than our eyes. While they fly overhead in the bounding motion of a goldfinch they continually call "tli-i-tit" with each undulation. Both song and call notes definitely remind us of the goldfinch too. However, once heard properly, the voice of a siskin is easy to identify because of its husky quality

We can hardly expect to hear birds singing in winter. But when pine siskins remain here throughout the spring they are sometimes heard — especially in chorus it is not unusual for a mixed flock of siskins and goldfinches to sing together. The siskin's song is long, made up of groups of phrases and trills. The sweet "zwi-sleee," with an upward slur at the end, is perhaps what most reminds us of a goldfinch.

SIMILAR IN SHAPE

Some people think these two kinds of birds even look alike. Maybe there is a similarity in their shape. But the only yellow in a pine siskin (and we certainly think of a goldfinch as being yellow) is what shows in the short, forked tail and the white-barred wings as the bird flies over us. Otherwise, the general effect is a small, pale bird almost entirely covered with heavy, sepia streaks.

Pine siskins can winter in our climate on account of their food habits. They are seed eaters, depending upon the seeds of conifers, alders, birches and cedars. They may often be found hanging head down-wards from the ends of branches in order to reach the seeds with their narrow, pointed bills.

Used Joke Business Is Serious One

Fechtner and his associate, George Q. Lewis, sell used jokes. They say they will sell you a half-ton for $50,000 or a page of 20 for $1, depending on your needs.

Apparently, selling used humor is very much like selling used tires, or baled paper, or corn flakes.

"We have these jokes," says Lewis. "The job is to get them out and get them moving."

Fechtner claims to have 1,000,000 used jokes on file, culled mostly from magazines and newspapers, over 30 years. Each joke has a number. All are listed under subject headings like "Age," "Care," "Luck," "Golf," or "Hollywood."

"Collecting jokes is no laughing matter," says Fechtner, who seldom laughs. He is a methodical man with an Austrian accent.

"People say I don't laugh anymore because I know all the jokes," he says. "Every joke to me is just a number."

Fechtner and Lewis say they have just started their used joke business. Their main market, they believe, will be the businessman who wants jokes for his speech before a sales convention or country club dinner.

TOPICAL LAUGHS

For example, an automobile dealer wanting a joke about his business in a speech, would probably be sent, among others, joke No. 3,330. It is:

Buyer: "This car you sold me isn't even worth a bill."

Seller: "I didn't say it would. All I said was, on the level, it's a fine car."

Lewis thinks used golf jokes and puns will be among the biggest sellers. Did you hear about the man who never drinks before golf because he has to drive?

Fechtner is a photographer who started collecting jokes as a hobby in Austria, where he was born. Lewis manages comedians and comedy writers and writes jokes himself. He is also head of an organization called Gagwriters Comedy Workshop.

Both say they see nothing unusual about selling used jokes to businessmen.

HITS CRITICS

BURLINGTON, Ont. (CP) — William O'Neill, administrator of Joseph Brant Memorial Hospital, said Tuesday much of the criticism directed against hospitals is irresponsible. He said hospital costs are far from being too high and will be a lot higher in the next few years.

LEARNING THE ART — Eighteen-year-old Ronald Leppard is learning the art of making stained glass windows — a craft that has been handed down from father to son in his family for more than 300 years. He has been working in his father's studio at Bedford, N.S., for three years, but has another seven years to go before he is a full-fledged glazier. (CP Photo)

Stained Glass Craft

300 Years of Experience Goes Into His Production!

By CAL HOLLOWAY

BEDFORD, N.S. (CP)—Russell Leppard, 38, is an artist who dabbles in carpentry, has a knowledge of chemistry, reads the Bible Daily and doesn't mind heights.

He is also an expert at cutting expensive glass and has the knack of translating a pastor's thoughts into a design for a church window.

Mr. Leppard is a stained-glass window glazier.

A native of London, Ont., and owner of one of Canada's seven stained-glass works, he brought the ancient art to the Atlantic provinces a year ago.

The Leppards have been glaziers for more than 300 years. Russell's great - grandfather brought the skill from Holland to Ontario more than a century ago and it has been handed down from father to son until the present day when Russell has a son learning the craft.

Russell learned all he knows about stained - glass windows from his father, R. P. Leppard, who operated a studio in London.

It was while on vacation in Nova Scotia, where he had been stationed during the Second World War, that he learned there was a market for stained-glass windows in the Atlantic area.

HIGH HOPES

He moved his family to this Halifax suburb and set up shop in a rented building. Orders began flowing in and he had hopes of doing about $60,000 worth of new windows in 1954. Repair work on top of that would make for a good year.

But in February fire swept the building where his shop was located, about $20,000 worth of imported stained glass, designs and all the glazier's equipment were destroyed.

Within a month, the Russell Leppard Stained Glass Works was in another building and he was ready to begin filling orders again. His wife Betty, as secretary - treasurer, was back looking after the office work and son Ronnie, 18, was continuing his third year under dad's supervision.

Russell's 67 - year - old father, semi - retired, moved from London to offer the benefit of his 50 years' experience around the shop.

The stained-glass window art has remained essentially the same since it was first begun in Egypt in the 11th century. The biggest difference is the improved quality of materials used.

In a stained - glass window, pieces of colored glass are placed together in an intricate pattern to form a preconceived design or picture. The pieces of glass are held together by strips of lead grooved on opposite sides.

Much preparation is needed before a window begins to take shape. The glazier must often paint the picture from a description given by the church pastor or donor.

Most popular pictures for church windows are the Good Shepherd, the Nativity and Christ Knocking at the Door. Modern church buildings often use contemporary designs.

But churches aren't the only buildings using stained - glass windows. Synagogues, schools, hospitals, civic buildings and even homes are marketing for the glazier.

Mr. Leppard says that if he has to paint a biblical character for whom there is not much available description he will peruse the Scriptures to learn as much as possible about him.

Almost any design can be put into a window but the cost increases with the intricacy of the picture. A window may cost as little as $11.50 a square foot or as much as $200 a square foot.

After the painting is completed and the glass cut, the glazier puts his knowledge of chemistry to work mixing the oxides to paint the designs on the pieces of glass. The glass is then placed in an oven where the paint is burned into it.

The design must be planned so that the lead does not cross the face, hands or feet of the figures in the window.

There is no limit to the size of a window. One he helped make for a church in Stratford, Ont., measured 27½ feet by 35 feet. It was worth $35,000.

A glazier's work doesn't end with completion of the window in the studio. It still has to be installed and he then becomes a carpenter to fit the expensive window properly to the frame.

Sometimes the windows are placed in church towers and the man high up on the scaffold is the same fellow who drew the delicate picture.

Johnson Praises Brazil's Revolt Ousting Goulart

Scattered Resistance To New Regime Exists

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson has used unusual language in sending fast greetings to Brazil's new president, Paschoal Ranieri Mazzilli.

In his message Johnson expressed admiration for the way Brazilians settled their difficulties "within the framework of constitutional democracy and without civil strife."

Yet, the new president's accession to office was the result of a military coup—not a constitutional process — in which the army threw out the elected president, Joao Goulart, who then fled the country.

It was after the army got rid of Goulart that the Brazilian Congress named Mazzilli, president of the Chamber of Deputies, the new president.

Favorable American reaction had been expected since last Monday night when a high U.S. state department official said there was increasing danger of a Communist takeover in Brazil.

FEARED RED TAKEOVER

The Associated Press in stories from Brazil has bluntly called Goulart's regime a left-leaning, Communist - influenced government. The Johnson administration wants no more Communist takeovers in the Americas. And Goulart had let Communists move into high positions.

In these tangled circumstances, there is little prospect that Mazzilli will be able immediately to undertake any long-range programs or reorganization and reform. Some stopgap measures may prove essential, however.

The army in control now in Brazil is conservative.

It's a country where eight per cent of the landowners hold 75 per cent of the cultivated land although more than 60 per cent of its more than 75,000,000 people gain a living often sparse—from farming.

More than do plans for farm reforms have been made in the last 15 years but little has been done about them.

How long revolution can be avoided without wide reforms is a question that will haunt any regime which tries to stand pat and ignore the problem.

Unseasonal Blizzard Left Eight Dead From Accidents in Storm

TORONTO (CP)—A 23-year-old woman who was to have been married tonight and her bridesmaid-to-be died Thursday night as an unseasonal blizzard left parts of southern Ontario and left a total of six motorists dead.

Sylvia Eaton and her bridesmaid, Edith Grant, 18, both of Angus, Ont., were killed when their car crashed head-on into a lumber truck three miles west of Barrie in a heavy snowfall.

Her fiance, Pte. Harold Holland, 24, of the army base at Camp Borden, Ont., said: "I just can't believe it. The padre was going to marry us tonight in the camp chapel. We were going to have a weekend honeymoon in Hamilton."

The storm brought from three to six inches of snow to many communities, while others were inundated with swirling rain and sleet.

Gerald Holden, 55, a high school teacher, and Anthony Aselin, 18, of Victoria Harbour were killed in another two-vehicle collision near Barrie. And David James Spence, 20, and Gordon Thompson, 22, both of Stratford were killed when two cars collided at an intersection in Stratford during a drizzle.

Two men died in separate mishaps in the Hamilton area on snow-slick roads. Andrew DeBoda, 34, died when his car smashed into a transport truck early today and an unidentified motorist was killed when his car slammed into a hydro pole.

Kingston reported six inches of fresh, wet snow in the city this morning and the neighborhood of Napanee had between three and four inches. Brockville got four inches.

A cold front settled over Northern Ontario.

Red Chinese Virtually Read Out of Communist World

NEW YORK (AP) — The Kremlin virtually read the Chinese out of the world Communist movement today, forecasting an era which brings new opportunities and new dangers for the United States and its friends.

How to exploit what appears to be an unbridgeable chasm between Moscow and Peking was a major concern of the White House and state department long before the Soviet Communist party issued its showdown challenge. Now it has become a vital concern.

To most diplomats, it long has seemed inevitable that a definitive break with China would leave the Soviet Union would have to work to improve relations with the West.

Not only does such a break mean the return to the relatively small "socialist camp" of the late 1940s, it also means the Soviet Union must guard the world's longest border against an openly hostile China.

In addition to the United States, firmly opposing Communist expansion to the West, there now is also Communist China, firmly opposing Soviet policy in the East.

Premier Khrushchev must be thanking his lucky stars he repaired all pressures to help China build an atomic bomb.

With its limited resources, faltering agriculture, and pledges to fight imperialism with goulash-improved living standards for its people—the Soviet Union will find such a situation almost unbearable strain unless there is relaxation somewhere.

It could come in Berlin, Cuba, or any point where Moscow and the West are in conflict.

There might be some concessions on disarmament. However, the direct inspection demanded by the West seems further off than ever since the Russians now will want to preserve their secrets from the Chinese as zealously as from the West.

The other side of the coin is just as important, however. The Russians, and Khrushchev in particular, cannot afford to follow a policy which might appear to prove the Chinese charge that Khrushchev is "the greatest capitulationist of all time" and a stooge of the United States.

The late president Kennedy understood this well, and there is no reason to think President Johnson does not.

More than two years ago, Kennedy told this correspondent during a private White House conversation that he could understand Khrushchev's need to "save face." Speaking specifically of the situation in Berlin, he said that if a self-guaranteeing arrangement could be worked out for the Western presence in Berlin and the security of the city, he would not object if Khrushchev found some way to present it to his people as a victory.

Khrushchev put an optimistic face on things to the last. Even in the call for a world Communist showdown meeting, his spokesman said the Soviet Union was still willing to work for reconciliation.

The last time this correspondent remarked to Khrushchev that U.S.-Soviet lineup against China in the not-too-distant future would come as no surprise, the premier showed no anger. He laughed.

The possibility remains that pressure from other Communist parties during the proposed meeting might bring the Chinese back sheep back into the Communist fold. It seems much more probable, however, that they will continue to scorn any shepherding from Moscow.

Canadians Hear Shots Whistle By

NICOSIA (CP) — United Nations mediator Sakari Tuomioja of Finland got an earful early today of the basic ingredient of the nervous attention in Cyprus a few hours after his arrival here.

There was a burst of gunfire in the Canadian patrol area which could easily be heard in the Ledra Palace Hotel where Tuomioja is staying. The mediator got the suite in the hotel when Arthur Andrew, Canadian

Recess Out For Members

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — With almost military precision, Arnold Peters (NDP — Timiskaming) and Frank Howard (NDP — Skeena) continued to take turns jumping to their feet Thursday night to ward off the passage of supplementary estimates with a barrage of questions.

They also had help from Murdo Martin (NDP — Timmins) as the NDP members stuck to their promise that they were going to let no estimates through the Commons without adequate examination.

And any thoughts members had of a long weekend—in lieu of a washed-out Easter recess—appeared to disappear under the welter of estimates still to be passed. Less than a third of them have gone through since Monday, with some of the more major departments — such as defence—still to come.

Thursday night with the immigration department and the civil service commission on the firing line comments ranged from bilingualism to possible copyrights on Indian handicrafts.

The NDP members handed the government platefuls of problems, which, they said, needed some looking into.

QUESTIONS PROTECTION

How, asked Mr. Peters, do Indians protect themselves against the importation of facsimiles of their products?

Mr. Howard commented that there has been a tendency to run the Indian affairs branch like a military department and there was "overly strict rigidity which prevents that depart-

Lesage Said Man To Watch

By JAMES NELSON

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Jean Lesage of Quebec emerged from the three-day federal-provincial premiers conference as the man to watch—even more so than Premier John Robarts of Ontario—in the political tennis game of current intergovernment relations.

He lobbed more balls back over the net into the federal court, and with the exception of fact, than any other player in the match. The fact that he is a Liberal and Mr. Robarts a Conservative, added to the attention he won in the game with the Ottawa Liberal government.

Before this conference opened Tuesday, Mr. Robarts seemed to qualify as a cup contender because of his stance on the Canada Pension Plan. He kept the Ottawa Liberals off pace by questioning details in the

Forty Years After Charge Indian Red Pledged Britain Aid

NEW DELHI (AP) — India's capital is agog over "the case of the mysterious letter."

The thriller involves British intelligence, unknown hands secretly searching the dusty national archives, a revolutionary flying home from Moscow in the night.

The hero or heel, depending on your politics, was Shripad Amrit Dange, the pro-Russian Communist party boss in India, vice-chairman of the Moscow-controlled World Federation of Trade Unions, and general secretary of the All-India Trades Union Congress.

He was in the spotlight because someone searched through hundreds of thousands of letters and documents in the national archives and found a letter supposedly written 40 years ago.

It was said to have been penned in a prison cell by a young Communist revolutionary.

The young man, frantic at the thought of four more years behind bars, pleaded with then British rulers to release him. In return he said he would work for British intelligence as a secret agent inside the Indian revolutionary movement.

That young man, it was said this week, was none other than Shripad Amrit Dange.

Clearly, the pro-Chinese wing of Dange's own party was trying to do him in, trying to oust his pro-Moscow faction and take the party into Peking's fold.

Dange was in Moscow when the storm broke. He flew home and declared he was enjoying the whole affair because it gave him a chance to challenge party dissidents.

His mood changed the next day when he received telegrams from party cells throughout India and his own Trades Union Congress. All demanded that he resign.

The party secretariat talked with Dange for two hours behind closed doors and told him he should lay low until April 9 when the party's national council and national executive will meet to investigate the charge.

Chief Purpose Of Study Is To Provide Provinces With Wider Tax Range

But Quebec Says It Cannot Wait For Increase in Tax Resources

By DON HANRIGHT

QUEBEC (CP) — Taking an unprecedented step, the federal-provincial conference decided Thursday to launch a ministerial-level "review in depth" of the nature and extent of taxes at both levels of government in relation to rising pressures for more spending.

One "important purpose" of the study — though Prime Minister Pearson stressed that it is not the only one — is to give the provinces a wider range of tax resources to finance rising costs of education and other services. He said constitutional amendments are conceivable.

But Quebec, again making no strides in its so-called "demand" for one-quarter of the income tax fields, said immediately that its need for more money is urgent — that it can't wait any longer.

Premier Lesage, due to de-liver his Quebec budget speech by mid-April, hinted that he will consider a tax increase at home.

Quebec's requests were eminently justifiable, he said. The provinces were paying the price of unbalanced taxation. What Quebec it was important "that we prove without further delay that we have firmly decided to correct this situation."

Meanwhile, he threatened court action by Quebec if the ultimate statutory form of the federal government's proposals for university-student loans and family allowances for 16- and 17-year-olds still in school, sheet to him—that they infringe on Quebec's constitutional rights in the field of education.

WILL CONSIDER VIEWS

The communique issued at the end of the three-day conference said the federal government would take no action in either field before considering provincial views. Mr. Pearson went no further himself in replying to reporters later.

The communique also announced agreement on immediate negotiations on the formula to be applied to provinces wanting to take over full responsibility for programs now

Endeavor to Have Trespass Cases Transferred to Federal Court

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP) — Racial tensions here appeared to ease today as lack of arrests apparently marked a temporary halt in demonstrations.

Police arrested 285 persons between last Saturday and Wednesday, mostly for violations of the state's trespass laws while participating in a sit-in demonstration.

Mrs. Malcolm Peabody, 72-year-old mother of Massachusetts Governor Endicott Peabody, was scheduled to fly back to Boston today. She spent two days in jail on trespass charges and put up a $450 bond for her release.

The jail started Thursday when lawyers, Mrs. Peabody and other witnesses went to Jacksonville in an effort to have the federal court take jurisdiction in the state's cases apparently marked a temporary halt in demonstrations.

However, U.S. District Judge Bryan Simpson refused to take jurisdiction, say the regular county courts could handle the cases.

Simpson also refused to issue an injunction barring the St. Augustine police department from using trained police dogs for the control and breaking up of integration demonstrations.

William Kuntler, New York lawyer specializing in civil rights cases, said he would appeal Simpson's ruling to the Fifth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

Air Transport Command Band Given Civic Welcome to City

By EUGENE LANG

Belleville was visited by two forces last evening, one with welcome, the other an old visitor whom we thought we had seen the last of. The welcome force was the Air Transport Command Band of the Royal Canadian Air Force escorted by Flying Officer K. J. Robbins and the unwelcome force that of the warrant officer who commands thrown over the cape of Old Man Winter making his final appearance—we hope.

Despite this sudden wintry outburst a large crowd was in attendance at the Belleville Collegiate auditorium to witness the fine performance that was given by this 54-member musical organization, that has toured thousands upon thousands of miles in many lands over the years. It was very appropriate that the band was here in Belleville at this time as just three days ago the RCAF marked its fortieth anniversary, the more important to this community as we are known as an Air Force City due to our proximity to RCAF Station Trenton, which has been 15 Operation for close on to 38 years. We are very fortunate here in being able to hear the various Air Force Bands from Trenton and 6 RD, which so kindly lend their services to the many parades of various groups, military and non-military over the decades.

WELCOMING CITY

Frank Murray, manager of Radio Station CJBQ, welcomed the band to Belleville and gave a brief history of the organization since its inception. He also introduced to the audience a few members of the original 2 RCAF Band, who were present for the concert. Mr. Murray then introduced His Worship Mayor Jack Ellis, who then spoke a few words of greeting to the band and extended gratulations to the RCAF on this fortieth anniversary as a fighting force.

The director of the band, F.O. K. J. Robbins is well known to Belleville as he was Bandmaster of the Belleville Municipal Band during the late forties before he enlisted in the RCAF in 1951.

His efficiency knowledge gained a large number of friends in the short while that he was living there and did wonders for our local band during the months that he was with the band. His musical ideas is the gain of the RCAF in respect to Ted Robbins. Ted is a fine bandsman and a knowing conductor as demonstrated by the excellent program that his men played under his baton last evening.

SPLENDID VARIETY

The program was one of variety and high entertainment value from start to finish. The band has forgotten what symphathy and tackles anything and everything from the solid classics to the latest in the jazz modern idiom. In such medleys as "Show Boat Songs" and "No Strings" the band was featured as selections and the "Special AT-Band Salute" to the 40th anniversary of the RCAF. The full resources of all players were brought into clear focus by the fine arrangements picked by the rhythmic pulsings of the percussion. Delicacy of the various solos was achieved in the "Elizabethan Serenade" by Bingo and the familiar Waltz "Voices of Spring" was lilting in its rendition sweet melodies. The only sloughter at times thus throwing off the true Viennese touch.

Two soloists were heard in the course of the concert. Will Jones, trumpeter came through with a compelling performance of "The Virgin of Macarena". Thomas MacGee, tenor sang "Vesti la Giubba" from "Pagliacci" and "The Donkey Serenade" by Friml, the former with pathetic appeal, the latter as sloughter at times thus throwing off the true Viennese touch.

The third movement from the "First Symphony" of Robert J. Dvorak, an American composer was the main item of the evening and an excellent work. It was, Much of American Concert Band music is tasteless and boring but this movement was really interesting and chock full of musical ideas taken from the Negro spirituals. The performance of this was A-1 from all concerned.

At half time, the back doors of the auditorium parted and the slide were pulled to enter Interest for everyone as the R.C.A.F. Pipe and Drum Band marched from the hall and up the stage. Free Ride To Cyprus Turned Down

OTTAWA (CP) — Arnold Peters, 41-year-old New Democratic MP for Timiskaming, said in the Commons Thursday for a free air ride to Cyprus for a personal checkup'll look at the situation there.

The MP for Timiskaming said he and several other MPs had asked for a free ride on the Air Force flight to plane flying from Canada to the Mediterranean trouble spot last week-end.

The government was "scared to let MPs go to Cyprus for a look at the situation because they would find out what United Nations orders have been given to Canadian troops in the UN peacekeeping force on the island, he said.

He said he wanted to make the trip during the planned Easter recess—washed out by overtime sittings — to see how the soldiers were living and to find out about Cyprus political and economic problems.

He was still willing to go.

External Affairs Minister Martin said there is no law forbidding such a trip and urging his own way to Cyprus on a commercial airliner.

Mr. Peters said he didn't feel so strongly about a trip to Cyprus to pay his own way. "I'm not looking for a vacation," he said. The trip was to learn about Cyprus and we asked him in his role in Parliament.

Mixed Spiel At Curling Club Nearing Finals

The mixed bonspiel is progressing satisfactorily under fine direction at the Quinte Curling Club and on Saturday one semi-final will be played after the afternoon draw and the final after the draw in the evening after which the prizes will be presented and the Quinte bands will join in a night of fun and frolic to end up a most successful season.

On Thursday night Ross Booth kept in the running by defeating Jack Johnson. Murray Johnson beat Charlie Cox and Lloyd Sheppard took Cliff Wells. Jack Bastable defeated Don MacKinnon with "Daddy" Dawson Boyd at the helm. The latter two put on a fine performance of this was A-1 from all concerned.

Former Agent Fined $200 By Magistrate

A former Belleville real estate agent today was fined $200 and costs by Magistrate Mc client's purchase deposit in a regulation holding account.

Cecil Ernest McLean, Albert Street, pleaded guilty to the offence involving a real estate sale in Belleville on July 1962 that never was completed.

By law, realtors are required to place all cash received on offers to purchase, in a trust account. The money is held in escrow until a transaction is not completed.

William Richardson, registrar of the Real Estate and Business Brokerage Act, said Mr. McLean had accepted $500 deposit from Mary Anne Amelcot of Lindsay for a $12,400 property purchase in an Ops township subdivision.

Instead of the cash being deposited in the mandatory trust account, Mr. McLean placed it in his general business account where it was ultimately expended in business and personal expenses, said the registrar.

The $500 was returned to Mrs. Amelcot last month . . . after the charge was laid."

Mr. McLean, who has year relinquished his real estate license, told Magistrate T. Y. Lally, said the purchaser was in depositing the cheque in my general account."

Defence counsel attorney, Tom Lally, said the particular subdivision involved had been "tied up in litigation."

However, the magistrate called it a serious offence. and noted the maximum fine for a first offence was $1,000.

"I don't think a minor fine is adequate," he added.

He gave Mr. McLean months to pay and instituted a further time expansion might be considered.

Blame Children For Starting Grass Fires

TRENTON — Easter holidays and three fires seem to go hand in hand. And this season is no exception.

On Wednesday, three separate fires were fought in Murray township by the Brighton Fire Department.

In one instance, a grass fire on property owned by Ernest Seede, R.R. 2, Brighton, spread to the Seede' home and firemen were forced to fight a fire in the attic of the home. Damage was kept to around $500.

Children were blamed for starting a fire on the Seede farm, near the Murray Canal, in which 10 acres was burned off.

It is thought that children were also responsible for a fire near Smithfield, on the north side of Highway 2, in which more than 30 acres were burned off.

Thursday, about $1200 worth of farm radio equipment was destroyed when another grass fire spread to a storage shed on Smithfield.

Fire Chief Edwin Boss of Brighton yesterday warned parents and guardians of young children to be careful in lighting fires in the fields or woods.

Murray Township Reeve, Angus Gunter, reiterated the township council's warning that persons found starting grass fires without first notifying Reeve Douglas McMaster or a member of the council, will be liable to be asked to pay for the services of the fire department called to the fire. A by-law, enabling the council to adopt this procedure, was passed last year.

Norwich Plan For Clean-up Well Received

TRENTON — The town of Norwich and district local service clubs who attended Wednesday night's Civic Improvement Committee meeting in the Trenton Chamber of Commerce, said after the meeting that they were favorably impressed in the proposed plan to improve the appearance of downtown residential areas, but no direct action was taken to put wheels in motion to adopt the plan, Lesage said.

The proposed improvement plan, called the Norwich Plan, after the town where it originated, it was first put into effect, is an economical method of systematically painting the fronts of otherwise changing the appearance of stores in the main business section of a town. The plan would be worked out block by block. An architect and color consultant would be hired to suggest color changes and other improvements for the front of each building and would cost the individual merchant around $300—much less than $2000.

NO INJURIES

On the overhead bridge between Trenton and Brighton shortly before noon yesterday, a Chevrolet sedan driven by Mrs. Elva Joan Reid of Concession and Goocher Cornsills of Brighton, resulted in damage set by OPP from Brighton as $500, but no injury to the drivers.

Constable Harkness, who investigated the accident, said that Mrs. Reid had stopped her car in response to a direction from a department of highways flagman, as workers were engaged in repairing the bridge.

Boys Tired, But Happy After Tourney

TRENTON — Wednesday night, close to 500 teenaged boys, tired but happy, boarded buses, bound for their homes in various parts of the province, the third annual Midget All-Star Hockey Tournament, sponsored by the Trenton Lions' Club Midget Hockey Committee.

The three-day event was a cliff-hanger right up to the end as it looked for a while as if there would have to be another game to determine the winner. The Midget All-Star team from Toronto and the Scarborough team were to have played a second championship game, but as regulations ruled out the York Steel team playing more than two games in any one day, the game would have had to be played another day.

That would have meant a trip together with other officials and York Steel was declared the winner. York Steel beat

Two Coroners Not Blamed By Official

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario supervising coroner's office Thursday cleared two coroners concerned with deaths in which bullet wounds were not discovered until the bodies had been removed to morgues.

An investigation was ordered Wednesday into the actions of Coroners Dr. H. H. Lloyd of Smiths Falls and Dr. H. B. Lang of Kitchener after Supervising Coroner D. H. B. Cottam said coroners have instructions to preserve the scene of a violent death as much as possible. This included not moving the body.

The deaths under investigation were those of Walter Gilf, 57 found dead in his Smiths Falls store Sunday, and Rev. Joseph Armstrong, 44, discovered slumped in his car on the outskirts of Kitchener March 18.

"We are convinced both coroners acted quite correctly under the circumstances and I would be wrong to assess any blame to them," said Jack Hills, assistant to Mr. Cottam.

"In neither of these cases did the police ask the coroners not to move the body."

WAS NO SIGN

Mr. Hills said there was no sign of bleeding or violence when Mr. Gilf's body was discovered. He said Mr. Gilf had a record of heart trouble and Mrs. Lloyd was under the impression the dead man's family doctor had seen the body.

He said two bullet wounds, one in the arm and another in the heart, were discovered 24 hours later at a funeral parlor and Dr. Lloyd immediately ordered an autopsy.

L. Mr. Armstrong's death, the bullet wounds were not discovered until the body — spattered body was taken to a morgue, Mr. Hills said.

He said Dr. Lang said there were people milling around the scene and finding the wounds immediately would have necessitated removing the dead man's clothing in front of them.

No charges have been laid in connection with the death of Mr. Gilf but Wayne Donald McKinney, 22, of Kirkland Lake, has been charged with capital murder in the death of Mr. Armstrong.

Bid to Block Legal Move Is Rejected

MONTREAL (CP) — A summons was issued Thursday against Mr. Justice Adrien Mecher of Superior Court and he told to block legal action by the province to be rejected.

The summons was issued by Judge Claude Wagner of Criminal Court, charging Mr. Justice Mercier lied on three occasions while testifying under oath before Judge Wagner on a preliminary hearing in a fraud case arising from a $64,000 bankruptcy.

Mr. Justice Meunier's petition for a writ to halt proceedings against him was turned down meanwhile by Judge Claude Prevost who ruled there was no legal basis for the writ.

Named to the bench last summer, Mr. Justice Meunier had been testifying at the preliminary inquiry about his connection with the case as a defence lawyer before his appointment. The 59-year-old Superior Court judge was also a Liberal member of Parliament for Montreal Papineau.

Judge Wagner presided over the hearing in the preliminary to determine whether there was enough evidence to bring the case before a jury. His precedent-setting judgment recommended that criminal charges be laid against the Superior Court judge and six other persons.

STARTS LEGAL FIGHT

Mr. Justice Meunier started a fight in Superior Court Thursday against the action when his petition such a writ could be issued against the Crown or against such of its ministers as the attorney-general and argued that Judge Wagner had been well within his jurisdiction in making his recommendations.

Mr. Justice Prevost took the case under advisement and did not say when he would render judgment.

The summons against Mr. Justice Meunier is answerable by April 7—next Tuesday. It alleges the Superior Court judge committed perjury in denying his was the voice on a recorded telephone conversation heard at the preliminary inquiry, and also denying he had withdrawn two cheques from the records of a criminal court action. No further details were given.

Perjury is punishable by up to 14 years in prison.

Dirk Stikker, NATO Secty., Is Retiring

CP from AP-Reuters

PARIS—Dirk U Stikker, secretary-general of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, announced today he is retiring during the summer.

Stikker, foreign minister of the Netherlands before becoming NATO's chief civilian official, made the announcement to the permanent NATO Council.

He did not set a definite date, presumably to allow NATO members time to agree on a successor.

Stikker, 67 next Sunday, told the council his health would not permit him to continue. He underwent a series of abdominal operations in 1965.

Stikker became secretary-general April 21, 1961, succeeding Paul-Henri Spaak of Belgium, who had held the job since 1957. NATO's first secretary-general was Lord Ismay of Britain.

PRAISES ALLIANCE

In a speech to the NATO Council today Stikker said:

"... Our alliance has halted Soviet aggression in Europe. It has brought into being the closest knit defensive alliance that has ever existed in time of peace.

"As our alliance enters its 18th year it is faced with problems. But as I look back over the years I take courage from the example of the past and I draw from it new inspiration and new hope for an institution which I believe now, as I believed in 1949, is necessary for the survival of all that we hold dear."

Curling Club Looking Ahead To Another Year

Although the curling season will officially close on Saturday evening, the president of the club, Everett Black, is looking ahead to another year. Mr. Black says, however, a number of residents, who had been thinking of taking up curling as a winter sport, but have not yet joined the Quinte Curling club. Also there are a number of junior girls who might be interested in forming a group to play at the local rink next winter. Anyone wishing curling across from a $64,000 bankruptcy.

An opportunity will be given prospective members and business girls on Sunday afternoon after two o'clock to come up to the rink and try their hand at the sport of curling. There will be experienced teachers on hand and the newer members need not worry about breaking the "Rocks" by putting gouges in the ice. It is not a hard game to learn, but one that requires practice to master, and there will be a lot of that. In the meantime in good fellowship and the making of new friends.

The prospective curlers are asked to bring with them is proper togs. Brooms and other tackle will be provided. This is an open invitation to all and the president and other executive members will be on hand to explain any questions that might be asked. If you become a curling addict, one has a long winter season for the winter to roll around. New members will find the Quinte Curling Club to be a hospitable organization whose membership is not set aside Judge Wagner's recommendations.

Mr. Guerin argued that Judge Wagner had exceeded his jurisdiction in the matter, that "grave errors" had been committed at the inquiry and that "justice had not been rendered."

Georges Pouliot, representing Judge Wagner, said he didn't believe such a writ could be issued against the Crown or against such of its ministers as the attorney-general and argued that Judge Wagner had been well within his jurisdiction in making his recommendations.

Mr. Justice Prevost took the case under advisement and did not say when he would render judgment.

First Play in New Home Of Theatre Guild Enjoyed

Last night there were the Stanley Cup playoffs on TV. At B.C.I. auditorium in Radio Station CJBQ was staging a free concert by one of the area's top service bands—that of RCAF-Transport Command, Trenton.

On top of which, at the last moment, it snowed—and snowed—in most unseasonal gesture by the weather.

And snow it did all through supper hour—and up to curtain time for the Belleville Theatre premiere presentation of "Thurber's Carnival" at its own home—the Loft Playhouse.

And yet this least-heralded, most-cruelly beset of all events in Belleville last night came through with the plan regular patrons of the Guild have come to associate with it in recent years.

Understandably, noting the foregoing, the audience was not as large as it might have been. But the dash and spirit of the cast were unimpaired by it. Certainly has proved the truth of its advance notices.

It was billed as the fastest show in town. It most certainly is that. At last count, there 30 changes of scenery, stage and character all crammed into its two sets.

FINE NEW HOME

And it is staged in a theatre that is a model of its kind.

The Loft Playhouse is the name given by the Guild to its new theatre—a most appropriate place of publicly-productive residence since its formation. Prior to the move, the Guild's studio it has carved a theatre that not only meets the demands of theatre, but that of its audience, for safe, comfortable enjoyment.

It demonstrates what can be accomplished by initiative, an initiative proved by last night's production.

While there were first-night technical flaws, compared to the achievement they were small.

The secret of the Guild's current production is a revolving stage and the overall design of the production which permits its fast pace. In the rapid pace, couple these to well-controlled lights, well-cued music, the particular wit of James Thurber and one can leave with the feeling of an evening well spent.

Providing, of course, some flaws are ironed out by the cast.

And so to the play.

"Thurber Carnival" is a dramatization by the masterly American wit, James Thurber of the cream of his prodigious crop. It bends from the outrageous to the subtle for dramatic contrast—and so demands much of its cast.

NEW, OLD FACES

Its director, James Alexander, starts by levying his cast with the challenge of pace akin to a TV production, has nicely mingled new and old faces.

One of the more delightful scenes is "Macbeth Murder Mystery" with Margo Hall (a familiar face) and Trevor Dickinson (a recent Guild acquisition for its public relations). They make perfect mutual plays for the point Thurber is making.

Mr. Dickinson early displays his grasp of the dramatic values in a monologue "The Night the Bed Fell."

Another veteran of the Guild, Lee Jourard, scores through it fine style in most of its scenes Mr. Jourard had a nice turn of deadpan mockery (watch for his deathly serious portrayal of a crawfished reviewer in a theatre).

Another apparent exponent of deadpan wit is Sandra Svendsen, whether playing like a little girl, lost or a leggy harmad conveys the disconcerting knack of looking over your shoulder while staring cow straight in the eyes.

The overall sparkle is kept going by Flo Fraser, Nicki Thomas, Bob Burke, Margaret Anderson, Harry Mitchell and Al Hall. Most of them well-known to Guild audiences, they lose in and out of characters with the others as the production races through its multitude of scenes.

UTMOST DEMANDED

However, they were not without flaws last night — particularly in pacing. Mr. Mitchell was not convincing in the farcical "Surrender at Appomattox" scene. And there were one or two moments of his portrayal of "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty" that could stand some more attention.

Yet, the pace of the production demands the utmost from its cast. To have Mr. Dickinson deliver his hardcase one minute with mid-Western mollines and shortly after doing the genteel cowardice as a typically-English gent; with Mrs. Yeoover waiting from an all-night picture on cables to worried shopgirl; with Mrs. Thomas ranging from an ideal housewife to a nagging wife; with Bob Burke departing from tipsy floor walker to homicidal husband; Mr. Mitchell switching from jazzy woman chaser to a twitching animal psychiatrist; Mr. Fraser from record stiff army sergeant to relaxed beachcomber — gives some impression of the demands made on them.

SOME DRAGS

There also were some drags in scenes between players.

Yet, while not an intensely dramatic event the first night performance of "Thurber Carnival" was a refreshing one, refreshing in gaiety and wit, in a great deal of startling in its pace and vitality.

The production is designed with a typical flare by Ann Boyle, who apparently went right back to the original Thurber cartoons for inspiration.

Put the whole thing down in this respect, the Guild has shown what can be done by any group of local citizens with enough initiative to get with it. (N. T.)

Mr. and Mrs. Harry McCreary Honored at Retirement Party

More than 150 people braved a spring blizzard last night to attend a retirement party for Mr. and Mrs. Harry McCreary in Plainfield I.O.I. Hall. Mr. and Mrs. McCreary retired February 28, after the Bell Telephone Co. bought and took over operation of the McCreary Telephone Co. Ltd., serving Thurlow township.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Beatty of Plainfield organized the party in co-operation with the Ontario Independent Telephone Exchanges' Association, of Toronto. European Buyers Like Ontario Furs Displayed

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario furs and fur styling were on the play this week for eight European buyers — seven from the United Kingdom and one from Italy.

They were invited by the newly-formed Toronto Fur Export Group and the Ontario department of economics and development to see fashionable showrooms and fashion shows.

"They should have tried this long ago—I am very impressed by both furs and styling," said James Gosman of Glasgow, a department store chain executive.

The Toronto group of five manufacturers are hoping to MCCREARY'S Canadian fur export market, until now dominated by Quebec.

The visiting group seemed most interested in wild mink and mutation mink and beaver, especially in jacket, said Sidney Schipper, one of the manufacturers.

At a fashion show Thursday a mink-trimmed dark mouton coat drew a round of applause when the model showed its reversible gold - brocaded white lining. So did a light, jaunty mink jacket in Canadian tan, called a "fun fur" by the commentator.

Two Coroners Not Blamed By Official

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario supervising coroner's office Thursday cleared two coroners concerned with deaths in which bullet wounds were not discovered until the bodies had been removed to morgues.

An investigation was ordered Wednesday into the actions of Coroners Dr. H. H. Lloyd of Smiths Falls and Dr. H. V. Lang of Kitchener after Supervising Coroner D. H. B. Cotnam said coroners have instructions to preserve the scene of a violent death as much as possible This included not moving the body.

The deaths under investigation were those of Walter Giff, 37 found dead in his Smiths Falls store Sunday, and Rev. Joseph Armstrong, 45, discovered slumped in his car on the outskirts of Kitchener March 18.

"We are convinced both coroners acted quite correctly under the circumstances and it would be wrong to assess any blame to them," said Jack Hills, assistant Dr. Cotnam.

"In neither of these cases did the police ask the coroners not to move the body."

WAS NO SIGN

Mr. Hills said there was no sign of bleeding or violence when Mr. Giff's body was discovered. He said Mr. Giff had a record of heart trouble and Dr. Lloyd was under the impression the dead man's family doctor had seen the body.

Providing, of course, some flaws are ironed out by the cast. And so to the play.

"Thurber Carnival" is a dramatization by the masterful American wit, James Thurber of the cream of his productive crop. It bends from the outrageous to the subtle for dramatic contrast—and so demands much of its cast.

NEW, OLD FACES

Its director, James Alexander, while buying his cast with the challenge of pace akin to a TV production, has nicely mingled new and old faces.

One of the more delightful scenes is "MacBeth" Mischer Mischer" with Margo Hall (a familiar face) and Trevor Dickinson (a recent Guild acquisition for its noble impersonations). They make perfect mutual ploys for the point Thurber is proving.

Mr. Dickinson early displays his grasp of the dramatic nuance in a monologue "The Night the Bed Fell."

Another veteran of the Guild, Joe Jourard, comes through in fine style in most of his scenes Mr. Jourard had a nice turn of deadpan mockery to watch for his deathly serious portrayal of a crawl-clad rewriter of the classics).

Another apparent exponent of deadpan wit is Sandra Svendsen, who, whether playing a little girl lost or a leggy barmaid conveys the disconcerting knack of looking over your shoulder while staring one straight in the eyes.

The overall sparkle is kept going by Flo Vanevery, Nicki Thomas, Bob Burke, Margaret Anderson, Harry Mothall and Al Hall. Most of them well known to Guild audiences, they leap in and out of characters with the others as the production races through its multitude of scenes.

WITHOUT DEMANDED

However, they were not without flaws last night — particularly in pacing. Mr. Mothall in his role announcing in the farcical "Surrender at Appomattox" scene. And there were one or two moments as has portrayal of "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty" that could stand some more attention.

Yet, the pace of the production demands the utmost from its cast. To have Mr. Dickinson crippling his audience one minute with mid-Western nonsense and shortly after doing the goosiest cowyard gag, typically English gent; with Mrs. Vanover waltzing from an allsmiles Southern belle to a horribly worried shopgirl; with Mrs. Thomas ranging from an ideal Lady Macbeth to a shrewish wife; with Bob Burke departing from tipsy floor walker to homicidal gangster; Mr. Mothall switching from jazzy woman chaser to a twitching animal psychiatrist; Mr. Fraser from rumrd skiff army sergeant to relaxed beachcomber—gives some impression of the demands made on them.

SOME DRAGS

There also were some drags in case between the players.

Yet, while not an intensely dramatic event the first night of "Thurber Carnival" was a refreshing one, refreshing in gaiety and wit, in a great deal more startling in its pace and vitality.

The production is designed to bring forth frothy flare by Ann Boyle, who apparently went right back to the original Thurber cartoons for inspiration.

Put the whole thing down in the catalogue as fun. The Loft Playhouse, and there is the ideal framework for an evening.

In its new quarters, no less than its first public production there, the Guild has shown what can be done by any group of local citizens with enough initiative to get with it. (N. T.)

Mr. and Mrs. Harry McCreary Honored at Retirement Party

More than 150 people braved a spring blizzard last night to attend a retirement party for Mr. and Mrs. Harry McCreary in Plainfield L.O.L. Hall. Mr. and Mrs. McCreary retired February 28, after the Bell Telephone Co. bought and took over operation of the McCreary Telephone Co. Ltd., serving Thurlow township.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Beatty of Plainfield organized the party in co-operation with the Ontario Independent Telephone Exchanges' Association, of Toronto. Speeches honoring Mr. and Mrs. McCreary were delivered by M. G. Sweeney, manager of Bell Telephone's Belleville office and by Mrs. Harry Harrison.

Included among the guests were Clarke Rollins, M.L.A. (who presented an engraved silver tray to Mr. and Mrs. McCreary); Miss Leita Prindle, who was an operator with the McCreary Co. for 13 years and Mrs. Percy Osland who was an operator with the McCreary firm for seven years. Garth McCreary and his wife; J. Jobbins, manager of the Ontario Independent Telephone Exchanges' Association and members of the Bell Telephone Pleasure Club, Clayton Hall.

European Buyers Like Ontario Furs Displayed

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario furs and fur styling are on display this week for eight European buyers — seven from the United Kingdom and one from Italy.

They were invited by the newly-formed Toronto Fur Export Group and the Ontario department of economics and development (to see factories, showrooms and fashion shows.

"They should have tried this long ago—I am very impressed by both furs and styling," said James Gossman of Glasgow, a department store chain executive.

The Toronto group of five manufacturers are hoping to secure a larger share of the Canadian fur export market, until now dominated by Quebec.

The visiting buyers seemed most interested in wild mink, and mutation mink and beaver, particularly in jacket styles, said Mr. Schipper, one of the manufacturers.

At a fashion show Thursday night a timbered dark mutation coat drew a round of applause when the model showed its reversible gold - brocaded satin lining. So did a light, long-clock, a gossamer fabric also called a "fun fur" by the commentator.

LESS NEWSPRINT

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — Indian newspapers Friday faced further cuts in newsprint quotas because of the country's continuing foreign exchange shortage. Big newspapers will get 12.5 per cent less newsprint than the standard based on the number of pages they had in 1957 and their circulation in 1961-62.

If Rum is your drink Wood's Old Navy is your Rum

This is a rum that's dark and mellow. This is a hearty robust rum that's every bit a man's rum. This is Wood's Old Navy, a blend of the world's finest (many as old as 9 years). A long-standing favourite in England, we think you'll agree that no other rum can equal Wood's Old Navy for full-bodied flavour. Try it next time.

L. Roscoe Robson

Hastings County lost an outstanding native son and devoted servant with the passing of L. Roscoe Robson.

Loyalty to his home, family, county and country was one of his outstanding characteristics. His devotion to his duties, whether on the farm, in municipal government, or for many years as a member of the Ontario Legislature marked him as a man of sincerity, and desire to serve.

Altruistic in the true sense of the word, Mr. Robson never shirked his responsibilities, placing his duty to his neighbors, family and various associates before personal well-being.

He entered public life in 1931, serving his community and later his county and constituency in a manner that bespoke a strong devotion to his labors.

Roscoe Robson met his problems face to face. He was the epitome of fairness, with candor marking the courage of his convictions. He was quiet-spoken, friendly, the kind of man one would want for a next-door neighbor.

Mr. Robson had the enviable "knack" of being able to get along with everybody. A sincere approach to matters or problems at hand, a quiet analysis of facts, enabled him to arrive at decisions that usually resulted in the betterment of all concerned.

He made friends easily. He was that kind of a man. He never pushed himself to the forefront nor did he retreat when things became difficult. He enjoyed the respect and esteem of all with whom he came in contact in the various phases of his work.

No finer tribute can be paid Roscoe Robson than that expressed by Judge J. C. Anderson. "His high standard of public service will long be an inspiration to countless people in this county whom he long and so faithfully served."

Busy -- But With What?

Montreal Gazette

The American naturalist, John Burroughs, once turned down an invitation to town. It was in the spring. How could he, possibly leave the countryside, with so much that was wonderful taking place? He couldn't spare the time.

There is something enviable in such an attitude—a multitude of a man who thought that watching the spectacle of nature's unfolding in field and forest was far too tremendous for him to spare time for any lesser occupation.

The wonder of Nature is something often acknowledged to exist but rarely seen. Masters of business must come first. So the day dawns and the sun shines over the world, and twilight gathers, and the stars appear in the darkness and nearly everyone is too busy to notice. There are many things to be done, and little time in which to do them.

Robert Frost writes of stopping in his sleigh to watch the wood fill and mingle in the first darkest evening of the year, with no other sound but the shake of the harness bells, the easy wind and downy flake.

But, he could not linger; there were miles to go before he slept, and a long way to go:

The woods are lovely, dark and deep,
But I have promises to keep,
And miles to go before I sleep,
And miles to go before I sleep.

Those who have no time to linger miss the sense of stillness that lies in Nature, the unhurried peace, the awareness that time is not an enemy to be outrun but the patient source of wisdom. Agnes Repplier, in one of her essays, recalls the story of the visitor strolling through the park. "Ay," replied the great wit, "they have nothing else to do." And he walked away.

Perhaps, as Agnes Repplier hints, Voltaire may have spoken as much in envy as scorn. But neither envy nor scorn was in the mind of the New England philosopher, Henry David Thoreau, who knew the trees round about, as the seasons came and went, and who looked upon them, as his friends under the sky.

"I frequently tramped eight or ten miles through the deepest snow," he would write, "to keep an appointment with a beech-tree, or a pitch pine, or an old acquaintance among the pines."

There are those who may really have no time for such visiting. But much of the business of the world may be little more than nervous habits, and false compunctions. When last things are put first, means become ends.

Arthur Christopher Benson was a writer who loved Nature but had little time for her. The important thing was to write. When he was living, as Master of Magdalene College, in the Old Lodge in Cambridge, he would turn indoors on a perfect summer evening, just as the shadows were falling cool and fragrant between the garden trees and twilight day. His rules were absolute.

Seated in his dark room he would turn his back on the radiance of the evening, the golden light upon the college lawns, the grey on the mingled old roofs and turrets above the orchard by the river." He had work to do, and must not be tempted.

So the years went by and sun shone only through books in him. A quiet wisdom, more nearly attuned to the peaceful days and nights, was that of novelist Kenneth Grahame. He had won his success with his book "The Wind in the Willows." But he had retired from his post in the Bank of England and was living in the country on his pension.

To a friend who was prodding him to write more he replied with the certainty of a man who, in a serene sense, had too much else to do:

"What . . . is the use of writing for a person like myself? To tell of making sentences means to sit indoors for many hours cramped over a desk. Yet out of doors the wind may be singing through the willows — in the fullness of the moon."

Should Retain Present System

Ald. Donald J. Whalen thinks that the one-way street system for the control of downtown traffic here has been tried and has proven a failure.

He is entitled to his opinion.

He wants Mayor John Ellis to persuade the city traffic committee to abandon the "experiment."

It is conceivable, through some trick of fate, that the majority of the members of the city traffic committee and of the City Council —or even all of them—may share Ald. Whalen's dislike of the present one-way traffic system.

It is inconceivable that this attitude holds true amongst even a small fraction of Belleville motorists.

If the Council did order a return to two-way traffic on Front and Pinnacle Streets, the resultant howl of protest, after an hour's experience with the traffic tangles which would inevitably result, would assure a quick about-face.

Let no one interpret this as a contention that traffic tie-ups do not occur under the present system, or that traffic flow is not, at times, so slow as to aggravate a small.

All we are saying is that the one-way system provides conditions which are an improvement over those which existed when traffic went two-ways, as we remember those conditions, and certainly vastly better than would be possible with two-way traffic today, with the heavier traffic which has developed.

It is frequently possible to drive from Bridge Street to Victoria Avenue, on Pinnacle, without touching the brakes! If it were not for jaywalkers, the same could be achieved on Front Street any morning around store-opening time. When a car stops to let out a passenger, it is possible to pull around it into the other lane. An alert driver can change lanes to take advantage of a vacant parking spot which, of course, is always on the opposite side of the street from that on which he is driving. Pedestrians rarely hold up a line of cars whose drivers want to turn right off Front street onto Bridge street—but there is no comparable delay at the other side of the "Four Corners" intersection by cars endeavoring to turn right off Bridge street onto Front street, because traffic does not flow that way. On Pinnacle street, where the bulk of traffic turns left onto Bridge street, cars are not delayed by southbound cars going straight through the intersection.

Probably no traffic system could be devised that would be without fault, but we feel that the present system meets the situation better than any other that has been suggested.

Letter to the Editor

Objects to City Plan To Remodel YMCA

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

The proposed alterations of City Council in connection with renovating the old Y.M.C.A. building and making it into a police station have caused a number of people great concern. I find it is hard to find anyone who is against the city buying the Y building, and we are not. It is hard to find people who are against removing it.

In view of this concern, twenty-seven people have signed the attached letter and forwarded it to the Police Commission Board and I would suggest that more people read the attached letter and let the Council and the Board know their feelings.

Yours truly,
J. D. Bacon.

RE: By-law 7812
Corporation City of Belleville

Dear Sir:—

We, the undersigned are sincerely concerned with the subject by-law, whereby the City of Belleville proposes to purchase the Y.M.C.A. Campbell Street property, and, through remodelling and alterations, create a police station and magistrate's court.

Our concern is aroused by the estimates of the report prepared for the City Council by Craig, Zeidler and Strong, Architects, many of which we have attached and have underlined a few pertinent items.

If you were to read the report in full, we feel that you will understand our concern in its vagueness and inconsistency, which indicates to us that the proposed estimated cost could be greatly exceeded.

It is our opinion, that the expenditure of large sums of money in a 53-year-old building, is not good business economics.

The alternative we suggest is that the same amount of money used in new construction on the present police station site, could supply suitable accommodation.

Computer Generous

Ottawa Citizen

However much we may deplore the march of automation, the process can confer benefits — unintentional, perhaps, but nevertheless beneficial.

Take the case of the Quebec government's computer, which in the 1962-63 fiscal year came up with answers that resulted in the loss of $270,000 in pari-mutuel revenue to students. Perhaps "loss" is the wrong word. It depends on the point of view. The students who were covered with the unexpected government largesse would count it a gain. But let's not split hairs about the meaning of words.

The computer is reported to have gone wrong because of an error made in the cards fed into it. But this explanation may be a happy dream on the part of the computer people to find a scapegoat. Before the error was discovered an amount in excess of $1,724,000 had been allocated to various universities. Of this sum, $275,000 was distributed to deserving students and spent before the offending cheques could be withdrawn. If the operation had been performed by hand from start to finish, it is certain that the mistake would have been noticed before so much money was mailed out. Computers work mighty fast.

Mr. J. A. Verina, the provincial auditor, says that because the $275,000 already has been spent by the students (on books, we hope) before the error was found, "there is little hope of recovering it." It doesn't require a computer to confirm that this view is probably correct. It's not that we have anything against students. But they get up an imperfectly complex, and it's a good thing now and again, to see a computer in a position where it should be made to stand in a corner and wear a dunce cap.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

April 3rd, 1916.

While Berlin still burns from the latest blow of the R.A.F., few people are aware of the colossal effort in enabling bombers to be marshalled from forty to fifty airfields for a single attack. This effort is partly illustrated by the following facts.

The R.A.F.'s average airfield is two by two-and-a-half square miles in area, surrounded by a five-mile long perimeter track fifty feet wide. Inside these three runways, one 2,000 yards, two 1,400 yards all 50 yards wide. Larger airfields have runways three thousand yards by one thousand yards. The total area of the runways and perimeter tracks of British airfields are nearly one hundred and sixty million yards, a figure equivalent to nine thousand miles of road thirty feet wide. The total area of all British airfields is 196 airfields of average type described. The average airfield costs one million pounds sterling to two million pounds. The total cost of which is six hundred and fifteen million pounds ninety-seven million pounds were spent on R.A.F. airfields, the rest being lend-lease to the United States.

To construct these airfields has cost Britain a vast effort. Runway concrete averages nine inches thick. This required thirty million tons of materials for all airfields, partly supplied by the bomb vehicle. London alone supplied one-and-a-quarter millions of tons of hard core for this purpose.

This gives an impression of the colossal effort by which the people of Britain have turned their island into one vast airfield. This is to be compared with the effort in the war of 1914-1918 which produced seven airfields as against three hundred and one airfields.

To Your Good Health

Rest Important During Active Stage of Hepatitis

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Two years ago I had hepatitis, and even with the best of care it left me with a chronic liver condition. Is there any drug which will help? What about a diet? Is rest important? I am 36 — D. F.

Perhaps putting hepatitis into correct perspective will make you less gloomy than you seem to be.

Hepatitis is inflammation of the liver. In the last few years we have heard a good deal about it because much of it has been traced to virus.

However, there are plenty of causes: arsenic, hydrocarbons and a variety of poisons; syphilis; amoeba. All are inflammation of the liver and hence are "hepatitis."

In short, the liver is damaged, sometimes more and sometimes less.

While the organ has remarkable powers of regenerating itself, even after rather severe damage, this takes time.

Unlike a good many other illnesses, once the infection has been conquered, you may return to normal quite readily. This is not so with the liver, because it is complex and there is no way to give it a complete rest. Thus the healing and regeneration is a process at all times of important organ keeps right on working.

There is no magic drug which will do this for you. Rather, you succeed best just by seeing to it that you do not overtax the liver with Nature's slow progress.

Diet should be balanced — protein, carbohydrate, and a moderate amount of fat. Vitamin B complex should be taken too.

Alcohol must be avoided. After all, it is a poison, and the liver shouldn't be required to detoxify it.

Rest is important in the active stage of hepatitis; after two years your symptoms are mild (about eight hours for most of us) is all you require.

It's easier for me to tell you to be patient than it is for you to be so. There are certain liver tests that can be done every six months or so, which will reveal whether the condition is static or improving, and quite aside from the medical importance of this information, it is sometimes comforting in a patient to know that he really is improving even though the procedure seems terribly slow.

Dear Dr. Molner: Are suppositories at all harmful? Are they better than the daily use of laxatives?

Please send me your booklet, "The Way to Stop Constipation." I am enclosing the required long, self self-addressed, unstamped envelope and 25 cents in coin, in care of the Chicago Sun-Times syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill. — Mrs. W. W.

Suppositories are much safer and usually effective. Hence preferable to laxatives or enemas. My ill effect (they may be none, remember) would give you warnings by means of nocturia, discharge, or bleeding.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have been a fairly heavy smoker since I was 14. I am now 18. I have read so much about cancer that I would like to know what my chances are of avoiding it if I stop now. — A. F.

They will be a lot better if you stop smoking. That is much better chance of avoiding heart trouble or lung troubles, 400.

Dear Dr. Molner: Our eighth grade class would like to know if it is true that eating the apple core could cause appendicitis? — Room 31 (47 signatures).

No, it won't cause appendicitis. A seed, if it happened to lodge in the appendix, could cause irritation but even this is unlikely because of the bulk and give teacher an apple. And have one yourself.

Note to A. E.: No, there is no indication that tranquilizers cause cataracts. There can be side effects, but they are temporary; if trouble develops, stop or reduce the tranquilizers.

He Deserved Better Deal

Montreal Star

A good many Canadians will feel just a little shabby over the case of Mr. Joseph Buckie (J. J. Allen).

Mr. Buckie came to Canada from Poland 37 years ago, aged 13. When the Second War arrived it never occurred to him — or to the authorities — that he was an enemy alien. He joined the Hamilton Light Infantry, landed with it at Dieppe, later fought with it across Europe. He was wounded four times.

Last year he discovered by accident that he was not a citizen of this country. To become one, a few days ago, he had to fill in a lot of forms, go through the rather drab process of Citizenship Court, and pay $125. His Canadian-born wife had to pay $1 to regain her citizenship.

It is not the $11 that we, as Canadians resent. It is the fact that our government did not find it any of Mr. Buckie's business with a little more of the dignity to which he is so richly entitled.

Strictly Personal

Hasty Choice Of Profession Is Dangerous

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

To the future question put by so many adults in this day: "What are you going to be when you grow up?" the only sensible answer is, "I hope to be a man."

This is not as flippant or disrespectful as it may sound, in view of the terrible perplexities of growing up today consists in the pressure to make premature decisions about "what to be."

Children, and especially boys, are often urged to talk intelligently about this by the time they enter high school, so that, four years later, they will have a definite goal when they enter college.

But, except for the rare personalities with exceptional and well-defined gifts that bubble to the surface at an early age, a child is not equipped — emotionally or intellectually — to know his true vocation in the adult world until he has exposed himself to life.

A young man who enters college today with the frank admission that he doesn't know what he "wants to be" is regarded as odd or indecisive or lazy or almost feebleminded. But college actually is the place to find out how to make up one's mind about such things.

Everybody pays effusive lip-service to the humanities and liberal arts, and to the idea of cultivating the "well-rounded" person; yet a lot who take such a course is continually prodded to "think about a career," and made to feel as if he is dodging his responsibility as a student by simply opting for a "general education."

A university is not, primarily, a place in which to learn how to make a living; it is a place in which to learn how to be alive, and to discover the things almost despite oneself, and how to discipline the mind and expand the imagination; how to make some sense out of the big world we will shortly be thrown into.

Those who fail to do this in college almost never get to do it afterwards. They may acquire occupations and professions, but they adopt what the French call "deformation professionelle" — that is, the occupation takes over the whole personality, constricts and deforms it, and the rest of the person is lost forever.

Ambitious parents cripple more sons than they inspire. Pressure to become this or that — or to make any unripe decision — turns college into a mere anteroom to life, rather than the laboratory it should be. If a child is not permitted to find himself, in his own time, there is one else he ever finds will satisfy his deepest needs.

As the searching examination of the estimates continued, one of the most spirited contributions of the night came from Quebec Conservative Louis-Joseph Pigeon, who said that unless he got an answer to a question he would block a government spending item for three weeks or a month."

What he wanted to know was whether English-French bilingual ability in the civil service is going to be rewarded with a bonus.

Mr. Pigeon, member for Joliette - L'Assomption - Montcalm, failed to establish calm, said that such a bonus had been promised by State Secretary Lamontagne, and he quoted Justice Minister Favreau as saying the French-speaking section of Ottawa's civil service felt thwarted and frustrated.

ASK ABOUT CYPRUS

The only estimates that drew extensive comments from party leaders were for the external affairs department, when both Opposition Leader Diefenbaker and NDP Leader Hazen Argue asked for clarification of the terms of reference for Canadian troops in Cyprus.

Mr. Diefenbaker said it was wrong that he should have to read in the press about the reported restrictions placed on the Canadian force in operation. "Surely Canadians have a right to know how the force is going to operate . . . that information should not be denied that knowledge.

Mr. Douglas said it was important that the troops be given the complete right to self-defence, the right to go anywhere they want, and the power to begin disarming civilians.

"Unless that disarming process was begun immediately, there would be more trouble ahead.

Mr. Douglas said that united efforts are started promptly to disarm civilians in Cyprus, "there is certain to be trouble."

IS IN POSITION

Only the United Nations force, in which Canadians form the main contingent, was in a position to carry out the disarmament, Mr. Douglas-Cyprians that he talks weapons away from Turkish-Cypriots, or vice versa, "we can visualize what will happen."

Mr. Douglas spoke as the House completed its study of external affairs department items in the $240,000,000 package of supplementary estimates for the fiscal year that ended at midnight Tuesday.

Fewer than 100 MPs were in the 265-seat chamber.

Mr. Douglas said three things are necessary to make the UN's stand in Cyprus clear and avoid new criticism.

These were: the "complete right of self-defence" for UN soldiers; freedom for UN troops to go anywhere on the island, and the immediate disarming of the civilian population.

Temple Presents Appeal Bill To Commons

Robert Temple, South Hastings M.P., yesterday successfully introduced for first reading in the Commons his bill to amend procedure in death sentence appeals laid down in the Criminal Code.

If the bill is eventually approved by Parliament, it would be an historic amendment having crucial bearing on all criminal cases involving capital punishment.

"The purpose of this Bill," says the document's explanatory, "is to provide that in the case of an appeal from a death sentence in the Court of Appeal, the death sentence shall be suspended to life imprisonment, where the court has not been unanimous in confirming the conviction."

Mr. Temple first served notice ten days ago to Commons he would formulate and present the amendment. His action was prompted by the appeal of Bernard Cote, sentenced to death by a Quebec court for murder. The appeal was lost when a majority of appeal court judges ruled against it.

"My idea," Mr. Temple said in Belleville before returning to Ottawa this week, "is that since a jury has to be unanimous then a court of appeal has to be unanimous."

Parliament At a Glance

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

THURSDAY, April 2, 1964

NDP Leader Douglas warned that disarmament discussions is essential if the UN forces is to prevent new violence in Cyprus.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker again demanded Parliament be given details of the directives issued to the UN troops there.

External Affairs Minister Martin said the UN policy is to keep such directives private, as Mr. Diefenbaker did in the Congo operation.

The House finally passed Mr. Martin's supplementary estimates and went on to tackle a long list of other departmental items.

Louis-Joseph Pigeon (PC—Joliette - L'Assomption-Montcalm) said the government must honor a pledge to pay bilingual employees a bonus.

Senator Jean-Francois Pouliot (L—Quebec) rapped Senator Gratton O'Leary (PC—Ontario) over some remarks made about Commons business.

FRIDAY, April 3

The Commons meets at 11 a.m. EST to continue debate on supplementary estimates. The Senate meets at 3 p.m.

Reward Offered

SMITHS FALLS, Ont. (CP)— The Smiths Falls police commission has posted a reward of $1,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the slayer of Walter Gift, 47, here Easter Sunday.

Mr. Gift, a shopkeeper, was found dead in his store with two bullets in his body.

take cognizance of these three points.

He said External Affairs Minister Martin is in a delicate position because the troops are under the command of the UN and yet Mr. Martin must be held accountable in Parliament for their actions.

In reply, Mr. Martin said his description of the UN's terms of reference to Cyprus was as general as Mr. Diefenbaker's when he was prime minister at the time of the UN Congo operation.

He said UN practice is basic on privacy for such rules and regulations.

Mr. Martin said he hoped to be able to make public shortly a "status of troops agreement" covering Canadian and other forces in Cyprus.

Today, as estimates drone on, Prime Minister Pearson and other members of his cabinet will be back in the House from the Quebec City federal-provincial conference, and Parliament likely will get a break from money matters to hear a first-hand report on the conference. Then it will be back to the item-by-item crawl through the estimates.

Society Will Hear 2 Speakers At Meeting

When the Hastings County Historical Society holds its April meeting at the Corby Public Library Monday evening, two speakers will outline interesting chapters of local history.

Mrs. Jack English will present a filmstrip on "Pioneer Homes and Schools in Eastern Canada," a sequel to the filmstrip presented at the last meeting.

And Gerald Boyce will describe the "Grand Trunk Railway Strike at Belleville, 1876-77". On the basis of recent research at Ottawa, he will attempt to outline the events of the riotous New Year's week end at the local station almost 90 years ago.

Just who were the heroes and villains in this strike? Could the blame be placed on the Grand Trunk Railway for issues it dismissed a large number of engineers two days before Christmas and refused to rehire? Was the strike the fault of the recently formed Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers? Were the strikers justified in demanding that a local foreman be fired before they would return to work? Were the riotous mobs, numbering 800 persons, justified in destroying property and preventing the movement of any train past Belleville for three days? Was Mayor Wm. A. Foster, doing the right thing when he called out the 15th and 49th battalions of militia? Finally: Why was there no ammunition available for these police? Why were the soldiers sent home before their job was finished, leaving the station in the hands of the mob? When the Queen's Own Rifles from Toronto arrived to put down the insurrection, was their use of "fixed bayonets" really necessary? Were the resulting wounds justified?

And why, when the whole matter was settled, did the Grand Trunk Railway debate the issue and the Belleville council refuse to pay the costs of rebuilding the station in this town.

These are a few of the questions that will be dealt with, and, although all the answers are not to be found, it will be apparent that this was one of the black moments in Belleville's history.

Also, at Monday's meeting, Mr. Rodger Greig will outline plans to draw up an inventory of local buildings of historical and architectural importance; a "Roughing It In The Bush" will be presented as a door prize; and refreshments will be served.

The meeting is scheduled to begin at 8:15 and for one hour before the meeting the County Museum is to be open so that members and their friends can visit the special military display.

Greater Autonomy for Provinces Said Move in Wrong Direction

MONTREAL (CP) — Greater autonomy for Quebec or any other provinces would be a move in the wrong direction, one group decided Thursday at an unusual conference of Montreal businessmen.

The conference, Operation Keep-Montreal Smart, brought together 240 French - speaking and English-speaking Montreal businessmen to discuss the problems that cause tension between Canada's two major ethnic groups.

There was considerable agreement that some redistribution of governmental powers in Canada is in order but a pronounced movement toward greater provincial autonomy "would be swimming against the current."

Spokesmen for the conference were Le Chambre de Commerce des Jeunes de Montreal and the Montreal Junior Board of Trade.

One group, debating how Confederation could be turned into a more effective partnership, agreed that it would help a good deal if New Brunswick and Ontario followed their French-speaking minorities to have public schools in their mother tongues.

It was stated that young French - Canadians often turn down transfers outside Quebec and thus pass up chances to get ahead in big corporations, because they would be unable to have their children educated in their own language.

Discussion of the meaning of "equal partnership" in Canada led to the conclusion that both major ethnic groups should not only have their own language and institutions, but be able to participate fully in common institutions.

Kidney Now Functioning Close to Normal

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Mrs. James Ackworth, a 44-year-old grandmother, visited in a old Bainbridge Thursday, five days after she gave him one of her kidneys to save his life.

Dr. R. D. Ragula, Mr. Bainbridge's physician, said the kidney, which was transplanted to the body of the 21-year-old man last Saturday, is functioning "close to normal."

Mr. Bainbridge was reported eating well and sat up and chatted himself for the second time since the operation.

Doctors continue to stress that it will be at least two weeks before it can be determined whether the transplant is successful.

Mrs. Ackworth is expected to go home at the end of this week or early next week.

She met Mr. Bainbridge only the first time last Saturday only minutes before they entered separate operating theatres.

Kinettes Celebrate Birthday With Past Presidents' Night

On Thursday evening the Kinette Club of Belleville celebrated their 15th anniversary with a birthday party at the Hotel Quinte. The purple and gold colors of the club were carried out in the floral centrepiece at the head table with chrysanthemums in a low bowl flanked by silver tri-branched candelabra holding gold and mauve candles. Individual places were marked by a single flower of the same colors in tiny coutainers.

Past presidents were honored on this occasion and seated at the head table were past presidents Helen Wilbur, Mary Lang, Rosemary Belanger, Maude Rollins, Ruth Follwell, Marg Hallam and Thelma Stefan.

Kinette Rae Brain was convener for this special evening, and President Marlene Parks conducted the opening ceremonies.

Past Kinettes Maude Rollins and Marg Hallam were song leaders for assembly singing. Marg Bakay collected fines as sergeant-at-arms, and Dorothy Bowes was pianist throughout the evening.

The evening opened with a social hour for the renewing of friendships and "Kinship." After the dinner two lucky prizes were drawn and won by Helen Hardy and Gladys Ward. Kinette Heather White was congratulated for a fine effort in reaching the Dominion Curling finals.

The meeting adjourned to the Prince Edward Suite where small tables were set up, and the members and their guests were entertained by a sketch presented by the past presidents and convener for this occasion by Beth Wilbur of Peterborough. Past Kinette Eva Ketcheson as narrator as each president appeared in turn and spoke of the activities of her year in office, the amusing things that had happened, the work accomplished, and the fun that went along with the work. The sketch was called "This Is Your Club" and took the listeners down memory lane as the narrator recalled the formation of the club in 1949 when Kingston Kinettes sponsored the Belleville club with 40 members. Their primary purpose was to assist the Kinsmen Club with their projects. The late Irma Hardway chose the name "Kinette Corner" for the club bulletin.

FIRST PRESIDENT

Past President Helen Wilbur who was the club's first president spoke of the many projects started that year with white canes provided for the blind, organization of the canvas for the TB Association, donation to the cancer fund; a children's fashion show; sponsored the Tweed Kinettes which is still an active club; formed the Kinette Choir which was organized by Marian Harden; paid for the uniforms for the Jr. Jorettes of the Kinsmen's band; and helped with the production of "Sh..u Boat."

Each succeeding president in turn gave a resume of her term of office, showing an aggregate of many hours of service and assistance to the community and to the Kinsmen's projects. Among their efforts was continued and continuing help to the White Cane club with taking books, white canes, refreshments at meetings, and numerous other gifts of time and money. They had procured 300 blood donors, operated the canteen at the swimming pool; contributed regularly to the Kinmen's wading pool and swimming pool; purchased hampers of food for the needy at Christmas; dressed dolls for distribution at Christmas; furnished a room at the Quinte - St. Lawrence residence for the blind in Kingston; furnished a room at the Belleville General Hospital; looked after organization of Minden Kinettes and contributed to the Salvation Army; assisted in the sale of light bulbs for the Kinsmen; and had won the Hal Rogers trophy which was on display for the club contributing the best effort towards the work of Kinsmen.

Kinette Rae Brain summed it up by saying the past presidents had given the members a perspective of the work accomplished, and showed that the club had given good service to the community.

BIRTHDAY CAKE

A birthday cake, baked by Kinette Nell Farrow was carried in, aglow with candles which the past presidents blew out with a combined effort. The cake was served with coffee to bring the happy occasion to a close.

On display around the room were pictures of past events which brought back amused memories to many present. History books, club magazines, convention programs, shields, and trophies were gathered together and created interest to past and present members of the club.

Women Can Do Number Of Political Jobs Better Than Men Says Director

By BRENDA LARGE

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian women are more interested in politics than ever before, says the new executive director of the Women's Liberal Federation of Canada.

Isobel Winkler, a soft-spoken Winnipegger who once helped sort Mackenzie King's personal files, says:

"Not only are women more interested in political issues but our federation recognizes that women can do a number of political jobs better than men. They are wonderful organizers and make excellent poll pass tains and scrutineers.

"The Liberal party has a separate women's organization because it knows women have a unique role to play in politics."

As administrative head of the 75,000-member women's federation, Mrs. Winkler succeeds Gwendolyn Blair, now executive secretary to Health Minister Judy LaMarsh.

"Working under our new national president, Mrs. J. O. Asselin of Montreal, I'll be helping to co-ordinate the work of the federation all over the country," she says in defining her new job.

Co-ordinating the work of large organizations isn't new to the attractive, hazel-eyed woman.

WORKED FOR CAC

From 1953 until January, 1964, she worked in the national office of the Consumers Association of Canada, first as personal secretary and then as executive director. Before 1953, she was secretary for the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society.

"In some ways, my work with the federation will be similar to what I've been doing for the last 12 years, but on a larger scale."

As a secretary for the Rockefeller Foundation in 1949, she was assigned to sort the personal files of former prime minister Mackenzie King.

"I had to separate the personal correspondence from the political items, and it was quite a task. He was the sort of man who saved everything."

Mr. King would frequently come to the archives building where Mrs. Winkler was working.

"He was always very friendly but quiet. When you shook hands with him you realized that you were meeting a very wise and serious man."

MARRIED POLITICIAN

Working on Mr. King's files was not Mrs. Winkler's first association with politics and politicians.

The daughter of Fred and Edith Clark of Winnipeg, she graduated from the University of Manitoba in 1931 and, after working as a secretary in Winnipeg for several years, married in 1946 Howard Winkler, then Liberal MP for Lisgar, Man. Their marriage was annulled in 1951. There were no children.

The new executive director plans to travel across Canada at least once a year visiting constituency organizations. She is an experienced traveller from her college days when she toured Canada and the U.S. visiting members of her university fraternity, Pi Beta Phi, as a member of its international executive.

When interviewed in the rambling old house which is headquarters for the National Liberal Federation, Mrs. Winkler was busy catching up on the paperwork that had accumulated since last May when Mrs. Blair left the position.

The energetic westerner, who has lived in Ottawa for the last 15 years, said she doesn't have much spare time for cooking or sewing.

But one of her favorite domestic chores is baking cookies for her four nephews and one niece—the family of her brother Hart Clark, who is director of pensions for the federal finance department.

"It is more than we could possibly conceive," cemetery superintendent John Metzler said Thursday. Easter Sunday Metzler said persons wishing to file past the Kennedy grave—marked by the eternal flame—had to wait up to 1½ hours.

WEDDING

HACKE — WODZAK

A recent wedding of local interest was solemnized in St. Michaelis Lutheran Church, Osnabrueck, Germany, when Judith Lynn Marie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Wodzak, Belleville, was united in marriage to Gerhard Hacke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Hacke, Osnabrueck, Germany.

The Rev. Meyer, of Osnabrueck, officiated at the ceremony which was performed in both Canadian and German languages before a background of white mums and pink carnations.

The walk from the house to the street was padded with evergreens and was spanned by an arch of evergreens bedecked with flowers as was the main entrance. A unique highlight of the wedding was the special conveyance to and from the church in a horse-drawn regal-style coach.

The wedding march was played by the brass choir band and pipe organ and a vocal selection was rendered by Ulla Lange, aunt of the bridegroom.

The bride, given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Otto Faltin, of Gelsenkirchen-Buer, Germany, was dressed in princess style gown fashioned with an empire construction of peles and featuring a full petal cathedral train of rich satapeau edged with imported Swiss appliques. The four-tier scalloped edged veil of tulle flowed to the train from an overlay of veiling continuing down past the train. Her headdress was of organdy bedecked orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of red roses mingled with lemon.

The maid of honor, Miss Gerda Hacke, sister bridesmaid, Gisela Lange, both of Osnabrueck, were attired in tur quoise brocade dresses featuring a front panel caught at the side with an attractive pin. Their headdresses were bows of matching brocade with matching veil. Each carried a bouquet of pastel pink carnations.

The flower girl, Susann Hoack, cousin of the bride-groom, was dressed in identical color and material as the other attendants, but trimmed with white lace. She carried a basket of multi-color 'mums.

The groomsman was Mr. Dieter Iglemann, of Osnabrueck, while Mr. Karl-Heine Lange was the usher.

The reception was held at Hackmann Hotel, Osnabrueck, followed with a dance, at which time the Osnabruck Folks Band were in attendance. The bride table was most attractive decorated with vases of pink carnations and yellow 'mums. A lighted candle set in fern encircled with flowers highlighted each place setting.

The bride's mother, who paid a surprise visit for the wedding, wore a winter white wool sheath dress with three-quarter length sleeves and a jewel neckline, turquoise velvet hat and matching shoes and a corsage of pink Sweetheart roses. The bridegroom's mother wore a royal blue brocade dress with a jewel neckline, matching jacket and a corsage of pink Sweetheart roses.

Guests were present from various parts of Western Germany.

The couple will reside for the present at Osnabrueck, Germany, but on completion of Mr. Hacke's education they will return to Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerhard Hacke are pictured following their marriage in St. Michaelis Lutheran Church, Osnabrueck, Germany. The bride is the former Judith Lynn Marie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Wodzak, Belleville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Hacke, Osnabrueck, Germany.

Ann Landers

Pretended Pregnancy Must Be Ended Immediately

DEAR ANN LANDERS — This morning my sister unfolded a story so bizarre it would be rejected as a plot for a grade C movie.

June (not her real name) has been married six years and has wanted a family from the first. Her husband is an only child and his parents have been dying for a grandchild.

Five months ago June made the joyful announcement that she was pregnant. Everyone was thrilled for her. She went into maternity clothes and flat-heeled shoes almost immediately.

ANN LANDERS

Last night at a family party June seemed to be filling out her maternity skirt fairly well so I made the quiet suggestion that she release her skirt. She appeared nervous and replied, "I must talk to you about this."

This morning she confessed. She is not pregnant and never was. Even her husband is fooled. When I inquired about the "added weight" she said she had tied a sofa cushion around her middle.

I asked her how she planned to get away with it and she said she hoped to go to New York, adopt a baby and bring it back as her own.

She now realizes her scheme is unrealistic and she's becoming panicky. How can she unwind this wild plan with the minimum of embarrassment? — E.D.

DEAR E.D. — June should announce at once (like tomorrow) that no baby is on the way. Such announcements are not uncommon. If nosey friends or relatives ask why, how, etc., she can refuse to discuss the details.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I have the most wonderful dad in the world but he has one fault that embarrasses the daylights out of me. He can't get a name straight.

I've been going with the same kids for years. He should know their names as well as he knows mine. Yet he calls Bob Bill, Cheryl is Shirley, and Betty is Barbara. Sometimes he will refer to the same fellow by three different names in a single conversation.

Last night when my date arrived — a boy I've been going with for two years — he said "Hello, Fred. I saw your father over at the Elk's Club yesterday."

The fellow replied, "My name is Don. My father has been in the hospital for two weeks."

I know my dad does not do this intentionally. He tries to make my guests feel at home. What can be done about this? — EMBARASSED.

DEAR M. — Ask your child if he'll just skip names. If he wants to be friendly he can smile more — and keep his lip zipped.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — For the umpteenth time I have come home from the beauty shop looking as if I had been shipwrecked. What are the magic words that will convey to the beauty operator that you only want a little taken off — that you don't want to look like Yul Brynner?

I hate to be a cranky customer who directs every snip like a backseat driver but even when I beg them to "take it easy with the scissors" I still get hacked to pieces.

Fortunately my hair grows fast, but it took seven weeks to recover from the last "trim." Today it happened again. I wanted to look especially nice for tonight and I am a mess. I can't afford a wig. Please tell me what to do next time. — FEEL LIKE CRYING.

DEAR CRYING — Most operators prefer to cut the hair wet — with a razor. This is the correct method but it requires skill.

Since you've had the same problem repeatedly your operator must be a klunk. Insist that she (or he) cut your hair dry — with a scissors — so that you can see the result of every snip.

Medical Soc. W A. Hears Talk On Care and Cure of Arthritis

The W.A. to the Hastings and Prince Edward Medical Society held its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. A. E. Hiles.

The guest speaker, introduced by Mrs. J. Empson, was Mrs. Enos Davis, past president of the local Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society, who spoke on the topic "Cure Today and Cure Tomorrow." As a victim of the painful, crippling disease of arthritis, Mrs. David spoke with the knowledge and understanding of one who has spent many months confined to a wheel-chair, undergone several operations, and has learned to accept and live with this disease while taking advantage of medical and physical help.

The speaker stressed that the arthritic patient must follow her doctor's advice, and must know her own limitations. Exercise is of the utmost importance but over fatigue is dangerous. A treatment centre opened last October at the Belleville General Hospital provides a trained physiotherapist, and is filling a real need.

Mrs. David was thanked by Mrs. Hiles.

The president, Mrs. A. Rota, led a discussion of the visitation program to be carried out in connection with C.A.R.S. Visits to shut-in patients are to be started immediately.

Because of the success of the annual fashion show, "Fantasy in Fashion" the W.A. voted to send generous donations to the Salvation Army Camp for needy children, the Trenton and Brighton School for Retarded Children, the Belleville School for Retarded Children, the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society, the Children's Aid Society and the Ontario Homes for Mentally Retarded Infants Inc., Plainfield.

At the close of the meeting, the hostess served refreshments.

U.C.W. Meeting

COLLEGE HILL U.C.W.

The Easter meeting of College Hill U.C.W. was held in the social hall Wednesday evening.

The president, Mrs. D. Watson, was in charge and minutes were read by Mrs. Belmour. Mrs. Greenwood gave the treasurer's report. The committee conveners reported a piano and a serving cart purchased for the hall and kitchen.

Devotions were in charge of Mrs. B. Moorcroft and Mrs. Ashton. Mrs. Alice West sang a solo, accompanied by Mrs. Bailey.

The guest speaker, Mrs. J. Allister Haig was introduced by Mrs. Watson, taking as her topic "The Cross." She spoke of Easter as a happy time for the children because of the association of bunnies and treats, the same as Santa Claus and gifts with Christmas, but one tends to forget the real meaning of Easter. This holy anniversary will have full meaning if with reverent hearts we read the marvellous stories of His resurrection and in quiet prayer commit our lives to His service." — Concluded.

QUESTION:

Have you any recipes for low-calorie desserts made with gelatine and also one for extra calories — as the almonds. However, as before when I put the unwanted sugar in hot milk, it went curdly. I use skim milk, and was wondering if this is the reason. Also, what is the proper way to caramelize sugar? . . . An Interested Reader.

FRIDAY

Dinner Menu

Crumbed Fried Haddock; French Fried Potatoes; Fresh Frozen Green Peas; Cole Slaw; Chocolate Layer Cake; Coffee.

ANSWER:

Next time please give your name and address on a stamped envelope. Please watch next week for a low-calorie gelatine recipe called Cola Mousse.

To Caramelize Sugar: In a heavy frying pan stir constantly over high heat 1 cup granulated sugar until it is melted and a rich golden brown. Remove from heat and add, stirring constantly, slowly and at arm's length (for the steam and spatters madly for a moment) ½ cup boiling water. Stir to dissolve caramel.

BUTTERSCOTCH BAVARIAN:

1¾ cups light brown sugar, 6 tablespoons butter, 2 envelopes plus 1 teaspoon unflavored gelatine, 4 cups milk (skim milk is fine), 2 cups cream whipped (optional), ½ coarsely chopped toasted walnuts or pecans.

Put sugar and butter in heavy saucepan and cook over low heat, stirring constantly. When butter has melted, turn heat up a little and watch carefully. It should not darken. Cook about 8 minutes. Put gelatine in the milk; then heat over boiling water and stir until gelatine is dissolved. Add milk to the butterscotch which has been removed from heat. Stir until caramel is completely blended. Cool until it begins to thicken and beat with rotary or electric beater until fluffy, about 8 minutes. If you wish, fold in whipped cream. This whipped cream makes a smooth mixture but is not necessary. Transfer this to a bowl in which it will be served. To serve, sprinkle with walnuts or pecans if desired.

JELLIED APPLESAUCE AND COTTAGE CHEESE SALAD:

Calories in 1 serving: 74.

1 cup cottage cheese, 1 cup skim milk, 1 cup unsweetened applesauce, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, ½ teaspoon lemon flavoring, 1 envelope unflavored gelatine, ¼ teaspoon soy-grit (liquid), salt.

Soften gelatine in ¼ cup cold water. Place dish over boiling water until gelatine has dissolved. Add cottage cheese, mashed or sieved. Add milk, applesauce, lemon juice, salt, flavoring and soy-grit. Turn into mould that has been rinsed in cold water and chill.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

WHAT'S YOUR E. Q.?

With so many spring weddings on the agenda, you can almost smell the orange blossoms in the air. And, of course, you can also hear the buzz as preparations are being made for the traditional bridal showers. If you're wondering about the protocol involved, here are some questions you might want answered:

1. Who usually gives the bride-to-be a shower?

2. Who may not hostess such a party?

3. Who is included in the guest list?

4. Who should not be invited to the shower?

5. If a guest cannot attend, should she send a gift anyway?

6. What type of gift does a shower involve?

7. Should gifts be wrapped in any special way?

8. Do the hostess attend a shower?

9. Is a shower ever given jointly for both bride and groom?

10. What sort of gifts do guests bring to a joint shower?

Answers:

1. A shower is given by a close friend of the bride. Often the maid of honor gives it. Sometimes it is given jointly by several of the bridesmaids. A shower most often and most correctly is held at the home of the hostess rather than in a restaurant or some other public place.

2. A bridal shower is not to be given by a female relative either of the bride-to-be or her fiance.

3. Close friends of the bride-to-be, as well as her female relatives and female relatives of the groom.

4. The hostess should not invite her own friends who may not know the bride-to-be very well or who, for some reason, who really are only acquaintances of the bride should not be included.

5. Yes. Even if a friend who is invited cannot attend, she should send a gift.

6. The hostess usually designates whether the shower is "Personal" "Kitchen," "Linen," etc. Guests bring gifts that are in the chosen category.

7. They should be gift-wrapped. The hostess, however, may want to wrap them herself to carry out a decorative theme. Gifts then are sent in advance so the hostess may make her arrangements.

8. No. The groom and other men may be invited to join the ladies when the gift-opening is over and refreshments are to be served.

9. Yes, it's becoming a more and more popular type of shower.

10. The women bring suitable gifts for the bride (no lingerie or anything of a highly personal nature, however) and the men bring gifts to the groom. They usually are accessory items for the house, or may be luggage, hobby items, books, sports equipment, and the like.

HOUSE HOME IMPROVEMENT GARDEN

Lumber for Floor Joist Must Be of Good Quality

Joists are the members which extend from the beam to the outside walls of the house and give direct support to the floor; in an unfinished basement they are plainly visible. Their role is as important as that of the beam because both form an essential part of the floor assembly.

In house building, wood joists are still used almost exclusively. If steel joists are used, installation should be made according to engineering specifications.

A good grade of structural lumber is required, since over-size knots or other major defects in the joists will materially affect their bearing capacity.

Joists should be as straight as possible. This is essential to obtain level floors. Lumber used for joists is usually of two inch stock and 8 to 12 inches wide; serious warping in these heavy planks is difficult to correct.

At the centre of the joist span, cross cridging — either wood or metal — acts as a stiffener, by distributing the floor load over a greater number of joists. Cross bridging links the bottom of one joist with the top of the next. As an alternative to cross bridging, a strip of wood can be nailed across the bottom of the joists.

The size of joists and their spacing depend on the span to be covered. Floor joist tables showing requirements for NHA financed homes are given in the book "Housing Standards", provided by CMHC. These are minimum requirements only. Sometimes it is more practical to increase the size of the joists, rather than narrow their spacing, by installing additional joists. The aim is to make the floor assembly as sturdy as possible. There are a number of ways of supporting the joists. At the foundation end, joists can be embedded in the concrete or rest on steel plate on top of the wall. Since the top of the foundation is seldom perfectly level the sill is aligned on a bed of mortar when it is bolted in place.

At the beam end, joists can rest directly on top of the beam or on a ledger board nailed to the side of the beam. Ledger boards should be made of 2 x 4 lumber and should be nailed to the side of the beam, using at least two four-inch nails for each joist supported. Joists can also be attached to the beam by means of joist hangers. With steel beams, joists may rest on the beam's lower flange, provided they are additionally secured.

When ledger boards are used as end supports the joists should not be notched but placed directly on top of the ledger board. Notching reduces their strength to that of their narrowest part and often causes them to split.

Many builders insert blocks between the joists where they rest on the beam. Joist ends which are made fast in this manner have a tendency to warp and bow, which leads to irregularities in the floor. If distortion is severe cracks may eventually appear in the plaster. Blocks should preferably be of the same width and thickness as the joists. Usually, there are enough odds and ends of lumber left over for this purpose.

A house with a basement normally has one or more floor openings. Joists framing such openings are called either trimmers or headers. Trimmers run parallel to the opening, while headers box in the ends of the opening. Both trimmers and headers are usually doubled.

Not all joists rest on beams or foundation walls. If a joist is supported at one end by a header it is called a tail joist. Metal joist hangers are needed in most cases to give extra support at these points. However, for short spans, they can be omitted.

Floor joists running under partition walls and parallel to them should also be doubled, except in the case of short non-bearing partitions. Doubling of joists is sometimes overcooked. It is a good idea to check the floor framework against the floor plan before the subfloor ing is nailed on.

Joists are also used in the ceiling assembly. In a two storey house, the ceiling joists of the first storey become the floor joists for the floor above, and are therefore considered as floor joists, as far as size and spacing are concerned.

SUB FLOORING

Nailing down the sub-flooring completes the rough floor assembly.

The sub-flooring is made either of nominal one-inch lumber or plywood. The term "nominal", refers to the size of the lumber before it goes through the planer. Thus, nominal 1 x 8 boards, a size frequently used for sub-flooring, is about three-quarters of an inch thick and five and three-quarter inches wide after the lumber has been planed down.

Boards used for sub-flooring should not be more than six inches wide, if possible. Larger widths have a tendency to curl at the edges as they dry out.

The ends of all sub floor boards should rest on a joist or other support and should be adequately nailed. It is prefer ble, so that the ends may be fully supported. Laying the sub-flooring diagonally makes it possible to nail finished flooring along either direction, parallel to the front or the side of the house. At least two nails are required for each floor board where it crosses a support.

When plywood panels are used for the sub-flooring they are laid lengthwise across the joists. They should be nailed every six inches at the ends and at 12-inch intervals where the panel crosses the intervening joists. The use of plywood sub-flooring has certain advantages when tile or wall to wall carpeting is to be used in place of hardwood finish flooring. No further underlay is required if the plywood is half an inch thick or more, and supported under all its edges.

Nailing of the sub-floor is usually done in the open and unless some sort of shelter is provided against rain or snow there should be a slight space between plywood panels. Moisture causes wood to expand and panels laid too close together may buckle.

To Disguise Dormer

A room that has distracting jigs and jags in its structural layout can be made to look well-proportioned with the right kind of wallpaper. Take, for instance, a dormer. You can give it uniformity with small geometrics or all over floral patterns.

Keep away from anything that has a big figure in a widely separated repeat. It will be difficult to hang and will add to the chopped up look of the room.

Recreation Room Tips

How to divide a recreation room into sections for different activities is demonstrated by this double-sided storage wall, taken from the new idea book "6 Master Designed Recreation Rooms".

In this instance the storage wall was used to block off an area for ping pong, but it could do the same for a sewing centre workshop, children's play area, or what have you.

To really enjoy life in your rec' room, you need p'enty of shelves and cupboards for books records, games, toys, linen and utensils. Then, when you're living it up downstairs, you can find things readily and clean up quickly when the fun is over.

This handsome, well-designed unit is only eight feet long, yet provides ample storage space for all your rec' room equipment. It can even house television, radio and stereo for a complete home entertainment centre. Clever planning gives access on both sides to cupboards and open shelves. It is built in two sections for easier handling, and despite its size is not hard to construct. One of the outstanding features of this book is the complete and thorough way it gives instructions, with everything provided to make the job easier including cutting diagrams, bills of material and assembly instructions.

Actually, the book Is a complete library on recreation rooms, and is sold through lumber and building supply dealers and book stores.

Loans for Homes

When you purchase a house with the help of a loan you normally take on on "assume" what is known as a mortgage. This is a pledge to repay the loan while putting your house up as guarantee. Undertaking the repayment of the mortgage debt is a serious obligation and before making an NHA loan Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation interviews the applicants to make sure they will have sufficient income to make the monthly payments. Monthly payments cover both the amount borrowed and the interest charged on the loan, the total amount being divided over a period of years. This is known as amortization of the loan. The loan can be amortized over 25 years, or even up to 35 years if your monthly income is not considered sufficient to meet the higher monthly charges. You begin repaying the loan usually about 60 to 90 days after moving into your new home. If after three years you find you have the means of paying off the remaining protion of the loan you may do so with substantial savings in interest charges.

Low-Down Payments Mean More Homes

The low down-payment required for the purchase of a home under the National Housing Act has made it much easier for many couples to purchase their own home. Very few home purchasers have the means of paying for a house outright. With all the demands made on the modern family not many have accumulated sufficient savings to buy a house without the benefit of long-term financing. Canadians have been relying more and more on borrowings to finance their purchases and though over-borrowing is to be guarded against, financing a house by means of a high-ratio loan is considered a safe investment. Because NHA loans are repayable over a long period of time — up to 35 years — the monthly repayments do not overtax the means of the average Canadian wage earner. Repayment is made monthly combining principal and interest spread equally over the entire repayment period. NHA loans may be made by chartered banks, life insurance companies and trust and loan companies. When NHA loans cannot be obtained from any of these approved lenders your application for a loan can be presented directly to your local Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation office.

MR. MELTZER ON REAL ESTATE
"What's Your Problem?"

By BERNARD C. MELTZER

A recent letter in this column, dealing with investment in real estate guaranteed by blue chip companies generated considerable interest and response. The difficulty experienced by many readers is that they do not know where to go to make such an investment. Unfortunately, there is no single place one can go. It is a process of finding the right broker — as Mr. J. N. C. is discovering.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I am a college professor, nearing retirement, and have more than $100,000 invested in blue chip type stocks. My return on investment is roughly 3 percent per year. I read with particular interest, therefore, your column on real estate investments guaranteed by the same blue chip type companies in which one owns stock, and which yield about 8 percent return on investment.

As a result I have investigated the possibility of converting some of my investments to real estate. I have discussed this with several local brokers. All are cooperative, but the type of opportunity similar to small apartments—buildings, small stores, etc., and although the return looks promising they do not offer the safety I seek.

Where does one actually find an institution through which to make an investment of the type you mention? — Prof. J. N. C.

Answer: Real estate brokers, unlike stock brokers, usually deal in geographically restricted market areas and in a very specialized commodity. Each broker tends to deal in a certain type of property (such as residential) and within certain limited areas (neighborhoods).

Since you seek investments guaranteed by blue chip companies you will have to seek out brokers who specialize in this type of market. These brokers are usually located in centre city areas of metropolitan centres. You will not as a rule find them in neighborhood locations.

There is no clearing house for these brokers, but if you ask among bankers, realtors and mortgage lenders, they will be able to tell you who to see. I can assure you that this type of investment is available.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: We moved to this city only recently and bought a nice old house in a nice old neighborhood. Our nice old house, however, has an affliction we never met up with before.

Every now and then when we turn on the hot water we are attacked by steam, gurglings, grumblings, clangs and ominous rumblings. Sad enough washing machine in the universe it is a disgrace to life and limb.

My husband has been fooling around (my term, not his) with the adjustments on the hot water heater, but to no avail. What can we do now? — Mrs. A. D. L.

Answer: Aside from the occasional live steam being a menace to life and limb in the shower if uncorrected it can also be a menace to your nice old house. Call a plumber in to do two things: (1) adjust or replace the regulator that is allowing the water to be heated above the 140 degrees which is optimum; (2) install a relief valve to release pressure before it reaches a critical level, in case the regulator fails again.

Unless this attended to, the ominous pipe music you hear may prove to be the overture to burst pipes, a flooded house, and possibly even an exploding hot water tank.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: How can I find out what my property is worth? A lot I have owned for more than 30 years is suddenly getting considerable attention and several people and real estate brokers have looked me up and make offers.

Since I have never had any use for it — and still don't — I guess I will sell. The problem is that the offers vary so it seems everyone has a different notion as to what it's worth.

It's about the only open ground in that area these days, so I can't even compare with other prices. Is there some way I can get a sound idea of a fair price? — H. A. F.

Answer: It is obvious that something has happened or is happening that has created an interest in your property. As a prudent men you should, of course, seek the highest price for your property.

The best way is to have it appraised. For a relatively small fee a real estate appraiser will give you both a report as to the fair market value of your lot and an evaluation of the neighborhood trends that influence its value. Both will be useful as a guide in negotiating a sale.

In my opinion, such evaluations can best be secured from appraisers who have achieved the status of M. A. I., S. R. A., or S. R. E. A. from either the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers, or the Society of Real Estate Appraisers.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I have been following your column, and every time I read something about home owners I have to laugh. In my circle — what with years of servitude to the mortgage bankers — about all we really own is probably a few of the nails and maybe one of the cracked windows.

Tell me, in the great big world outside of Suburbia are there in this country, people who are really home owners? — T. L. B.

Answer: The term home owner is generally used to designate one like yourself — who is participating in the process of buying a home. The ultimate goal being to own one outright.

Surprisingly, quite a few actually achieve this goal. As of 1950, of the nearly 35 million single family homes in the United States: more than ten and a half million (42 percent) were owned free and clear.

Mr. Meltzer welcomes your letters and comments. Unfortunately he is unable to enter into personal correspondence with readers, but will attempt to answer as many letters as possible through his column.

Budgeting for A Home

How much of your salary or income should you normally spend on your home? As a general rule a family can safely budget between 25 percent and 30 percent of its income as housing. Families who live in rented accommodation sometimes go beyond this figure, but it is not always considered wise to do so. Of course each family must take into account its particular living and spending habits. What will suit one family may mean real hardship to another. Families who purchase a new home with the help of an NHA loan are advised not to spend more than 27 percent of their income on repayment of their loan and property taxes combined. There may be exceptions to the rule as in the case of those just at the beginning of their career who can expect a substantial increase in earnings. But money is a precious commodity that should be handled carefully. Budgeting is essential for most families when buying a home. Monthly payments have to be met on time just like rent. It is also wise to have a reserve set aside to meet unexpected situations.

They'll Do It Every Time

Installation Cuts Down Fuel Bills

A house that is not properly insulated is costly in winter, even when doors and windows are tight, and hot in summer. Because of this, it costs far more to heat and cool than a home that's well insulated.

Fuel recognizes this, and by including insulation among projects eligible for its low-cost home improvement loans, encourages home owners to add permanent value to their homes by doing a quality insulation job.

If proper insulation is added to an existing home, the actual heating and cooling bills will be much lower than before. Many families have been surprised after thoroughly insulating their homes with mineral wool their fuel bills have been cut in half. Ideally that within a few years the savings have paid for the total cost of the insulation.

POINTS TO WATCH

Two important things to remember when installing insulation are-to buy batts and blankets of mineral wool with the correct heat resistance and to enclose the entire living area of the house, making sure that no gaps are left for heat to escape through. A tiny gap can account for tremendous heat loss.

Today mineral wool batts and blankets are labeled with their "R" factors (installed resistance to heat) making it easy to provide the correct heat resistance for both heating and air conditioning. To meet the facility Home Requirements of the National Mineral Wool Insulation Association, batts or blankets labeled R-19 should be used in ceilings, R-11 in walls, and R-13 in floors over unheated areas.

Installing batts and blankets of mineral wool before interior walls and ceilings are finished is one of the easiest of do-it-yourself jobs.

RULES TO FOLLOW

1. Measure all outside walls and ceilings and floors over unheated areas. Buy insulation labeled with the proper "R" factor for each area.

2. Trim the insulation somewhat larger than the space it is to cover, leaving a flange of vapor barrier at each end. With a very sharp knife of blade, cut along a piece of board or straight edge.

3. Fit insulation tightly between joists, studs or rafters, with vapor barrier overlapping the wood framing members at the end of the space. Barrier should be toward the side of the house that is heated in winter.

4. Nail or staple the flange to the wood at the end of the space, and along the facing side of the joist, rafter or stud.

5. Wedge the next batt or blanket against the end of the first one.

6. Fill all small spaces such as those around and behind electrical outlets and wall switches. To do this, strip off the vapor barrier, fit insulation snugly around outlet box, then staple vapor barrier over insulation. Use a razor blade to cut out a piece of vapor barrier to expose the outlet box. Mineral wool is fireproof and does not conduct electricity.

HOLDING BATTS

1- To hold mineral wool batts in place between floor joists, use chicken wire, pieces or wire clothes hangers cut to the right length and wedged up against the insulation, special metal pins available for this specific purpose, or back-up board held by laths attached to the joists.

Mineral wool can also be poured into unfinished attic floors.

If a house is not properly insulated and the home owner doesn't want to pull out walls and ceilings, he can have an insulation contractor blow mineral wool into inaccessible areas without damage to the existing walls.

The insulation is forced by air pressure through a flexible hose into all cracks and corners and around pipes and wires. Siding removed to insert the hose nozzle is replaced carefully when the job is done.

Staple Tiles to The Ceiling

Thinking about a new ceiling for your basement, attic, or any room in the house? There is a new lightweight stapler that is a boon to the "do-it-yourselfer" for putting up ceiling tile. Its double-staples the tile directly to gypsum board or rock lath. This extra holding power eliminates any need for glue or cement and makes the job faster and easier.

The Gyplok Tacker already has been tested and approved by most major ceiling tile manufacturers.

HOSE BUMPER

Don't throw away old garden hose. A strip of it placed along a garage wall will serve as a bumper for your car door.

Clean up Before Fix-up

Home improvement, clean-up, paint-up and light-up all go hand-in-hand with the coming of the Spring season.

Spring-cleaning, particularly, is important, especially when planning for serious remodelling and repair jobs around the home.

Home storage areas probably have collected many wasteful items during the winter months. These are frequently real fire hazards which should be removed from the home and disposed of immediately.

"A good procedure to follow in cleaning out storage areas is to work in one room at a time.

Clear it of old newspapers, magazines, worn-out clothing, unwanted furniture and the countless other items that collect in a home. Carry these materials outside and burn or leave them for the refuse collector.

In burning materials outside be sure you remember that trash fires themselves may constitute fire hazards if not kept under control.

One way to control trash fires is to use galvanized steel rubbish burners. These containers have close-fitting covers which keep dangerous sparks from flying.

If it isn't possible or practical to burn trash, put it in covered galvanized steel ash or garbage cans.

While filling family garbage containers, it might be a good idea to inspect them for fire safety. If they are made of combustible material or don't have close-fitting covers or side handles, replace them.

As trash removal is taking place, carry a small notebook in which to mark down places and fixtures in the home that are in need of repair.

Take advantage of many of them as possible in spare time now and fit the rest into the spring and summer work schedule.

Scuba Team Joins Timber Industry

A trio of three young British Columbians, who got their scuba diving experience as a leisure - time hobby, are now busily salvaging logs at the bottom of Steve Lake, 35 miles east of Vancouver, B.C.

The Steve Lake diving team enterprisingly offered their services upon learning that many a log from a lake boom had become waterlogged and had sunk years ago to the bottom. It was estimated that several hundred thousand board feet of wood lay on the lake bottom near old booming grounds, when the team started.

Freeing and retrieving logs at 65 feet underwater demands steady nerves. Submerged logs often shift unexpectedly and the possibility of a diver becoming "trapped" with visibility cut to ten feet, adds to the hazards.

The team's diving outfits are called "wet suits" and are made of quarter-inch thick sponge which allows a film of water to seep between a diver's body and his suit. Body heat warms this small volume of water and acts as insulation. The underwater logger often finds temperatures as low as 31 degrees F. at 65 feet straight down in lake water.

Single or double air tanks are used, each tank containing 70 cubic feet of air compressed to 2,250 pounds per square inch. A single tank's supply will last a diver approximately one working hour at 33 to 45 foot depth.

This Is God's Universe

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

Chief

jointly financed with Ottawa.

Specific programs were not cited in the communique. It said only that the negotiations would apply to programs "which are of a permanent nature and which involve fairly regular annual expenditures."

Hospital insurance is the biggest. The federal 50-per-cent share this year is estimated at $420,000,000.

Earlier, Mr. Pearson told the conference that it would take "in the order of 13 or 13 per cent" of the personal income field to compensate provinces for "contracting out" of hospital insurance.

Their share of this field now is 18 per cent. The figure rises in two equal steps to 30 per cent in 1966, final calendar year of the basic federal-provincial agreement negotiated under the former Diefenbaker administration.

The provinces also get about 22 per cent of the corporation income taxes and 75 per cent of death duties.

WON'T CHANGE BUDGET

Mr. Pearson told the press after the conference that nothing had been done in the closed meetings that would alter the federal government's budget for 1964-65.

This was taken as a clear indication that no change will be made in the fiscal deal this year.

But 1965 changes still appeared to be possible.

The communique said it was agreed that the proposed joint review of the tax structure — though evidently aimed chiefly at a new basic deal in 1967— "is not to prejudice the early solution of the urgent financial problems confronting the provincial and federal governments."

Premier Stanfield of Nova Scotia called for restraint.

"We recognize that the federal government has its problems and that all levels of government are short of funds," he commented. "If as a nation we are to make any progress in solving this difficult problem, it will be necessary for all concerned to exercise a good deal of restraint."

While there was agreement on the principle of the in-depth study, sources said there was no final settlement on the federal proposal to have it done by a "tax structure committee" of the conference.

WILL BE HAVE ON EACH

Under this proposal, the committee would comprise one minister from each province and three from Ottawa. It would be aided by experts.

An interim report would be submitted to the next federal-provincial conference tentatively slated for around the end of this year—though time and place have not yet been announced.

Mr. Pearson will next meet the premiers in Charlottetown in September to help mark the 100th anniversary of pre-Confederation talks. But a full working session is not expected until "around the end of the year," he said. Indications were that it would be in Ottawa.

Under the in-depth-study proposal, the ministerial committee's next step would be a "definitive report," as the communique called it, readied for "a fairly early date in 1965."

The only measure of disagreement, sources said, was over the committee's make-up.

Generally, the idea was warmly received by the provinces.

Premier Robarts of Ontario said the study committee would be "of very great significance indeed." He expressed hope it would provide the solutions to "our fiscal problems." Ontario had pressed for more tax revenue.

LIKE IDEA

Mr. Pearson told reporters that Ontario premiers—he didn't identify them—had said during the closed meeting that the idea for the study was "momentous," "revolutionary," and "unprecedented."

OOPS! HE MEANS US!

NEW DELHI (AP) — A parliamentary committee formed to combat dishonest and corruption in India, reported Thursday the government and Parliament itself would be a good place to start. "A disturbingly large" number of high-ranking government officials had been found to be touched by corruption in such matters as the granting of licences for business firms, the committee said.

One of the Russian cosmonauts is said to have returned from his journey into outer space boasting that he had not seen God. What did he expect? An old man sitting on a cloud? His did experience certain characteristics of outer space. Where did these characteristics come from? Who made the physical laws by which his journey into space, and his return into the earth's atmosphere were governed? Not the scientists. They did not create the physical laws or the properties of matter. By painstaking experiments over a long period of time, scientists have discovered what some of those laws and properties are, by working with them, they can do wonders, but they cannot repeal the laws. Nor can they go contrary to them, and expect to get their cosmonaut back alive.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for April 5 is: "This is God's Universe," Job 38:1-11; Isaiah 40:12-26; 42:1-13.

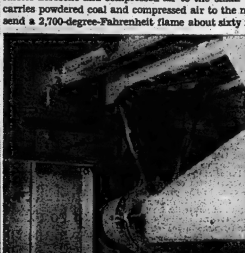
Science can explain a lot about the nature of the universe but not where it all came from, or why it is here. Where did the laws of gravitation, or motion or refraction come from? Who tells the seed what kind of a plant to produce? Who put the invisible blueprint into genes in the first place? Ultimately we must accept by faith the account of Hebrews to the faith that "the worlds were made by the word of God" (Hebrews 1:21) or in the more implausible explanation that all this marvelous creation with its amazing complexity, and its areas of precision happened merely by accident or chance.

BIBLE MAKES US EXPLORE

In the very first sentence of the Bible, we are lifted out of our little, mundane world, and flung out into space where we are brought face to face with the breath-taking drama of creation, and with the tremendous faith that God is its Creator. This faith runs all through the Bible. "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth His handywork." (Psalm 19:1) "The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof." (Psalm 24:1) Psalm 104 is a great hymn in praise of God as the Creator. Perhaps no place in all literature does an author point more effectively to the eloquent witness of nature as an evidence of the creative power of God than in Job 38-39. In great, majestic sentences, the author asks question after question that point to the wonders of the universe, and emphasizes man's infinitesimal knowledge compared to the vast complexities of the universe until Job is reduced to abject humility before the mysteries of creation.

The prophets spoke with awe concerning God's creative hand in nature. Amos was impressed by the steady orbit of the stars. (Amos 5:8) Isaiah, in a marvelous, poetic passage, sings of the creative acts of God. (Isaiah 40: 12-26) Again and again, in the Bible reminds us of our smallness compared to God's bigness as revealed by His mighty creation.

We need this corrective today. Science knows so much, we sometimes conclude it knows all. But science has not rid the universe of mystery. Each new discovery only opens vast new areas to explore. Even if we go to the moon, we will have gone a very small distance in the vast expanse of the universe. As one person put it, "God will not be much impressed."



Our knowledge of the universe reminds us of the greatness of God. Sidney Lanier could look at a mockingbird and be reminded of the greatness of God. How much more when we look out into the heavens. "If God is Too Small," is the title of a book by Dr. J. B. Phillips. Indeed our concepts of God are too small. Some even seem to think they can quiet or quell distance God. But as we behold the stars in space, and behold the Pleiades in their path will not be out done. We do not make progress by defying the laws, but by discovering them, and cooperating with them.

Isaiah goes on to compare the greatness and majesty of God's creation with man's puny efforts to create his own gods. (Isaiah 40:18-19) Instead of worshipping The Creator, man so often worships His own creations and in the process, becomes as small as they are. Instead of turning his eyes to the stars, he becomes enmeshed in his own little schemes until he forgets who made him, and whom he is meant to serve.

We are called by our contemplation of the universe to a new humility — a humility many scientists have in the face of vast unexplored and unexplainable areas of life. This is God's world.

INSIDE THE KILN at Canada Cement's Point Anne plant, kiln operator Peter Malo checks the burning of the kerosene torch used to warm and light the main torch. The small temporary pipe coming from the bottom of the picture carries kerosene and compressed air to the small torch; the big pipe at the top carries powdered coal and compressed air to the main torch. The main torch will send a 2,700-degree-Fahrenheit flame about sixty feet long up the kiln.

CLOSING THE DOOR of number two kiln at the Canada Cement plant at Point Anne, a workman bolts the two halves of the sliding door together. Other bolts hold the door at the top and bottom, and a removable collar is bolted round the feed-pipe of the main torch. Temperatures in the kiln behind the door will rise to about 2,700 degrees fahrenheit when the main torch is turned up to full power.

Industrial Circuit

By ANDY TURNBULL

CANADA CEMENT

Kiln number two was fired Wednesday, at Canada Cement's plant number five at Point Anne, and twenty men have been brought back to work at the plant. The kiln, 450 feet long and more than 11 feet in diameter takes three days from firing to heat up to full 2,700 degrees fahrenheit operating temperature, but once heated it can produce about one - and - a - quarter million pounds of cement a day.

Lighting the coal-fired torch that heats the kiln is an all-day operation. After an inspection of the brick-lined interior, (to make sure the bricks are all solidly in place and in good condition), a small torch burning a kerosene-compressed air mixture is placed under the main torch. It takes several hours for the kerosene torch to warm the nozzle of the main torch to near operating temperature.

Meanwhile, coal from a silo near the top of the building is being fed to a crusher below, where it is ground to a coarse powder.

When the main torch is heated to operating temperature, the kiln is started turning. It turns about two revolutions per minute riding on water-cooled bearings weighing up to two tons each.

Most critical operation is the starting of the main torch fed by fan, it blows the powdered coal and air through a 16-inch pipe through the flame of the kerosene torch. The coal-air mixture is fed slowly and on Wednesday, plant engineer William Logan and kiln foreman Earl Anderson and Donald Bennett were both on hand to watch kiln operator Peter Malo ease the valves open. Working in easy stages, it takes several hours before the valves are fully opened. When the main torch is going full blast, it sends a roaring flame about thirty feet up the inclined length of the kiln.

Soon after the main torch is lighted, and for before it is raised to full power, workmen at the top end of the kiln begin feeding "slurry" down. Looking like a light-colored liquid mud as it goes in, this "slurry" comes and tumbles slowly down the kiln, and comes out the lower end as cement. The first lot of "slurry" takes about seven hours to work its way down the length of the kiln, but in normal operation a complete change in the contents of the kiln takes only about three hours.

Planned by production of the Point Anne plant for the summer season, the lighting of the kiln came just in time to prevent a production stoppage. Number one kiln, which had been operating all winter, showed a hot-spot on Tuesday night and was stopped on Wednesday. (Stopping one of the kilns, as starting one, is an all-day operation. The dull red glow of the hot-spot was an indication that part of the fire-brick lining of the kiln had broken loose and the kiln will be stopped for a day or so while it is repaired.

were on the alert for any clandestine crossing. Airport-control towers in Paraguay and Uruguay also were watching for him.

The military leaders of the swift, almost bloodless revolution, who charged that Goulart's leftist policies were leading Brazil into communism, sent six army officers to Sao Borja to arrest him if he remained at his ranch.

Goulart, abandoning his vow to fight to the death, vanished Thursday after flying out of Porto Alegre, his last redoubt in Brazil's deep south. Informants said he gave up to prevent the bloodshed of a futile resistance.

The deposed president had fled to the southern seaport earlier in the day from Rio de Janeiro. Army troops were converging on Rio then in the last stages of two-day revolution in which only two deaths were reported.

Porto Alegre was the focal point of resistance Thursday to the new anti - Communist regime. The local radio there reported serious incidents between pro-Goulart and - Goulart demonstrators.

Some observers feared the country would see a form of guerrilla warfare in Brazil in the weeks and months to come. But there was little sign of support from leftist labor leaders who were reported being arrested.

It was indicated in Washington that the interim government would win swift recognition from the U.S. government.

Gen. Costa e Silva, Minister of Guanabara state which includes Rio Thursday night proposed an immediate election for a new president, according to the voice of Brazil—a national radio hookup.

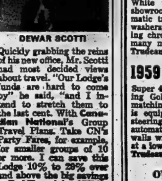
high commissioner, waived prior claim to it with the comment that Toomiaja had enough its worry on without being concerned over hotel accommodation.

Most of the shooting in suburban Trakhonas between Greeks and Turks camped on opposite sides of the cease-fire line was in the British - patrolled sector. But there was also some in the area patrolled by two companies of the Royal 22nd Regiment, part of the 1,000 - strong Canadian contingent in the UN peace-keeping force.



HEAR THE CRACK

All the shots went overhead but officers said they were close enough to hear the "crack, crack."

"As far as we know none of our soldiers had been deliberately shot at," said the Van Doos adjutant, Capt. Louis Fournier of Quebec City.

Thursday a grenade incident badly injured a Turkish-Cypriot shepherd and sent Canadian troops into action.

Assumes Responsibility for Group's Travel

DEWAR SCOTT

Quickly grabbing the reins of this new office, Mr. Scott has a little bit of everything about travel. "Our Lodge's funds are hard to come by" he said, "and I intend to stretch them to the last cent. With Canadian National's Group Travel Plans, Take CN's Party Fares for example, for smaller groups of 10 or more, we can save this Lodge 10% to 25% over and above the big savings on Rail Transport on CN's "Economy" Days. And, for larger groups, I'm going to use CN's Charter Coach Plan. Think of it. We can enjoy a coach exclusively for our group, with a rock-bottom price. 89 Lodge members travelling in their 'own' coach, can save as much as 33%. We've got ourselves a real bargain. We can even charter our 'own' sleeper for overnight trips. It keeps the group together — and safe." Well now why I was elected Travel Officer!"

'Tax Structure Committee' To Be Established Approved By Premier Robarts of Ont.

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Robarts of Ontario said Thursday the "tax structure committee" to be established is a result of the federal - provincial conference would be of "very great significance indeed."

Mr. Robarts had pressed his demand at the conference for greater tax revenue, declaring that the federal government must turn over to the provinces more sources of direct taxation.

It was the premier's hope the new committee would provide the solutions to what he called "our fiscal problems."

"The tax structure committee, to be comprised of one minister from each province and three from the federal government, would work under the direction of the federal-provincial conference.

Mr. Robarts called it unique in this regard.

Expressing general satisfaction with the three-day conference, the Conservative premier said the establishment of the committee was one example of how the meeting got down to "hard cases."

LAUDS ATMOSPHERE

"A very wonderful, sincere atmosphere indeed" was prevalent throughout the conference, Premier Robarts said.

Asked whether Ontario wanted to contract out of any of the cost-sharing programs it performs with federal-provincial governments, Mr. Robarts said that at present he is interested only in the machinery whereby a province could contract out.

"I see no particular program that we want to get out on."

Mr. Robarts said any province should be free to "opt out of a program if it so wishes."

No veto should be available to the provinces to prevent others from staying out of cost-sharing programs.

Ontario would be interested in learning the fiscal arrangements for contracting out, and what the effect of contracting out would be.

"If we're to have the responsibility we must also have the revenue," he said.

ANNOUNCE DISCUSSIONS

Discussions between the two levels of government concerning contracting - out arrangements were announced in the communique issued at the end of the federal-provincial conference.

Premier Robarts reiterated that his government had made a decision to stay out of the proposed Canada Pension Plan. But he said Ontario would be provided with a contributory retirement plan soon, whether it emanated from the federal government or the province itself.

Ontario also planned to expand its Canada Pension plan, details of which were outlined to the conference by Premier Lesage.

Mr. Robarts said he was concerned about ensuring that pensions would be portable throughout the federal-provincial plan, whether federal or provincial, would have to be extremely similar in their provisions.

U.K. Threatens Action Against Move by U.S. to Control Freight Charges

LONDON (AP) — The British government in a sharp statement Thursday foreigned maritime action against U.S. moves to control transatlantic freight charges.

An official statement authorized by Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home accused the U.S. federal maritime commission of trespassing on Britain's legal preserve by calling for cancellation of shipping contracts made in Britain.

At the same time the Committee of European Shipowners, representing 70 maritime countries and controlling more than 50 per cent of the world's merchant tonnage, protested the commission's action as "quite intolerable."

In a statement issued after a special meeting here the committee said:

"Almost overnight contracts with shippers will be made unlawful under U.S. law unless they are prepared to sign a 'blank cheque.'"

The storm over the Atlantic blew up since the maritime commission issued this order to shipowners:

Cancel your contracts with British (and other European) firms sending goods to the United States or face fines of up to $1,000 a day.

DEADLINE TODAY

The shipowners were given until today to cancel the old contracts and agree to negotiate new ones along guidelines still to be disclosed by the commission.

Government and shipping authorities here reacted angrily to what they took to be an ultimatum. Officials saw it as a threat to British exports to the United States. Shipowners saw it as an attempt by the Americans to protect their own shipping against keener and cheaper European competition.

(In New York, however, a commission spokesman said the American order was not as arbitrary as it apparently seemed to British shipowners. The commission said existing contracts would become illegal today, but the spokesman said 90 days would be allowed to draft the new ones. He said that shipowners and shippers who signed a letter of intent to work under the new contracts would be considered to have complied.)

STARTED IN 1961

The row has been going on with varying degrees of bitterness since Congress passed the Bonner law against freight rate-fixing in 1961.

It centres on U.S. anti-trust legislation aimed at breaking up cartels and price - fixing rings.

Practice Will Be Abolished On May 1st

TORONTO (CP) — The practice of Ontario Provincial Police officers being liable to work 12 consecutive days on duty officers will be abolished May 1, OPP commissioner Eric Silk said Thursday.

He said the order, which was to become effective Wednesday, was deferred to allow him time to study 23 cases of hardship on officers.

The Ontario Provincial Police Association had suggested the working might create excessive transportation expenses for some officers.

Mr. Silk said he asked association representatives to submit a brief outlining where officers would be affected. He was given 23 cases drawn from the force's 225 detachments.

"I'll give these cases every consideration," he said, "but the order stands for May 1. Any exceptions to this order will be taken care of in the course of the next few months."

The commissioner gave one example of inconvenience in the case of men stationed in district headquarters at Cornwall, which will be moved into new headquarters at Long Sault in the near future.

Until the men find new living quarters at Long Sault they could be inconvenienced by the 10-mile gap, said Mr. Silk.

Change Rules Of Card Game To Aid House

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A college mathematics professor who published a book including a system for winning at blackjack has forced the major Las Vegas casinos to change the rules of the card game slightly to give the house better odds.

Gabriel Vogliotti, executive secretary of the Resort Hotel Association, said Thursday the new rules went into effect this week, following a meeting of the city's top gaming executives.

Under the new rules players will not be able to double their bets on anything except a two-card 11, and they will no longer be able to split aces and get "hit" on both cards.

Under the old rules, players could "double down" on any two cards and split aces.

Vogliotti said the new changes came about largely because of the publication of a book on winning at blackjack written by a New Mexico College mathematics professor, Edward O. Thorp.

Thorp outlined in layman's terms the pattern for calculating the odds on the game so players could get a 52-48 percentage in their favor.

GIVES NORMAL CUT

Vogliotti said the normal percentage is about 47.5 to 52.5 in favor of the house.

Thorp's system, as outlined in his book Beat the Dealer, rests on the players' ability to count the cards that have been dealt around the table and figure from that many of what size cards haven't been dealt out.

Vogliotti said the meeting was called and the decision to alter the game made after 20 bosses at the major casinos reported the Thorp method was beginning to make a dent in the house's money.

"It became evident that quite a few people arriving in Nevada have read the book and are serious students of his (Thorp's) system," Vogliotti said.

Britons Boiling With Anger Over Latest Move by U. S.

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Every so often the Americans pull off a stunt that leaves the British either slack-jawed with shock or boiling with anger.

Certainly there is a note of incredulous outrage in the reaction to the United States decision that British shipping lines scrap existing contracts for carrying freight to U.S. Atlantic ports.

Although the action was taken by the Federal Maritime Commission, it was seen in Britain as resulting from pressure by shippers and congressmen who want to hit at British and European exporters.

Even more irritating than the dollars-and-cents issue is the matter of principle as it appears to British eyes. The move is regarded as a high-handed attempt to give extra territorial effect to U.S. legislation without the benefit of international treaty.

Some commentators are lashing the thought that a similar would happen in the U.S. if some other country took similar action.

The Guardian of Manchester wonders, for instance, what the Americans would say if a British commission suddenly ordered U.S. airlines to break within 48 hours their contracts for flying goods to Britain, under penalty of a daily fine of $1,000.

Actually, the FMC strictures may not be as serious as first believed by British observers. Victor Sprigings, chairman of the North Atlantic Westbound Freight Association, said after study that the ruling "a first glance seems to give a lot more jurisdiction to the Federal Maritime Commission but rates themselves are not altered."

HURTS EXPORTS

Initial estimates were that the ruling would mean a 15-per-cent freight costs increase which, as one example, might hurt the export of British cars. The Edinburgh Scotsman comments:

"That may be what it is meant to do under cover of a scarcely disguised accusation that the shipping conference rigs the freights to hamper American industry."

Anything that tends to place barriers against the export trade comes at an extremely sensitive time, with the U.S. striving to increase world trade through tariff-slashing in the so-called Kennedy round of negotiations opening in Geneva next month.

The British shipping lines are heartened by the knowledge that—with the approval of the government — they foiled U.S. attempts to regulate their freigh rates in the last two years.

The latest action was taken under the Shipping Act of 1961 which was presented as a weapon against monopolies but is seen in some British circles as simply a device to protect American shipping from fair competition.

DESERTED STREETS marked sudden snowfall that left more than four inches in Belleville and district and may have been last snow until next winter . . . maybe.

Sudden Snowfall Brings Grief To Motorists, Joy to Farmers

This morning in April — the month when all they can sing about are showers — they were shovelling four and one - half inches of snow off Belleville streets.

The sudden fallout came in two installments to blanket the Quinte district with a soft white pile that turned to mush on contact.

Highways were wet and slushy throughout the night although the... were no serious accidents reported by traffic police patrols.

Snow started falling about six and quit about two hours and two inches later. Around 3.00 a.m. it closed in again in time to deepen the problems of morning rush - hour motorists.

The traffic flow however was responsible for turning the snow to slush, to water on city streets.

Public works jeeps were taking care of the sidewalks early in the morning.

However, with gloomy, overcast skies above, mush and slush below, there was little invitation for venturing outdoors. Weekend shoppers were relatively sparse in the downtown area during the morning.

Launch Planet Probe

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union Thursday launched a planet probe from a platform orbited in space.

Authorities avoided telling what the target was.

Although few details of the new shot were given, the technique appeared similar to—if not identical with—that of the United States in all its Ranger shots and deep space probes.

The Russians called it Zond-1: Zond is Russian for probe.

The official announcement said the purpose of Zond-1 was "further development of a space system for distant interplanetary flights."

Soviet Communists Finally Lash Out at Red Chinese; Showdown in Dispute Seen

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Russia today called for a meeting of world Communist parties which observers here believed would almost certainly be designed for a showdown in the Sino-Soviet ideological dispute.

In a hard-hitting attack on the Peking government, Russian Party Secretary Mikhail Suslov called for a meeting to discuss the basic problems of our time.

The bitter attack, running to about 30,000 words, was spread over seven pages of the Communist party newspaper Pravda and was contained in a previously unpublished speech Suslov made to a party central committee meeting Feb. 14.

Pravda also printed an editorial saying a recent increase in Chinese propaganda attacks on Russia was "a terrible insult to our party and the entire Soviet leadership."

The editorial indicted the Chinese leadership for "grossly distorting limits in their political struggle against the world Communist movement."

CALL ON PEOPLE

Suslov said matters had reached a point where the Chinese press and radio are calling upon the Soviet people to oppose the CPSU (Communist Party of the Soviet Union) and the Soviet government."

The Pravda editorial said the central committee decided to publish Suslov's speech because "Chinese leaders, Suslov said, "have apparently decided to carry through to the end their subversive activity against the Leninist unity of the world Communist movement."

They spoke of a split as "inevitable," he said, but only those who broke with the "principles of proletarian internationalism" could say that — since a split would inevitably undermine the world socialist system.

Suslov declared: "Today the policy and activity of the Chinese leaders is the main danger to the unity of the world Communist movement."

Chinese leaders were the first among the "opportunists and splitters" in world communism to put forward the thesis that the existence of several Communist parties in the same country was normal."

Record Flood of Visitors From U.S. Gives Canada First Tourist Trade Balance

OTTAWA (CP) — A record flood of visitors from the United States last year gave Canada its first favorable tourist trade balance since 1950.

The tourist tide from south of the border more than offset Canadian spending by Canadians in countries other than the U.S. The 1963 tourist travel account showed $13,000,000 in the black.

Preliminary figures issued today by the bureau of statistics show that visitors to Canada spent $602,000,000, seven per cent more than the 1962 record of $562,000,000.

Reduced spending by Canadians in the United States helped produce a three pes cent drop in Canadian expenditures in other countries to $589,000,000 from $605,000,000.

Alan Field, Canadian government travel bureau director, said the favorable balance reflects the effectiveness of Canada's stepped-up tourist promotion abroad.

The bureau of statistics said it is evident that the May, 1962, devaluation of the Canadian dollar to a position in the customs exemption privilege for Canadians returning from the U.S. also contributed significantly to the change in trend of international travel.

PURCHASES CUT

Value of merchandise declared under the basic customs exemption of $25 every four months used to be $100—was $31,200,000 in 1963 compared with $46,000,000 in 1962.

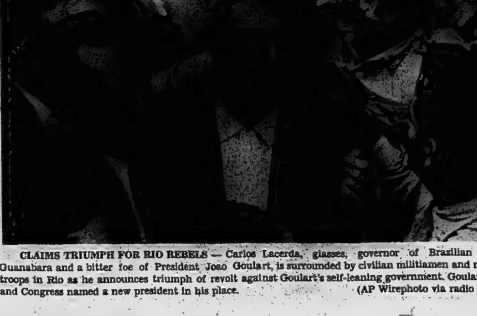
Big factor in the upward swing in the travel account was an average-per-stay rise in spending in Canada by a record 31,900,000 American visitors to $548,000,000 from $512,000,000, continuing a favorable trend for Canada in the cross - border tourist trade dating to 1954.

With Canadians spending 44,000,000 more per cent from $419,000,000 in 1962, the credit balance on the Canada-U.S. travel account stood at $157,000,000 compared with $93,000,000 the previous year.

Although visitors from countries other than the U.S. spent $53,000,000 in Canada last year, a $3,000,000 increase from 1962, Canadians travelling overseas pushed the annual travel account with overseas countries to a record $144,000,000 in the red.

Canadians spent $197,000,000 overseas in 1963, six per cent more than the previous record of $186,000,000 set a year earlier.

Last time Canada had an over-all favorable tourist trade balance was 1950 when the account was $40,000,000 in the black. In 1959 and 1960 the account showed record debits of $207,000,000.



Fred Davis Not After Job Of President

TORONTO (CP) — Television personality Fred Davis says he doesn't want to become president of the Association of Canadian Television and Radio Artists ACTRA, and thinks the best people to run are those who heal the rift within the organization.

Mr. Davis, moderator of CBC's Front Page Challenge, led the balloting this week in a bitter election contest for directors of the National Union of TV and Radio Performers.

Mr. Davis said Wednesday in an interview he has great respect for TV weatherman Percy Saltzman, who led a successful revolt against the former union leadership, but he got into the revolt unwittingly and isn't happy about the way it was handled.

Mr. Saltzman began the revolt when he accused ACTRA officials of mismanagement.

CLAIMS TRIUMPH FOR RIO REBELS — Carlos Lacerda, glasses, governor of Brazilian state of Guanabara and a bitter foe of President Joao Goulart, is surrounded by civilian militiamen and rebel army troops in Rio as he announces triumph of revolt against Goulart's self-leaning government. Scores Two, Assists On Three ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Big 'M' One-Man Gang In Leafs' Win

By DAVE BETTS

TORONTO (CP)—The score after four games of the Stanley Cup semi-final is Montreal Canadiens 3, Frank Mahovlich 2.

The Big M, a recent convert to centre from left wing, was a one-man wrecking crew for Toronto Maple Leafs Thursday night as he scored two goals, assisted on three and checked ferociously to lead the Leafs to a 5-3 demolition of the Canadiens.

With a smile almost as broad as the blade of his stick, Mahovlich modestly accepted the kudos of dressing-room admirers and tried to shift the emphasis away from his own performance.

"We were working more like a team tonight," he grinned.

His linemates, Red Kelly and George Armstrong, each scored one and Andy Bathgate potted the fifth as a power play with Mahovlich and Kelly assisting.

The Canadiens won the first and third games when Mahovlich turned in ordinary performances. Mahovlich turned on the pressure last Saturday in Montreal, scoring once and setting up Kelly once to engineer a 2-1 win.

Thursday night he came out of his shell again and the whole Leaf team came alive.

BOWER BELOW PAR

The only Leaf who seemed below par was goalie John Bower who waved at three long shots, allowing Canadiens goals by J. C. Tremblay, Jean Beliveau and Jacques Laperriere.

"I wouldn't say he had a bad night," said manager - coach Punch Imlach, "but he had a rough one with those three shots from near the blueline."

Bower made no excuses about shifting on the long ones.

"No, Laperriere's shot wasn't screened. It was a good shot. I saw it coming."

He showed his disgust when he rambled at Tremblay's long bomber that tied the score 1-1 in the first period. "I saw that one too. I saw it hop just before."

In a hot-tempered game that began and ended with fights, the teams came within one penalty of the playoff record for the most penalties in one game and tied the mark for most penalty minutes.

The Canadiens and Leafs were assessed 30 penalties, including six majors and three misconducts, for a total of 162 minutes. The penalty mark of 31 was set in Montreal a week ago. The total-time record was established March 25, 1953, by the Leafs and Detroit Red Wings—152 minutes.

FISTS FLY EARLY

Before four minutes had elapsed in the first period 10 pairs of gloves had been dropped on the ice and the fists were flying. Principle combatants were Ron Stewart and Eddie Shack of the Leafs taking on Dave Balon and Henri Richard.

The Stewart-Balon altercation was a clear decision for the fast right winger and sowed the seeds for seven vicious bumps Balon had dealt Tuesday night. Richard was ahead on points in the other ring until Shack bottled him with his head, splitting open Richard's forehead and raising a large welt.

The Canadiens waited until five seconds before the end of the game before catching up with Stewart.

Rugged rookie John Ferguson charged him behind the net, and knuckles started crunching again. This battle was a stalemate, except that Stewart's on the power play. After Mahovlich came Kelly with a goal and two assists, Bathgate and Armstrong with a goal and an assist apiece and Don McKenney with two assists.

The Canadiens, who barred the door to reporters, left for Montreal immediately after the game to prepare for the fifth contest Saturday night. The Leafs will practise today and a workout this afternoon train to Montreal.

Imlach, a buoyant contrast to the morose gum-chewer of two nights earlier, made a cryptic wish for the best-of-the series; "As long as we don't lose the last one we play, I'll be happy."

The two costly mistakes of Tuesday night were still preying on his mind.

"We tried hard to blow it again tonight. But there were none of those short-sighted mistakes."

The Canadiens may have suffered a medical defeat as well. Bill Head, team physiotherapist, expressed fears that captain Jean Beliveau may have torn ligaments in his knee when he was belted by Shack.

"If this is the case," said Head, "he may miss Saturday's game and the next one as well."

Beliveau, who has scored two goals, has been one of Montreal's most outstanding players during the series.

Two Bouts 'n One Night

Ron Stewart 'Ready For Cassius'

By DAVE BETTS

TORONTO (CP) — 'I'm going after Cassius Clay next, I can't resist the lure of all that easy money."

The 31-year-old man spoke in a soft tone. He had shifted in his chin, a cut in his forehead and a twinkle in his eye. Ron Stewart, a product of 12 year veteran right winger with Toronto Maple Leafs, had just lost $25 for his part in two fights Thursday night and was speculating about his chances of recovering the big losses and going into the big time.

Two tough members of Montreal Canadiens had discovered how uncomfortable and downright painful it can be to move next door to Toronto's sweater No. 12.

Stewart was assessed an automatic $25 fine by the National Hockey League after drawing a misconduct penalty in the fourth period of the Stanley Cup semi final game. He misconducted, too, was automatic, levied against any player who engages in fighting. One bout of fisticuffs in one evening.

Before four minutes had elapsed in the game, Leafs Carl Brewer and Bob Pulford set up conventional action around the Canadiens net by tossing playful elbows around the ears of their opponents.

TANGLED WITH BALON

Before you could say "Clarence Campbell" Stewart was tangled with Dave Balon, the Habitant who had caused the most pain and embarrassment to the Leafs in their previous game.

Stewart won a unanimous decision, according to press box score cards.

The Canadiens bided their time—and lost the game 5-3—before the forces of retaliation were unleashed against Stewart.

With only five seconds remaining in the game—and all hopes of victory dissolved—Montreal's most renowned pugilist, one John Bowie Ferguson, blasted into Stewart at a velocity just slightly less than needed to send him into orbit.

"Do you think it was deliberate?" Stewart was asked by a reporter who had his tongue stuck firmly in his cheek.

"Well, a guy who charges like that would have to be one of the world's greatest liars to make up a story of how he was trying to miss me."

Ferguson, in a six-foot 190-pound package of animosity late of the American Hockey League, was called to the penalty box for high sticking.

Said manager-coach Punch Imlach of Thursday's fracas: "If they want to put their 160-pound against our 200-pounders, that's their privilege . . . or prerogative, whichever you prefer."

"Did he beat you, Ron?" asked the man with the leading questions.

"I don't think so," said Stewart as he adjusted his tie and straightened the two ends of his stitches. "I had a little trouble getting my feet. after the initial crash, but once I got my hands free I think he felt it."

What was the 190 - pound Stewart planning next?

"I feel I'm ready for Clay. I watched that Patterson fight and all that big money looked so easy."

But at any dyed-in-the-wool Toronto fan knows, the clean-living Maple Leafs never go looking for fights.

Said manager-coach Punch Imlach of Thursday's fracas: "If they want to put their 160-pound against our 200-pounders, that's their privilege . . . or prerogative, whichever you prefer."

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. R. Canyer, Sports Editor

It won't be National League hockey but for spirit, desire and the will to win, these little guys can match anything the big boys can muster.

And it will be well worth your while to drop in Memorial Arena any time after nine a.m. Saturday and see some of these moppet clubs in action.

Norm Carter of the Belleville Recreation Commission, Ross Soden of the Belleville Minor Hockey Association and Gord Hughes have done a marvelous job in organizing an eight-team peewee tournament.

It is the second annual event of its kind and bids fair to out-do the inaugural success of a year ago.

The eight squads will battle for the Harry Hollins Tournament Championship Trophy, also the South Ritchie TV Trophy bedded a number of individual awards.

Competing will be the Belleville MacCormacks, Kingston, Picton, Ajax Gananoque, Ottawa, Bowmanville and Napanee.

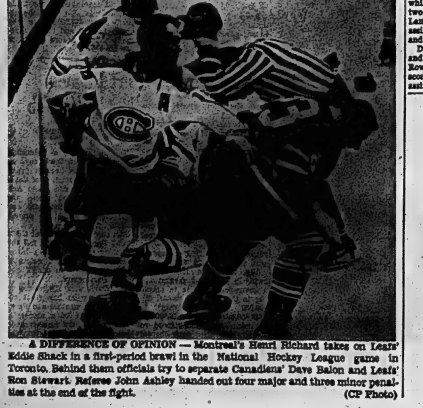
The tournament starts at 9 a.m. with Napanee meeting Kingston. An hour later Picton clashes with Bowmanville and at noon Belleville plays Gananoque. At one p.m. Ajax tangles with Ottawa Alta-Vistas. There will be further games every hour on the hour until seven p.m.

One of the outstanding visiting clubs is the Ottawa Alta Vistas. This classy young outfit is managed and coached by Steve Hoob, well known here years ago as a topflight softball pitcher.

Steve's club met and defeated the Belleville squad at a recent Kingston peewee tournament and in a note to this department he paid sterling tribute to the MacCormack youngsters.

"We have travelled over 3,000 miles and played in 40 games this year, including teams from Port Hawes, Quebec City, Lake Placid, Montreal, Northern Quebec, Kingston and Cornwall," Steve wrote.

"We have yet to meet a finer bunch of boys both in sportsmanship and determination. Your Belleville lads cheered for our team during the Cornwall game and helped us all they could. In our final game with Belleville they played clean and hard and never gave up until the final whistle."



"It is easy to be a good winner but to take defeat in such fine spirit could only be accomplished by a fine group of young sportsmen. They are a credit to the city of Belleville, their parents, and their fine coach and manager. We are looking forward to our visit to Belleville Saturday."

Most of the teams competing in Saturday's tournament have met before with the games resulting in surprisingly close scores.

And that means the toprney tilts here will be hard-fought battles with the moppets going all out to achieve honor, glory and awards.

These little guys play for keeps. They play the puck and rare are outbursts of temper or deliberate rough play. Hockey is a sport in them, not an opportunity of "getting even" with a foeman. They play it hard and they play it clean and it is eye-pleasing to watch them go.

So, if you're not doing anything Saturday—if you are, put it off—and drop in for a few minutes to see the young fellows do their stuff. It will be well worth your while.

All possible team entries and any other interested persons have been requested to attend since an effort will be made to get the loop off to a strong start.

Smith says that several parties have shown interest to date and he hopes to see five or six representatives at Monday's meeting.

22-Year-Old Bet Ticket Pays Off

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP) — K. E. (Jim) MacKenzie director of pari-mutuels for the Jockey Club Limited, said Thursday a Toronto man who placed a bet on a horse 22 years ago will receive the $4.55 the horse returned in finishing third.

Mr. V. Barry held a $2 show ticket on a horse named Dericos, competing in the eighth race at Toronto's Greenwood track, then known as Woodbine, May 30, 1942. This week he sent it to MacKenzie who checked the ticket against the records.

In Canada, unlike the United States, there is no time limit on when a ticket must be cashed.

"We pay on any ticket we have a record of," MacKenzie said. "This is the oldest one to come to my attention. We get a fair amount of lost and unclaimed tickets in Canada."

The 1964 Ontario thoroughbred racing season starts here Saturday.

Hawks Snatch 3-2 Win In Overtime

Balfour Got It

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

DETROIT (CP)—Murray Balfour, a Chicago Black Hawk hardrock, will accept goals in in any form, even if they're scored off his backside.

He used that part of his anatomy Thursday night to give the Hawks a 3-2 overtime victory over Detroit Red Wings that broke a season-long Olympia jinx for the Hawks and swept their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final at two games apiece.

It also provided a somewhat harrowing cup - hefting for Roger Crozier, standby Detroit goalkeeper.

It was 8:21 of the sudden-death overtime when Balfour parked his 179-pounds in the line of fire on a blistering blast from Stan Mikita. Before the 23-year-old Crozier could make a move, the puck plunked into the net and Chicago was right back in contention.

And Crozier, who had taken over from the injured Terry Sawchuk at 1:26 of the second period with the Wings ahead 2-1, must be convinced that his tough luck rides, in pairs. Regular goaltender with Pittsburgh Hornets, he lost by the same score in overtime to the Aces for the best in their American Hockey League semi-final opener Wednesday night.

ROGER ON THE SPOT

Now, with Sawchuk back in hospital again for treatment of a pinched nerve in his left shoulder, Crozier has been named by coach Sid Abel to start in Sunday's fifth game at Chicago. There is no definite date for Sawchuk's return and Crozier might even be in the sixth game here next Tuesday.

That's enough to scare anybody off after what happened to him last night.

Sawchuk, in and out of hospital since he first developed the ailment at Chicago last Sunday, was headed for his 15th victory over the Hawks on Olympia ice dating back to Feb. 24, 1963. Former MacDonald star Gordie Howe had scored the Detroit goals and Bob McDonald had scored for Chicago.

The pain returned, Sawchuk left the game, and Crozier, watching the proceedings from the press box, hustled to the dressing room and was set to go after a 22-minute delay.

Midway through the third period, and with the Wings putting up a solid wall in front of the net, Pierre Pilote gathered in an attempted passout from Detroit's Alex Delvecchio. The Black Hawk took two steps, fired a 30-footer that bounced in the air off Crozier's pads and flicked into the open net off Delvecchio, who earlier saved what appeared to be a certain Chicago goal when he batted the puck into the corner as it headed for the empty net, was robbed by Hawk goalkeeper Glen Hall in the final seconds of the third period. He shaked in on Hall who dropped to his knees to smother the low shot and then made a stabbing catch of the rebound.

The Wings, who outshot Hawks 41-33, had a couple of scoring opportunities in the regulation 60 minutes, but Hall was right there to beat them.

Defenceman Bill Gadsby had just returned to the ice after a holding penalty when Balfour, who had scored in 41 National Hockey League games this season, got the winner. Gadsby had been with the Detroit Indians and was out of the play when the red light flashed.

"They wouldn't have been a clean goal!" Gadsby asked no one in particular in the Red Wing dressing room. "It just tagged Balfour and in it went. He didn't lay a stick on it."

"It's great to be back," said Balfour. He had been out since Jan. 23 with a groin injury and returned to the lineup at the start of this series.

HAWKS LIKE EDP

The victory was a big lift for the Hawks, who won the opener 4-1 and then, with rookie Bob Pulford scoring over the injured Sawchuk in the opening minutes Sunday night, dropped the second game 5-4. Sawchuk reappeared on the scene Tuesday night and won 5-3.

"This series is only 2-2," said Howe, who now has 126 points in three post season frolics, equalling the record set by Maurice Richard of Montreal Canadiens. The big guy likely will go out in front before the Wings pack it for the season.

The latest game was the best played by Chicago since the first series contest. Favored to advance to the finals against the winner of the Toronto-Montreal set, the Hawks were skated into the ice by the backchecking Detroit forwards and 'hit hard by Red Wing defencemen.

They spent most of the play into Red Wing territory in their overtime win but they had to harry their shots and were far off the target as Wings kept on top of them.

Referee Vern Buffey called 20 penalties, 11 to Chicago including a 10-minute misconduct to Reg Fleming for seating the officials.

Canadian Promoter Plans Loop

European Professional Hockey League?

ZURICH (AP)—A Canadian hockey promoter announced plans in this Swiss city Thursday for a European professional hockey league.

The planned league, to be known as Europro, would be patterned after the National Hockey League and would start off with six or eight teams from Germany, Switzerland, Austria and France. Future expansion would take it to Italy, the Scandinavian countries and Great Britain.

The promoter, Hermann Pedergnana, said European import player rules would be similar to those of the Canadian Football League, allowing clubs to fill about half their rosters with North American players of minor league rating.

Pedergnana told a press conference he expects to improve hockey in Europe and draw bigger crowds, particularly from among the Italians, Germans, Austrians and Americans living abroad.

"Hockey is in pretty bad shape on the Continent, so we have the advantage to start with a weak league by Canadian pro standards and still give the European fans better hockey than they have ever seen," he said.

ACROSS THE OCEAN?

"After one season these teams should be up to par with the Czech or Russian nationals, and after a few years we could be talking of a real league with interlocking schedule."

Pedergnana said that options have already been taken out in West Germany, Switzerland and Austria. The names of option holders will not be published because most of them are still active in amateur hockey.

He said the Europro organizers expect stiff opposition from the International Ice Hockey Federation "but sooner or later differences will be ironed out."

He said that the National Hockey League is supporting Europro, and that he hopes eventually to sign a contract with the international federation similar to those between the federation and other professional leagues.

The planned league's by-laws will be modelled after those of the NHL and regular season games will be played under North American rules.

In Toronto, National Hockey League president Clarence Campbell said the NHL is committed to supporting Europro.

"We are not supporting anything," Campbell said. "I wrote him (Pedergnana) that when his league was under way we would be happy to consider an affiliation if he had proper operation.

"We are anxious to see pro hockey develop anywhere, particularly if it develops players. But he has no sponsorship from us, none at all."

Wellington Teams In 3 Finals

WELLINGTON (Special): Hockey is the main topic of conversation in this village these days — and it's not Stanley Cup variety either.

Wellington Lams are currently involved in three Ontario championship series and could conceivably capture as many titles.

The Wellington Juvenile "D" club will play host to Blyth here Saturday night at eight o'clock in the second game of a best-of-three OMHA finals.

Wellington won the first game, played in Wingham, 4-3 and — thus repeat last year's titular — on home ice Saturday. If a third game is necessary,ok will be played on neutral ice.

Wellington Midgets are also in the "D" finals, against Belmont, champions of Western Ontario.

The first game of this series will be played in the Wellington arena tonight (Friday). Game time: 8:00 p.m.

Wellington Juvenile has also entered the O.H.A. Junior "D" pl.yoffs and are currently locked in a five-game series with Stouffville Clippers.

Stouffville won the first game in a best-of-seven series 3-2 the other night but the O.H.A. Junior "D" Wellington protest which charged the winners with using an ineligible player. The game will either be declared "no contest" or be awarded to Wellington.

Second game of the series was earlier scheduled for Wellington on Monday night. No change had been announced at this writing.

NEW LEAGUE POSSIBLE

REGINA (CP) — There is talk of a new "super" junior hockey league in Western Canada, but Frank Boucher, commissioner of the Saskatchewan Junior Hockey League, said Thursday he knew of no move to establish one. After hearing reports the SJHL might fold because of financial difficulties in smaller centres, he said the league plans to continue, unless some teams drop out. Specialization about the new league mentioned possible teams from Edmonton, Brandon, Regina, Winnipeg, Calgary and Saskatoon.

Defeats Picton Juniors 7-3

Lindsay Grabs 3-1 Lead

By JACK FAWKES

PICTON — The Lindsay Lions made it three games to one, and all but wrapped up the quarter finals of the OHA Junior "C" League as they whapped the Picton Juniors by a 7-3 count here last night.

Picton started out with only 11 players and lost two of those half way through the second period with game misconducts, and ended up out of legs in the final period, as Lindsay fired four unanswered goals to win going away.

The teams were even at one all at the end of the first period with Picton having a decided edge in the play. Gary Hasnell scored for Picton as he first home passes from Wayne McConnest and Bill Hopkins at the 1.50 mark. He took the Lions until the 17.22 mark to tie it up with Bob Taylor firing an unassisted goal.

At the 8.39 mark of the middle stanza, Taylor fired his second in a row with Ernie Gendron and Bill Norton helping. Picton got that one back at the 9.10 mark when Hopkins fired a bullet to the lower right hand corner after taking passes from Hasnell, O'Grady and Harold Haddock.

Haddock fired an unassisted goal at the 13.30 mark to give the 720 fans something to cheer about, but Lindsay tied it up once again with Gardshore firing one with Bowery and Ric Purdy helping.

It was at the 7.35 mark of the second frame that Gary Lywood and Larry Lemcke teed off on some hard drives both players getting in some good licks. For trying to act as peacemaker, Gord Frederick and Rory McDonald were thumbed to the dressing rooms each with a game misconduct. The two bettlers were also benished to their rooms, but in addition each were given a five minute fighting penalty.

The bench strength of the Lions showed up in the last half of the third period, as Picton had only nine men to go with.

Larry Holmes, who played a fantastic season in the nets for Picton lot in one of the softest of his young career. At the 1.31 mark of the last frame, a slow shot trickled toward him, he reached for it, and to his chagrin, it trickled right between his legs and into the net, and he was the maddest man in the rink.

This was fortunate in one way that this was not the last goal the Lions scored, as it would have been a tough break for this little guy in the nets, but Lindsay roared right on with three more. George Babcock firing a pair and Ron Pilsworth and Ron McCabe each helping one in the last period.

So now its back to Lindsay on Saturday for which could be the last game for the Picton Juniors this season. This Lindsay team is a tough team to beat on ice, and they that much tougher when they are on their own home ice.

Shots on Picton 47 — on Lindsay 36. Penalties were evenly divided at eight each, including a five minute major and two game misconducts to each team.

Picton Ints. Whip Delhi 6-3

PICTON (Staff) — Picton Intermediates took a strangle-hold on the Delhi Trophy OHA Intermediate "B" series in Delhi last night as they downed the Delhi Bf's 6-3.

Picton players, arriving home at 7.00 today, skated the Delhi team with being the "worst bunch of woodchoppers we have seen." Last night's game was a rough, penalty-riddled affair with the sin bin full most of the evening.

Picton ripped right back with three goals in the last three minutes to wrap up the win. The winners led 3-1 after two beats. It was 1-1 in the first.

The winners of the series will meet either Lucan or Forest in the Ontario finals.

Jones' crew sparked the Picton attack with a pair of goals. Singleton were scored by Larry Pero, Barry Murray, John "Shaker" Baker and Ron Weese.

CLAY MAY TEACH

CHICAGO AP) — Heavyweight champion Cassius Clay, here for meetings of the Black Muslim sect, says he may quit boxing and accept a $100,000 offer to teach sports in Egypt. Chicago's American reported Thursday. Clay, 22, said the offer was from the Egyptian government, which has promised to build a sports centre in his name in Cairo. Clay will leave in three weeks for a tour of three parts of Asia, he said, on a tour during which he will discuss the Egyptian job with officials in Cairo.

RACING STILL OFF

MONTREAL (CP) — A dispute between Montreal's Blue Bonnets race track and horse owners has postponed indefinitely the spring harness racing program which was to open this weekend. A track spokesman said Thursday Blue Bonnets has offered the owners 40 per cent of the nine per cent of betting profits which the track receives, but the owners are holding out for 47 per cent. "We are willing for the owners to meet our terms," the spokesman said.

Braves On Citrus Warpath, Win 13 Of 16

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Milwaukee officials don't mind if Joe Torre remains angry with them the entire season. They wouldn't even mind trying the same tactics next season—if the final results this year are profitable as the beginning.

For Torre, however, a repeat performance by the Braves' management wouldn't be profitable. That's what made him angry this year. He arrived at camp about three weeks late following a long contract battle with president John McHale.

Now, after only two weeks, the 23-year-old catcher — first baseman is batting .500. His two-run homer in the 11th inning powered the Braves to a 7-6 triumph over Pittsburgh Pirates Thursday, their 13th in 16 exhibition games. The winning blow was Torre's fourth hit of the day.

Torre, whose brother Frank also played for the Braves, accepted less money than he wanted after deciding "I wasn't going to let one man spoil my career." He referred to McHale.

"I'm not very happy about it," Torre said at the time. "I decided I would be better off in the long run giving in even though I feel I was right in the stand I took."

GETS $25,000

The Brooklyn native was reported to have signed for about $25,000. McHale said he had asked for a 100-per-cent increase over his 1953 salary of $17,000.

In his third year with Milwaukee, Torre batted .292, the best average among catchers in the major leagues. He also hit 14 home runs and drove in 71.

In other grapefruit circuit action, Houston Jim Wynn came through in an extra-inning effort, smashing a 12th - inning grand slam home run that gave the Colts an 8-4 victory against New York Mets. Wynn also had a two-run homer in the eighth that tied the game.

Six of the other seven exhibition contests were decided by one run. Only Cincinnati's 8-3 triumph over Detroit was not a close game.

St. Louis Cardinals handed Sandy Koufax and Los Angeles Dodgers a 3-1 setback while Minnesota Twins rallied in the eighth for a 3-1 victory against New York Yankees. Philadelphia Phillies topped Kansas City Athletics still another 3-1 game on John Herrnstein's ninth-inning single.

Dick Dietz' single in the ninth carried San Francisco Giants over Cleveland Indians' 4 - 3 decision.

Preps For Derby

'Northern Dancer' In 4 Races

(AP) — Canadian-owned Northern Dancer and 34 others three - year - old thoroughbreds are slated to present their Kentucky Derby credentials for consideration Saturday, in four rich races topped by the $100,000 - added Florida Derby at Gulfstream Park.

In addition to the Florida Derby for which Northern Dancer is the 6-5 choice, the preps for the May 2 running of the Blue ribbon event at Churchill Downs include the one mile of the $50,000 - added Gotham at Aqueduct, the 1⅛ miles of the $25,000 - added Arkansas Derby at Oaklawn Park and the one mile of the $15,000 - added Calitrifa Derby Trial at Golden Gate Fields.

Other three - year - olds also are slated to go in the four stakes but it is the Kentucky Derby candidates that figure to be in the spotlight.

Northern Dancer, second only to Bill Rise as the Kentucky Derby future book choice, will be ridden by Bill Shoemaker in quest of his second straight Florida Derby triumph.

The Dancer, never worse than third in 13 starts and winner of nine races, will pack 122 pounds along with four-year-old stakes winners — Roman Brother, The Scoundrel, Dandy K. and Ky. Pioneer. All the others carry 118.

Sam Slams Eight Birdies

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus hadn't been born when Sam Snead won the inaugural Greensboro Open golf tournament for the first of his seven victories in Greensboro.

Young Jack, now a powerful 24-year-old, had a good look at 41-year-old Sam Thursday as the PGA senior champion shot eight birdies and grabbed a three-stroke lead in the first round with a superb seven-under-par 64.

Nicklaus got another good look at Sam today. They were paired for the first two rounds of the 72-hole tournament.

Although he has curtailed his tournament play sharply in recent years, the old slammer from Virginia hills has been amazingly sharp in his few appearances.

Starting today's play, Australian Bill Dunk and George Bayer were in second place at 67, one shot in front of U.S. Open champion Julius Boros.

Six men shared fifth place at 68, among them British Open champ Bob Charles Gene Littler, and Al Johnson of Montreal.

Joining Nicklaus at 70 were Sam, including Arnold Palmer and Winnipeg's Will Hominuik.

Other Canadians in the field were Al Balding of Toronto, 75; Jerry Magee of Toronto, 75; and Vancouver's Stan Leonard, 77.

39—76.

After today's play the field will be cut to the 70 low pros and ties and the 10 amateurs.

Reds Blast Bears 11-3, Even Series

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Their American Hockey League playoff series is tied at one game apiece today after Providence Reds held open session on Bears with Hershey goalie Ed Chadwick the No. 1 target.

The Reds fired 11 goals past Chadwick Thursday for the highest Calder Cup playoff total by a team in 20 years and second highest in playoff history. Providence's 11-3 victory knotted the best-of-three series with the deciding game scheduled for Saturday in Hershey.

Willie Marshall, Harry Ottenbrelt and Norm Corcoran fired two goals apiece as the Reds bombed Chadwick with 46 shots. Other scorers were Jim Bartlett, Matt Ravlich, Ed Mazur, Stan Bahnik and Gerry Leach.

The game was a complete reversal of the opening meeting between the two clubs when Hershey skated to a 6-1 victory.

Calder Cup playoffs continue tonight with Pittsburgh meeting Quebec in a semi-final match.

Minor Tournaments

Coaches Battle Referees

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A bit of "big time" scuffling emerged from a peewee hockey tournament in Goderich Thursday as Minor Hockey Week in Ontario neared the end of its run.

The Goderich Young Canadians tournament — one of four tournaments still going—was the scene of a battle among coaches and referees in which the coach and manager of Toronto Don Mills team were pushed off the ice by a policeman.

The Don Mills officials were involved in a scuffle with referee Stan Stokes whose tie was torn off following a penalty-ridden game between Don Mills and Toronto Scarborough.

The two Toronto teams had 14 minor penalties called against them, 10 in the last minute, in a rough game won by Scarborough 4-1. With 13 seconds left in the game Don Mills had five players in the penalty box.

The trouble began apparently when Don Mills objected to Scarborough's use of goalie Ted Crouch, a player from the Wexford team, picked up with the Toronto Hockey League's permission.

Stokes, referee - in - chief of the tournament and vice-president of The Ontario Minor Hockey Association, said after the game he would pursue the matter further.

Windsor Riverside, a team which never advanced beyond the first round in three previous Juvenile appearances, won the A series title with a 5-1 win over defending champion Listowel.

Other NHL series winners were Port Hope, 4-3 over Winona, Parry Sound, 3-1 over Clairles; Newmarket, 3-3 over Collingwood; and Bradford, 5-0 over Pensetang.

Of 10 games played in the Georgetown international bantam tournament, Leamington and Winnipeg each won two while Milton won one and tied one. Leamington defeated Keswille 7-1 and 12-0 while Winnipeg ousted Kitchener 5-3 and 5-0. Milton tied 3-3 with Tillsonburg and then blanked the latter 5-0.

The Brampton Easter week novice tournament saw Detroit, Toronto and Port Perry emerge as two game winners. Detroit blanked St. Michel, Que., 11-0 and 7-0, Toronto dumped Kitchener 7-1 and 5-0 while Port Perry turned back Watford 7-0 and 9-0.

David Hedison May Become Overnight Star in Series

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Four years ago an almost unknown young actor named Vincent Edwards landed the title role of a new television series called Ben Casey. Six months later he was a star.

Seven years ago, the same experience befell a tall, husky fellow who, because of a slight resemblance to John Wayne, was cast as marshal Matt Dillon of a new show called Gunsmoke.

Right now with most of next season's television programs and their casts chosen, there are many actors who are yet-to-be-born stars. One is David Hedison, co-star with Richard Basehart in an ABC action series called Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea.

Tall, dark Hedison was picked three or four seasons back to play the suave, fearless master spy in an NBC series called Five Fingers. Four old Five Fingers was cancelled by the sponsor after the fourth show and removed after 14.

Hedison doesn't think the association with a failure hurt him as a potential star—"who was 11?"—and he is sure the experience gained will be a big help in his new venture.

Kidd For English School

TORONTO (CP) — Bruce Kidd, Canada's top distance runner, hopes his studies at the University of Toronto this term will take him to England as a Rhodes scholar in 1965.

The 21-year-old Kidd equalled his own two-mile record of eight minutes, 31 seconds at the British indoor championships in London last Monday.

He is studying political science and hopes to graduate next year.

"I'll have to work hard," he said after returning from Britain. "My position right now isn't good."

Kidd told reporters in London: "I am definitely coming to an English university in the autumn of 1965. Naturally I hope that it will be Oxford or Cambridge or possibly London.

"I am looking forward to running regularly in British meetings—and I particularly want to run in the English cross-country season."

If by chance he should not win a fellowship, Kidd says he will take a year off from his studies to teach school and coach a few runners in East Africa.

"But I'd be back during the summer and probably for a couple of indoor meets in the winter," he said.

Garden Court Apartments Institution in Hollywood

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—This is Hollywood Boulevard—

Passersby in the gentle rain hurried along without a glance toward the stately white building that sits back from the street a block from Grauman's Chinese Theatre. That was not always true. The Garden Court Apartments have long been overlooked in modern Hollywood.

But it was a landmark when it opened on Christmas night of 1919.

"I remember that night," says owner Erwin Karr. "I was just a kid then, but I had my own stripped - down model-T Ford. When I saw the klieg lights in the sky, I hurried over to see the excitement.

"It was quite a night. All the stars were going inside, and the champagne was flowing, even though prohibition had started. The party went on every night until after New Year's."

STILL IMPRESSIVE

The facade of the Garden Court remains impressive; it is classical, with scrollwork, columns in relief and 24 half-naked adonises who appear to be supporting the top three of the five storys.

The lobby is filled with oriental rugs, overstuffed furniture and handsome mahogany tables and is usually peopled by long-haired artists. Mrs. Stella Turk, whose son wrote I'll Get By, Mean to Me and other songs.

"This is a lovely, homey place," said Mrs. Turk, who has lived in the same apartment 24 years. "Anybody who leaves always come back."

Mae Murray is a tenant. Una Merkel and Sidney Blackmer always stay there when they're in town. Lucille Bennett had an apartment for 36 years, until they took him off to die at the Motion Picture Country Home.

The Garden Court fell into disrepair during a succession of owners. Most of its furnishings were lost or looted, including the grand piano which were in each of the 73 apartments. The new owner is restoring its former elegance. He has resisted offers to tear it down.

"The Cardinal"
6 Academy Awards
Romy Schneider

Romy Schneider, who was chosen by producer-director Otto Preminger for the role of Annemarie in "The Cardinal," the Columbia Pictures release now at the Park Theatre for an unlimited engagement in Panavision and Technicolor, is a young actress whose Viennese beauty, acting range and "screwwirdiness" have earned her a very short time into the top ranks of international stars.

After the intensely animated young actress had established herself in her native Viennese life she was tapped on each earlier stars as Hedy Lamarr and Luise Rainer, who had fleeting new feminine potentiality of the post-war period. Miss Schneider took up ruse dance in Paris because she felt it a better place for work in an area of Europeanized film making. Becoming fluent in both French and English, she appeared twice on the French stage; played some parts in French films; worked for the noted Italian director Luchino Viscounti, in "Boccaccio 70," played in "The Trial," and then went to work in Carl Foreman's "The Victors." "The Cardinal" returned her to Vienna for the first time in five years.

The screenplay for "The Cardinal" was written by Robert Dozier and tells the story of a young American who rises to the ambassador Prince of the Church in the period encompassed by the two World Wars. Major Operation

Ski 'Business' Booming

TORONTO (CP) — Skiing in Ontario has developed into a major business from ski resorts down to manufacturers and retailers of ski equipment and clothing.

"We had all the business we could handle," said Douglas Mountain, president of Alcan, Leigh and Westwood Limited of Toronto, whose company is one of the largest ski equipment manufacturers in Canada.

A prominent ski - clothing manufacturer in the province reported a business upsurge of 26 to 27 per cent from the previous year.

January and February thaws have spoiled what gave promise of being a exceptionally good season financially for resort operators. In January, Georgian Peaks, near Collingwood, was six weeks ahead in gross receipts from the previous year, but after several poor weekends, expected to end up even.

Others, such as Devil's Glen, 10 miles south of Collingwood, and Mansfield Ski Ways near Alliston all showed profits for the season.

Most lucrative area for operators was in the Huntsville-Bracebridge - Gravenhurst area where a steady snowfall all season kept conditions, and profits, in the good to excellent range. Horseshoe Valley in the Barrie-Craighurst district estimated it handled 100 per cent more skiers this season.

Tebbetts Reported Doing Well

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Bill Tebbetts was reported "in satisfactory condition -50 doing well" early today but doctors still wouldn't make any predictions as to when the Cleveland Indians manager might return to action.

The attending physician at St. Mary's Hospital, where Tebbetts was taken Wednesday after a heart attack said tests indicate there has been "some tissue damage." The doctor said no one can make definite statements about a coronary for four or five days.

The 54-year-old manager was described as resting well and in no pain.

Tebbetts was stricken while at the hotel during Cleveland's spring training stay in Tucson.

His wife, Mary, said he complained of intense chest pains after a late dinner. He was taken to hospital about an hour later.

Red Armstrong Dies At 57

TORONTO (CP) — H. R. (Red) Armstrong, 57, who gained fame in the late 1920s and early 1930s as an amateur athlete, died Thursday.

He played on the provincial champion hockey, baseball and football teams all in 1927—the hockey team, McCormack junior baseball club and the Argonaut junior football team.

He was a team of the 1933 Canada Cup hockey team, Toronto Canada Cycle and Motor, that competed in the world championships at Prague, Czechoslovakia.

Canada lost the title that year to a team from Boston, representing the United States.

Motorists Given Little Leeway On Radar Set

PICTON (Staff) — Motorists using the streets in and around Picton would be well advised to check their speed often.

Chief of Police George Pitt is determined to stop speeding on the town streets, and to this end, the radar set is out every day. In order that the motorist who persists in driving over the limit will not get used to seeing the radar set in any certain spot, the officers move it constantly.

"We are more than fair with them," one constable said, "we don't touch them up to 37 m.p.h. which is 7 m.p.h. over the limit, but for 38 we stop and summons them," he added.

Constable Cecell Farrington, who dwarfs the radar set, is seen checking the radar set with the special tuning fork. This is done after each motorist is stopped so that there can be no argument about the accuracy of the machine.

"For a start in the season, we have picked up quite a few speedsrs, but when the weather warms up, and more cars are out, we will get real busy," said the constable.

Successful Living

Advance Planning a Must For Successful Teenage Party

DEAR DORIS — I am the new president of a church club of boys and girls 15 to 17 years of age. When it comes to starting dances and games I need help. They just sit there.

I know they are shy but so am I. What do I have to do: set off some fireworks to make them move? — STYMIED.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR STYMIED—Here are hints from the Four-H movement in St. John's, Newfoundland.

1. Don't start by asking what the group wants to do. Have some plans.
2. Don't start as you've seen some leaders do with everyone around the edge of room, by saying: "O.K., everyone get a partner and come to the middle of the floor!" Try making it more "comfortable" to get in than to sit out. (The Snowball dance is a good way to make Each One Reach One, each time the music stops, until all are up and dancing.)
3. Don't put anyone in an awkward position at the beginning. Save individual stunts for later.
4. Try to stop each activity while folks are still enjoying it.
5. Don't say: "You may not like this but—". Assume everyone is having fun.
6. When you try a new dance, don't refer to notes continually. Know your material.
7. Don't lose your temper. Smile whether you feel like it or not.

My own postscript is: Remember that your life does not depend on whether everybody is joining in. Teen-agers have a way of loosening up all by themselves after a while.

DEAR DORIS — I am what is termed at school a "Brain". But I have a terrible inferiority complex, and I'm awfully touchy. I do well in history. I love poetry and have written some myself.

But the boy I like doesn't like me, and when I try to get pen pals they never write back. The other girls are so gay and popular. I'm just a mess. How could I be less grumpy and more of a sunny disposition? — HOPELESS.

DEAR HOPELESS — You suffer by comparison. The girls you think gay probably envy you your school marks. You are thoughtful rather than aggressive. The ideal is to have both inner and outer resources.

The brief formula for banishing grumpiness and finding your feet is to rest your face with a smile; rest your mind with some action which comes of a thought for someone else. Goody-goody? Well, try it!

(Putting your dilemma on paper helps. Doris, a qualified social worker, can help you understand how to cope.)

(Growing up isn't easy; growing old isn't either. A letter to Doris can get you help over the rough spots. And remember that stamped envelope!)

Fast Talkers Being Left Behind by Fast Readers

By JACK RUTTON

Once upon a time a fellow who wanted to get ahead in the world did so if he was a fast talker.

That's all changed today. The fast talker is being left behind by another speed demon — the fast reader.

Don't take my word for it. That opinion comes from experts across Canada who think in amazement when they count the people attending courses to improve their reading.

How fast should you read?

President J. F. Kennedy used to plow through reports on his desk at the rate of 1,200 words a minute. But one of his senators claimed to read 30,000 words a minute, followed by four colleagues who skimmed the page at 14,00 words a minute.

Reading experts guess that average high school graduate reads about 300 words a minute. The college graduate increases this speed to 350. I would judge yourself against these standards.

This week I consulted several experts who charge businessmen healthy rates to improve their reading speeds. Although they would prefer, of course, to sign up a prospect, they agree anyone can also improve reading speed at home.

LOOK AT WHOLE PAGE

The key to improvement is a simple one, concentrate on the meaning of a page rather than single words.

Sounds too easy? The next time you get the chance, watch a fast reader. Notice the way his eyes go down the middle of a page — not left to right along the line.

Force yourself to go faster, faster, faster — and then faster. It may be difficult at first, but experts say the practice forces your mind and eyes to come up to the speed.

Most of us, poor souls, picked up the habit of reading paragraphs several times, skipping back and forth. The average reader stops 30 times on a page and backtracks 11 times while reading 100 words.

If that isn't an inefficient way of reading, I don't know what is.

The experts have another tip, practise reading groups of words at one time. If it helps, move your right hand down the side of the page as you read. And keep up to your hand. Don't go back.

One of my advisers declared: "Take it from me that anyone attempting university with a reading speed below 150 words a minute is going to have trouble. I would wonder, in fact, how he or she made it through high school."

If this sounds like a pitch for a summer project, you guessed correctly. It is. Even if summer jobs never appear, you could make this summer a worthwhile one that could pay dividends all your life.

What about it?

BEATLES SOAR

Well, anyone who has written me on the subject of the Beatles during the last two months can afford to chuckle this weekend.

Noticed the hit parade recently?

Our boys from Great Britain have no less than four times on the charts, occupying the top four spots. I Want To Hold Your Hand has slipped in a second place, edged out by the Beatles' other hit, She Loves You.

If only we had even a small portion of the weekly salary the four musicians are commanding these days. . .

NEW STAMP

Stamp collectors should be on the watch for a new Canadian stamp that will be issued next week, focusing attention on this country's desire to further world peace.

The five-cent stamp, which shows the globe and the Latin words, Pacem In Terris, is set in a white border. People who have seen the design claim it is one of the best-looking issued by Canada for several years.

TOP TWENTY TUNES

1 She Loves You, Beatles; 2 I Want To Hold Your Hand, Beatles; 3 Twist and Shout, Beatles; 4 Please, Please Me, Beatles; 5 Dawn, Four Seasons; 6 Fun, Fun, Fun, Beach Boys; 7 Hello Dolly, Louis Armstrong; 8 My Heart Belongs To Only You, Bobby Vinton; 9 Java, Al Hirt; 10 Hi-Heel Sneakers, Tommy Tucker; 11 I Love You More And More Each Day, Al Martino; 12 Glad All Over, Dave Clark Five; 13 Kissin' Cousins, Elvis Presley; 14 The Way You Do The Things You Do, Temptations; 15 Shoop Shoop Song, Betty Everett; 16 Suspicion, Terry Stafford; 17 Blue Winter, Connie Francis; 18 Stay, Four Seasons; 19 Navy Blue, Diane Renay; 20 Needles and Pins, Searchers.

BOOK WORMS? — No, but reading is far more fun — and beneficial — when you apply science and speed to it, suggests Teen-Age Canada today.

Wichita Falls Hit By Tornado, Seven Killed

Hundreds Homeless And Damage Is Heavy

Damage was estimated unofficially at $2,000,000.

The twister, viewed in horror by many standing in downtown streets and watching local television, drilled through the city's suburbs and nearby Sheppard Air Force Base.

An estimated 240 homes were demolished in a half-mile swath carved by the funnel, its form weaving like a snake against patches of blue sky.

Cars were hurled through the air. Bed springs, mattresses and household furnishings soared among debris into the streets.

HANGAR FALLS

At Sheppard, the walls of a hangar collapsed around a nonessentially trapped 300 airmen. The funnel lifted as it approached Sheppard officers' quarters, then hurdled its halls while debris rained about the building.

At last can't believe we managed to come through it," said R. B. Jones, grocery store owner who saved his wife and two-year-old daughter by pushing them into a walk-in ice box.

Governor John Connally called out 100 National Guardsmen to help keep order after the storm. One hundred men and vehicles patrolled the devastated area, estimated by the department of public safety to include 30 to 40 city blocks.

Sixty-nine persons were injured, 46 remaining in hospitals. Twenty-two were personnel from Sheppard.

TORNADO'S WAKE — Residents of the southwest portion of Wichita Falls rummage through the wreckage of their homes which were crushed by a tornado about 3 p.m. Friday. The twister was on the ground in a Wichita Falls residential district and in nearby Sheppard Air Force Base for about 35 minutes. Damage was estimated in millions of dollars. Seven were known dead. About 50 were believed injured as rescue and salvage operations continued. (AP Wirephoto)

Major Tremor Is Felt

By WARD SIMS

ANCHORAGE (AP)—Another major tremor in Alaska, the second in a week, lent a wary air of activities in the quake stricken Anchorage area today.

The tremor, one of some 50 after-shocks since the major earthquake of March 27, set buildings sawayy Friday and sent office workers and shoppers scurrying into the streets of downtown Anchorage.

Police reported no casualties and had no reports of major damage to buildings or homes. Last week's tremor left 139 known dead or missing and presumed dead.

The University of Washington seismography office said the quake registered 7.5 on the Richter earth quake intensity scale, substantially under the force of the massive tremor of Good Friday which registered 8.7.

The new shock was felt in Fairbanks, Juneau, Valdez, Kodiak, Seward, Valdez and Cordova. The latter four communities, as well as Anchorage, suffered severe damage a week ago.

WATCHED 'HOT LINE'

State civil defence officials clustered around their "hot line," an emergency circuit linking the cities of south-central Alaska, when the shock hit, apprehensive about the safety of neighboring communities.

But, one by one, the surrounding cities checked in to report that while the quake had been felt, it was slight in their areas and had apparently centred near Anchorage. There were no reports of unusual wave action.

In the Anchorage daily Times building, where equipment and supplies were strewn over the floor March 27, not a thing was disturbed Friday.

Power remained throughout the city and communications were not disrupted.

Only the cracks in the streets and the few windows that have not been replaced give evidence to the destruction caused to downtown Anchorage by last week's mighty shaking.

'Just, Fair' Canal Pact Promised

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Panama are moving quickly to restore normal diplomatic relations and are expected to open talks soon on their differences over the Panama Canal.

A new agreement pledging them to work out a "just and fair" settlement was concluded at a meeting of the Organization of American States Friday.

It finally brought to an end the crisis in U.S.-Panama relations which began three months ago with an argument over flying flags in the Panama Canal Zone and erupted into mob violence that more than a dozen score of lives. Relations between the countries were severed Jan. 17.

President Johnson said the day of agreement was "a great day for the American people, for Panama, for all the western hemisphere and for all freedom-loving people everywhere."

"Panama can be confident, as we are confident," Johnson told Latin American ambassadors and U.S. officials at the White House, "that we each desire in agreement that protects the interest and recognizes the needs of both our nations."

After the agreement was signed Johnson spoke by telephone with President Roberto Chiari of Panam.

Two hours later Panama named Miguel Moreno Jr., its ambassador to the Organization of American States, as its new envoy to Washington.

Johnson is expected to announce a new ambassador to Panama in a day or so.

The agreement provides that the U.S. and Panama are to begin immediately "the necessary negotiations with the objective of reaching a just and fair agreement which would be subject to the constitutional processes of each country."

In the case of the United States that means that if provisions in the 1903 canal treaty are agreed on — and what changes have been demanded by Panama—they will be submitted to action by the U.S. Senate.

Ships in Sault Ste. Marie Experiencing Difficulties

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — Lake ships in the Sault Ste. Marie area are experiencing difficulties caused by ice conditions.

Cold weather and winds have shifted the ice, which ranges from six to 20 inches thick, in the St. Mary's River and Lake Superior.

Five ships were encountering tough going in Whitefish Bay, a perennial hazard to early shipping.

In the bay the new $4,000,000 Sir Denys Lowson, owned by Algoma Central and Hudson Bay Railway company, and the Leecoyer, owned by Canada Steamship Lines, began to move after being stuck in the ice Friday morning.

The two ships were joined by the Gordon C. Leitch, owned by Upper Lakes Shipping, Scott Misener Enterprises of Royalton and the Hamiltonian, owned by Paschalridis Company.

All were reported moving cautiously after receiving aid from the United States Coast Guard icebreaker Mackinaw.

In the lower river, 13 vessels were involved in a traffic tieup. This was caused when the N. M. Paterson Steamship Lines Portadoc and Ridgetown, owned by Upper Lakes, became stuck in ice and other vessels were unable to pass.

The Portadoc was freed late Friday when the Mackinaw moved into the lower river to clear the jam.

PORT ARTHUR (CP) — Ice still called some of the shots at Lakehead Friday, more than 24 hours after the grain-stocked port had its opening.

The T. R. McLagan became stranded on heavy slip ice. Elevator officials said the ship took a run at the ice in an attempt to get close enough to the dock to be loaded.

Deposed Goulart In Exile

By EDGAR MILLER

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Deposed leftist president Joao Goulart fled into exile in neighboring Uruguay today, police said, while his successor tackled the formidable job of untangling Brazil's chaotic economy.

Goulart crossed the border before dawn with his brother-in-law, Leonel Brizola, a pro-Communist member of congress, said a Uruguayan police office, ending a two-day mystery about their whereabouts.

Goulart's pretty wife, Maria Teresa, and their two children, arrived Friday in a small plane outside Montevideo, Uruguay. She said she expected to be reunited with her husband soon and added:

"We shall make our home here until the situation is clear in Brazil and then we shall return."

The police official said Goulart and Brizola were at the ranch of a friend in a small town, 19 miles from the Brazilian border.

NEW PRESIDENT MOVES

With Goulart in flight, Brazil's new president, Paschoal Ranieri Mazzilli, moved swiftly with U.S. blessing to return the country to normal in the wake of the anti-Communist upheaval.

He met with reporters in Rio de Janeiro shortly after his ar-

Molotov No Longer CP Member

MOSCOW (AP) — Three old hard-line Stalinists have been dismissed out of the Soviet Communist party.

The three who for years ranked among the world's most powerful men were former premiers Georgi Malenkov and V. M. Molotov and former first deputy premier Lazar Kaganovich.

All were known as disciples of the Stalin line, particularly Molotov, who has sided with the Communist Chinese in their ideological struggle with the Soviet Union.

Malenkov, Molotov and Kaganovich lost their government posts in June, 1957, when Premier Khrushchev beat them in a struggle for control of the Communist party and government apparatus.

Hall, Millard Unveil Accord For Lakes Peace

One Union for Sailors Is Ultimate Objective

MONTREAL (CP) — Charles Turner, who took over from Hal C. Banks as president of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada, will soon step down from the office and make way for a regular SIU member under a plan to ensure labor-peace on the Great Lakes.

Also involved in the peace package will be an all-out attempt to "achieve integration of maritime unions in Canada where it is in the interests of union stability."

Mr. Turner was appointed to the top spot by the federal-appointed board of maritime trusteeships to restore what the board called "managerial stability" to the union.

His impending withdrawal and the integration move were announced Friday night in a joint statement by Paul Hall, president of the SIU of North America, and Charles Millard, a member of the board.

When asked if plans for integration meant one union for all Great Lakes sailors, Mr. Millard said moves toward this goal are "not too far away."

UNION PROMISED

It was understood that the Canadian Maritime Union (CLC), representing sailors of the Upper Lakes Shipping Company Limited of Toronto, would be united with the SIU.

Such amalgamation would be extended to members of the National Association of Maritime Engineers (CLC), who represent licensed personnel on Upper Lakes ships.

Under the SIU constitution executive vice-president Leonard McLaughlin would take over as president from Mr. Turner, appointed when the trustees fired Mr. Banks March 18.

The joint statement said steps will be taken immediately to restore the SIU of Canada to constitutional control of its members.

Mr. Millard is one of the three trustees who took over control of the SIU and four other Canadian maritime unions Oct. 22 under a special law passed by Parliament earlier in the month. The legislation expires Dec. 31, 1965.

HAVE AUTHORITY

The trustees answerable to Parliament, have the authority to remove union officials and take over direct control of unit finances in the interest of the union membership.

The legislation was designed to end labor disputes on the lakes that repeatedly curtailed

Senator Blocks Payment

By ROBERT RICE

OTTAWA (CP) — A 75-year-old Conservative senator blocked a government bill in the Senate Friday night—threatening payment of unemployment insurance to 46,000 jobless workers on Monday.

Senator Gratien O'Leary said he didn't want to be a "gramophone" for the Comment. He firmly refused a government request to waive Senate rules to push through a $150,800,000 appropriations bill in time for last-minute royal assent.

Labor Minister MacEachen was to meet the three unemployment insurance commissioners today to determine what steps, if any, can be taken to pump fresh cash into the commission's empty fund before the UIC offices open Monday.

The minister ordered commissioners' details to report by 9:30 a.m. EST today to exact amount of cash on hand, if any.

Chief Commissioner Laval Fortier estimated Friday that $1,800,000 to $2,000,000 will be needed Monday to meet the expected 46,000 claims for benefits.

LOAN UNAVAILABLE

The Senate stands adjourned until 8 p.m. Monday and a government emergency loan to the fund will not be available until the appropriations bill passes the Senate and receives royal assent.

Senator O'Leary, president at the Ottawa Journal and noted for his thundering editorials capped one of the most unusual weeks in the history of Parliament.

The week began with an unprecedented Good Friday sitting of seven minutes and continued through five days of ill-tempered and often confused debate during what was supposed to be an Easter week holiday.

A growing rebellion in the Senate erupted Friday after the government rushed its appropriations measure through the Commons.

The Commons holds the sole power to approve government spending. The Senate, which can alter most other measures

Prairies Hope For Big Crop

By KEN CLARK

WINNIPEG (CP) — Hope is high in this western grain trading centre that another prairie bumper crop this year despite generally poor fall and winter precipitation.

Many Shots Ring Out in Cyprus But Only Casualty Is Accident

NICOSIA (CP) — The United Nations reported widely - scattered shooting in Cyprus today but the only casualty was a Greek - Cypriot policeman, wounded by an accidental discharge.

The UN force was fired on Friday by Greek-Cypriots in an area which Canada's Royal Canadian Dragoons will begin to patrol Monday.

The British patrol was fired on two or three times when it attempted to rescue what it thought was a wounded Turkish-Cypriot in the village of Ayios Theodoros near the northwest corner of the Mediterranean island.

It was the third time British members of the UN peace force have been fired on by Greeks.

Today's Chuckle

It isn't such a bad old world after all - - once you get used to being nervous about everything.

THE WEATHER

Cold Arctic air continued to flow southward into Ontario during the night and the cold wave is expected to prevail through northerly winds. Skies were clear.

This time they did not return the fire but their threat to do so was enough to stop the shooting.

The Royal Canadian Dragoons, led by Maj. John Ross of Ottawa, Monday will take over from British policing of the 1,000-square-mile area in north central and northwestern Cyprus. The Canadian patrol will consist of 20 armored scout cars.

In Ayios Theodoros, a Turkish-Cypriot was later reported killed and a Turkish - Cypriot and Greek - Cypriot wounded during the incident.

A UN spokesman reported four overnight exchanges of fire in the Nicosia suburb of Omorphita, where British UN troops were positioned between Greek-Cypriot and Turkish - Cypriot posts.

A few shots were also reported from the southwest corner of the island.

United Nations armored cars, meanwhile, escorted 10 buses carrying a relief force of 230 Turkish troops from the port of Famagusta, where they arrived Friday to Nicosia.

The new arrivals were replacing a similar number of Turkish troops returning home after their regular tour of duty.

Federal Pension Plan Feasible Without Ontario

TORONTO (CP)—The Globe and Mail, in an Ottawa story today, quotes Health Minister LaMarsh as saying the Canada Pension Plan is actuarily geared to work without the participation of Quebec and Ontario.

The newspaper says the health minister said in an interview Friday that even if the two larger provinces stay out of the plan, it can still be implemented without disturbing the level of benefits and contributions set out in a bill introduced in the Commons last month.

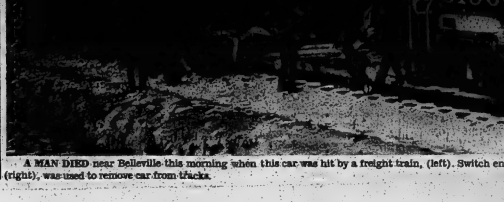
Train Meets Car on Track - - - Driver Killed

A Belleville man died this morning, three hours after his car was struck by a forty - car C.N.R. freight train near Bayside, Prince Edward County.

Allan Fisher, age 24 of 203 Church St. was found 75 feet from the wreckage of his car when the train was stopped about a quarter mile from the collision point. Official reports indicate the point of impact was about forty feet east of the crossing. The car was thrown sideroad on the track; the train pulled by four diesel units, was westbound. Time of the accident was 4.37 a.m.

Police are investigating a report that a second automobile was in the vicinity at the time. The second car, according to the report, sped away after the Gallagher car was struck.

The Gallagher car, a five-year-old Buick, was a total wreck after the accident. A CNR switch engine from Belleville yards pulled it along the tracks to a farmer's private crossing, where it was removed from the rails.



Engineer of the Toronto-bound freight train was A. Currie, of 66 Alexander St., Belleville, and the conductor was L. L. Lee, also of Belleville. The crew took over the train at Brockville, and were taking it through to Toronto. A C.N.R. official this morning estimated the train was going between 50 and 55 miles per hour at the time of the impact.

Gallagher was taken to Belleville General Hospital, after the accident, by La Salle ambulance of Belleville. He died in the hospital at 7.20 a.m.

The victim's father — Joseph Gallagher — is a retired CNR engineer.

Mr. Gallagher was employed at the Bakelite division plant of Union Carbide Corp. and was a member of St. Michael's Church.

Besides his parents he is survived by a brother, Norman, Joseph of Toronto and a sister, Mrs. Roger (Colleen) Whitehead, Toronto. He was unmarried.

Quebec Liberal Group May Have Been Strengthened by Recent Fiscal Conference

By JOHN TOGSTON

QUEBEC (CP) — The post-fiscal federation powers conference following the federal-provincial fiscal conference year ago could strengthen the hand of a group within the Quebec Liberal Federation which wants to break away from the national party.

The immediate results of the three - day conference showed Liberal Premier Jean Lesage intends to maintain the principles of provincial autonomy, in the face of a Liberal government in Ottawa.

This is in line with the views of a group within the Quebec Liberal Federation which argues that if Quebec Liberals are to maintain provincial autonomy, the party must be free of attachments to national party.

The position was summed up recently by Rene Levesque, Quebec Liberal cabinet minister, in a speech to a Liberal organization.

"Let's be clear," he said. "There are two levels of government, Ottawa and Quebec. They are the same.

CANNOT BE BOTH

"Often they oppose one another. We cannot be black and white at the same time."

In a separate communique after the conference Thursday, Mr. Lesage made two main points showing that he intends to protect provincial autonomy. He emphasized the possibility of court action to test the constitutionality of two federal plans to aid education, if they take effect in Quebec. He raised the spectre of double taxation in Quebec this year unless the government's demands for more taxation resources have gone unanswered.

And he has already made it obvious to Ottawa that if double taxation is announced in his budget speech later this month.

His strong stand on the two questions is his answer to Union Nationale opposition claims that Liberal governments in Ottawa and Quebec can harm the province.

FRIDAY, April 3

Senator Grattan O'Leary (PC-Ontario) refused immunity from consent in the Senate for passage of a money bill including the Canada Pension Plan.

Commons was told earlier by Labor Minister Mackasey that jobless benefits could not be paid Monday if the bill was delayed.

Prime Minister Pearson said the legislation for the Canada Pension Plan will go on as scheduled despite possible rejection by Ontario.

NDP Leader Douglas said there should be legislation for quick federal aid in disasters like the tidal wave loss in British Columbia.

Douglas Alkenbrad (PC-Prince Edward-Lennox) protested a switch in the sits of a new penitentiary to Cornwall from Kingston.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) filed notice in the Commons of a bill to abolish the Senate.

MONDAY, April 6

The Commons meets at 2:30 p.m. to continue debate on the 1963 - 64 supplementary estimates. The Senate meets at 8 p.m.

Six Prisoners Hanged Before Christmas Tree Says Witness

FRANKFURT (AP) — A witness testified Friday that a defendant in West Germany's biggest war crimes trial here hanged five or six prisoners of the Auschwitz camp in front of a Christmas tree in 1944.

The witness, Rudolf Steiner, 45, a Viennese detective, told the court the hangings took place in one of the camp blocks on Christmas before a tree put up by the SS (Nazi elite guard). He identified former SS Sgt. Oswald Kaduk as the man responsible.

"When some of his victims yelled out 'Down with the Nazis' as Kaduk put the noose around their necks, he beat them in the face with a riding whip he carried in his right hand, "Steiner said. "In his left hand he had a bottle of schnapps, and, as usual, was drunk."

Steiner, sent to Auschwitz in 1940 as a political prisoner, said he saw Kaduk and defendant Franz Hofmann, a former SS captain, select 20 starving prisoners for gas chambers in the summer of 1944.

Another witness, Maximilian Sternol, 70, testified that defendant Wilhelm Boger, 56, a former SS sergeant, once killed almost single-handed a revolt of Auschwitz prisoners.

"The 100 or so Jewish inmates who had to burn the bodies of their fellow prisoners cremated in the crematorium learned that after doing this type of work for six months, they too would be gassed.

DECIDED TO FIGHT

"They decided against going like lambs to the slaughter and decided to get hold of some guns. They even made hand grenades.

"I was walking by the crematoriums when I suddenly heard screaming and yelling coming from the same direction. I came running up and grabbed a submachine-gun from an SS guard and threw the butt into the exploding prisoners.

"After a number had been shot, I realized I was still alive so lie down on the ground. Then I was responsible for killing one SS man who had joined him, cut loose again with their sub - machine - guns, killing off the survivors of the short-lived revolt."

Earlier, the prosecution filed additional charges against two of the defendants.

Hofman, already serving a life sentence for conviction of murdering prisoners at Dachau concentration camp, was accused of supervising the killing of more than 13,000 Auschwitz prisoners. Ex-SS Pvt. Bruno Schlage was charged with starving Auschwitz prisoners to death in the camp's standing cell-cells in which a prisoner could neither sit nor lie down.

Plastic Cups And Saucers Will Be Used

In hospital little things count a lot.

They also may cost a lot.

Take for instance the problem of serving hot beverages to patients in Belleville General Hospital.

Hitherto this has been done by using disposable insulated sponge-paper cups.

They keep tea and coffee warm en-route to a hospital floor — and look just like a take-out order from a restaurant.

They also rake up an annual cost of $4,506.

Now, the hospital's Board of Governors has approved an improved coffee-tea service. This will introduce insulated hot-beverage cups, purchase of plastic cups and saucers of plastic to resemble bone china also is in the offing.

The idea doesn't appear significant until replacement costs for the present sponge-paper cups opposed to the new service, is considered.

If 60 cups alone, after initial outlay, the hospital can save up to $3,600 says administrator S. J. Johnston.

Kingston Wins First Game Minor Tourney

The defending champion Fort Henry Knights team, from Kingston, won it's opening game in the second annual B.M.H.A. Peewee tournament which got under way here on Saturday.

Fort Henry clipped Napanee 4-3 on goal in the game's closing minutes, after trimming Napanee into the "B" division.

Other first-round games pitted Picton against Trenton and Belleville MacCormacks against Gananoque and Ottawa against Alex.

The "B" finals will be played at five o'clock today with the championship final, between the two undefeated teams during the day's play, slated for 6:00 p.m.

Bill Bruyea fired the deciding goal for Kingston in this morning's 9:30 a.m. contest. It was his second goal of the game. Peter Vincent bagged the winner' tally for Kingston, while Richard Proctor and Harold Guillard drew assists.

Neil Pratt and Barry Brinklow were the Napanee marksmen and Wayne Elder drew one assist.

An early report at the arena this morning claimed that ice plant trouble would cause the flooding but that the tournament would go on as scheduled. The ice surface would receive frequent scrapings during the day.

Over 3,000 Inquiries Made At Tax Office

If attendance figures are a reliable guide, one of Belleville's busy days during the tax season is the Department of National Revenue's Income Tax offices in the Federal Building on Station Street.

From January 2 to the close of business Thursday, a total of 2,221 taxpayers have had their queries handled by departmental staff members at the counter, and another 1,054 citizens have had their questions answered by a telephone inquiry team during the same period.

Since the February figures are nearly double the normal January ones, it is likely that the remaining days of this month and April will be a busy time indeed.

The rush, of course, was anticipated and two groups of 15 plus 7 group heads, have been assigned to staff the tax counter and telephone enquiries on a rotation basis.

Group members are familiar with the problems most taxpayers present and group heads have the training and experience to deal with unusual tax situations — or are able to refer them to departmental specialists, usually without delay, who are also available for consultation.

Thanks to the changeover in tax collecting procedures, the actual filed returns are processed electronically by computer at the Ottawa Data Processing Centre — the staffs in local and regional offices are now able to increase the help they can give taxpayers before the latter fill in their T1 general or T1 short forms.

Help, incidentally, can be provided in both English and French language, right on the spot, for a number of departmental employees are proficient in a second language. However a Departmental employee cannot fill out a taxpayer's return.

Interestingly, the greatest volume of queries to date this year is somewhat below that of 1963, a fact perhaps in part attributable to the department's partial payment made a few weeks ago to every taxpayer to simplify tax filing.

As in the past, early filing is stressed, an obvious advantage to the 'majority of taxpayers who will receive refunds. This year, for the first time, taxpayers who owe tax payments may also file early and attach cheques post-dated to April 30th, thereby speeding up the processing of their income tax returns too.

PERCENTAGE GRAPH shows distribution of Belleville General Hospital expenditures for fiscal year 1963, with salaries and wages at $1,761,141 taking the major portion.

Belleville General Hospital Operated Within Black in Past Year Governors Told

Belleville's biggest public enterprise—second only to its city itself in gathering and dispensing public funds — was ignored by the public yesterday at its most crucial session of the year.

Or what should be its most crucial meeting.

Not one single, solitary citizen turned out to the annual meeting of the Belleville General Hospital's board of governors.

This, despite the fact the city owned institution — and Belleville's only hospital — quotes its business transactions in the millions.

For instance its auditor's report for 1963 yesterday showed a neat excess of revenue over expenditures at almost $70,000.

It also informed the governors their revenue for the year was $3,733,045. Their expenditures totaled $3,754,060. Depreciation allowed by the Ontario Hospitals Services Commission of $84,013 took up the difference between income and outlay — and justified the board in claiming itself operationally well within the black during the past year.

Yet seats at the hospital's Convocation Hall were totally empty of interested citizens as the board sat down to talk in thousands — and millions — of dollars, intricately spent.

The significance of the session was also underscored by the fact the hospital now is in the throes of its costliest expansion program to date. But the only ones present to query the governors on its progress were news reporters.

PUBLIC NOT INTERESTED

The absence of public tax payers did not go unnoticed by the board.

"Once again," commented one governor aloud, "it shows the interest in the workings of their hospital."

"Maybe it's a good sign," interposed board chairman Jack Vanover. Maybe they are satisfied."

But, added another board member, "there is absolutely no interest as far as the public is concerned. Three years ago we had three people here."

Yet, the intricate breakdown of hospital operational expenditures shown in the annual report compiled by administrator S. J. Johnston, proved just how big public business Belleville General is.

For instance, its basic expenditures were up nearly $148,900 over 1962.

Salaries and wages were logged at $1,761,141 — compared to a payroll of $1,589,359 the year before.

Medical and surgical supplies were down slightly at $96,800 from $98,972; drugs and medicines cost $190,653 compared with $174,354, while "other supplies and expense" cost $705,452 against $650,900 in 1962.

The ramifications of setting this outlay against income was shown in a slight increase in the standard ward rate from $22.21 to $22.27.

And the final excess of revenue over expenses at $62,978 in the past year compared with $73,114 in 1962, the report stated.

Salaries, of course, are the major outlay, accounting for a huge 66 percent of operating expenses in the past year.

APPRAISAL PRESENTED

Drugs and other medical supplies accounted for 10.8 percent of the balance and food 5.6 percent.

The report was also significant in being the first presented the governors by Mr. Johnston since appointment as administrator last fall.

The administrator, besides reviewing activities in the past year, placed before his board a straightforward appraisal of what may be called for in the coming year. The situation is also compounded by the imminence of the expansion program now being pressed to completion.

"The primary objective over the next year or two," said Mr. Johnston's submission "will be to increase operational efficiency and more closely co-ordinate all departments so that the (hospital) organization may absorb smoothly the impact of increasing services—during the period of transition with the new structure."

To this end—that of organizational smoothness during the changeover—surveys will be conducted into its effects on all departments of the hospital complex.

Just how complex this is Mr. Johnston explained to reporters after the meeting. Ways and means must be found of accommodating different phases of hospital operations whose quarters now rest on the land which will eventually be swallowed up by the expansion program.

Incidentally, plans for the general layout of the new wing were received Thursday and despatched to the Ontario Hospital Services Commission for approval, he added.

Committee members guiding the program, will meet with the commission Monday.

After that, the plans will be re-submitted to architects and designers for final detailed blueprints.

In turn, these must be turned into the commission and federal authorities before the entire project is given the green light.

Tenders, said Mr. Johnston, may be called early next year with the final phase of the program—its construction.

Capacity Audience Greets Command Band of RCAF

TRENTON — When a radio station, with a listening audience of an impossible-to-estimate thousands of people issues an invitation to a band concert by a famous RCAF band . . . the results are what you might expect . . . a full house.

That's what happened at Trenton High School last night as a capacity audience crowded into the auditorium, at the invitation of Radio Station CJBQ to hear the farewell performance of the RCAF's Air Transport Command Band, with an able assist from the RCAF Pipes and Drums.

The 47 members of the ATC Band are shortly to be disbanded, and in the words of the band leader, F/O Ted Robbins, "it's a tragic thing." The people who attended the concert and those who listened in to CJBQ-AM's broadcast of the performance, couldn't help but agree with him.

"It's killing something that's alive," F/O Robbins stated in an interview. "These men have played together, worked together and lived together. We've worked in musical harmony."

The highlight of his career with the band, going back four years, was last summer's invitation trip to the Canadian Trade trip to the Philadelphia, when the band, scheduled to stay two days, was literally forced to stay over an additional three days by public acclaim.

Last night's performance was one of two appearances in Belleville and Trenton set up to honor the 40th anniversary of the RCAF locally. CJBQ's official host, Trenton station manager, Ted Snider, welcomed the guests and the mayor of the town, D. J. MacDonald echoed the welcome.

"We are still The Air Force City, no matter how many other municipalities try to lay claim to the title," said the mayor.

"Hammy" McDonald, basic ess manager at CJBQ, Belleville and a former member of the RCAF Band, was introduced from the audience.

It was pointed out that ATC's motto is "Versatile and Ready" and the band went on to illustrate the aptness of the motto.

MANY SOLOISTS

From the opening strains of Wagner's "Lohengrin" the band swung into the bell-shaped tones of the Sebastian Ballet by the contemporary Glan Carlo Manotti; took the audience back through the years with a Salute to George Gershwin and spanned the decades in music again with a modernistic treatment of the sombre music of Newfoundland by CBC's Howard Cable.

Soloists last night were trumpeter Wilfred Jones, marimbanist Fred Pleasants and tenor Norm Rice.

The appearance of the plaid-clad members of the RCAF's Pipes and Drums received an enthusiastic response from the audience and a lone Scot rose to his feet as a salute to the marching pipers and drummers.

From the clash of the cymbals to the blare of the trumpets, the band members followed the cues of their brilliant leader, Ted Robbins, playing at times as one man; precisely while a soloist took over then back to the "team" work of the entire assembly without a hitch.

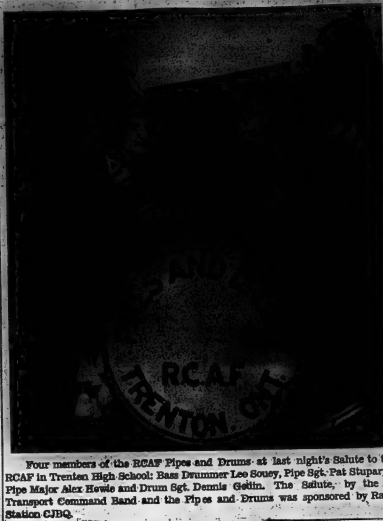
Wing Commander Maitland was called to the stage by the mayor to represent the RCAF, and the audience rose to sing "Happy Birthday" to the boys in Air Force blue.

The program was brought to a close by the moving RCAF March Past and a solemn tribute to the Queen.

Rash of Mishaps Keep Police Busy Most Are Minor

TRENTON — In spite of extremely hazardous driving conditions in Trenton Thursday night and yesterday morning no accidents occurred on Trenton Streets.

In the outlying areas around Trenton, provincial police were so busy checking out accident reports yesterday that detailed reports were unobtainable. Many of the accidents were minor and involved vehicles slipping off the highway and into the ditch.



A Trenton man, Michael Gosling, was treated at Trenton hospital for a bump on the head and x-rayed for possible shoulder injuries after his car left No. 3 Highway, just west of the Glenmorris Motel, bumped a ditch and struck a tree, narrowly missing another tree and a utility pole. The 1964 car was considered a write-off

A two-car collision at the corner of Consecon St. and Highway 33 in the village of Wellington, yesterday morning resulted in damages estimated at $700 but no injuries to the drivers, or their passengers. Drivers of the two cars were Miss Lanna Gallagher of Wellington and Bart Cunningham of R. R. 1, Wellington. The accident was investigated by Constable Karl Marvin of Wellington.

Early yesterday, also, a car driven by Mr. R. Hunter of Carrying Place went out of control on Onderdonk's Hill on the Old Kingston Road and struck a hydro pole. The car was damaged to the extent of $250. But Mrs. Hunter was not seriously injured.

Robarts and the Pension Plan

Premier John Roberts has not said that Ontario will stay out of the Federal Government's pension plan.

Many people would be happier if he had done so—and not all of these would have been people opposed to the federal plan.

As it is now, both opponents and proponents of the federal plan will just have to wait and see which way the Ontario Government jumps —as the last moment.

Ontario's decision will depend in part on the precise provisions of the federal plan, as finally approved by Parliament.

It is true that at the federal-provincial conference at Quebec City Wednesday, Mr. Roberts stressed the desirability of the federal plan being "truly national," covering all of the provinces.

But this observation was no more than a statement of principle—a principle, incidentally, with which we agree.

In practice this goal cannot be achieved, because Quebec has definitely decided to operate its own pension plan.

It seems to us, though, that next to a "truly national" plan, the best thing would be a plan which was as "universal" as possible—that is a plan which covered all the provinces except Quebec.

Premier Roberts is certainly correct when he says that if one province has the right to stay out of the federal-provincial scheme, the same right is enjoyed by the other provinces.

We would go further than this, to jump to the conclusion that the position which Quebec has already taken.

Quebec already has a pension plan drafted which, in the opinion of both Premier Leage of Quebec and Prime Minister Pearson, offers benefits comparable to the federal plan.

Ontario has no such plan. This may have been obscured by the fact that Ontario has already passed pension legislation. This pension legislation, though, had an entirely different objective in mind, when first considered. It was aimed at making private plan pensions "portable," so that they would follow a worker from job to job. It achieves this—and the provisions of the legislation covering "portability" will go into effect regardless of what action is taken on the federal pensions plan.

Certain standards are also set for private pension plans—some uniformity here is essential if the feature of "portability" was to prove valuable in enhancing the mobility of labor and lessening the difficulty now experienced by older workers in getting new jobs.

This legislation, though, does nothing whatever to broaden the coverage of pension plans. Its provisions are certainly not "comparable" to the federal plan, as are Quebec's.

If Premier Roberts decides against Ontario participation in the federal plan, he will either have to draft a new plan for Ontario, or contest that provision of the federal legislation which provides that provinces can stay out only if they offer comparable plans.

One more point—Quebec's decision to operate its own plan was based, in part, on its well-established crusade against centralization of power and for provincial rights, but only in part. There was also additional reason and a powerful one—Quebec wants to use the money collected to finance economic expansion. French-Canadian capital is scarce. It is estimated that as much as 85 per cent of major industries are owned by foreign capital. There is no comparable lack of capital in Ontario. Even if there were, few people would expect Premier Roberts to launch the sort of socialistic program which Premier Lesage apparently envisages in Quebec, with the government providing funds for economic expansion in partnership with private capital.

Ontario thus has no need, nor any desire, for the kind of program which led Premier Lesage to stay out of the federal plan.

Premier Roberts' record with respect to medical care insurance will make some people uneasy about any Ontario pension plan. The medical care insurance plan here aims at making such insurance available to everybody through private insurance firms. Any effort to provide a program for pensions through private firms would be doomed to failure. It would be impossible to match the federal plan by this means.

Premier Roberts had better remember that the federal pension plan is one of the very few examples of legislation which has won unanimous approval from all parties in the House of Commons. If he keeps Ontario out of it, he will need to provide an excellent alternative if he is to escape the displeasure not merely of Liberals, Socreds and NDP-ers, but also of the Federal wing of his own Progressive Conservative party.

Ottawa Offbeat
Has CBC Bitten Hand That Feeds It Once Too Often?

By RICHARD JACKSON

From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, which likes to make great sport of appearing to bite the hand that feeds it — this year with $103,000,000 of the taxpayers' money — may have done everybody an unintentional favor by going too far.

It is something to wonder what it is — a guilt complex, a haunting feeling of inferiority, or some other federal corporative psychosis — that seems to compel the CBC to go to often ridiculous lengths to demonstrate that while it lives, indeed luxuriates, on a Parliamentary handout it is under no obligation or even grateful to the taxpayers and their elected representatives.

But perhaps it is a power com- glorification of the all-wise panel.

What else could explain the televised perversion of a "Crawford Arnold," the TV glorification of the continent's leading (and convicted) purveyor of pornography, the effort to sanitize churchmen in the screening of "The Open Grave," and, among a great many other things, the consistently attempted humiliation of political leaders on network panel programs.

Let us look at those political panel shows — from both sides of the political fence.

THE BIG HIT

Think of the high marks they score with the CBC if, with smile, discourteous, barbed and loaded questions, they can appear to intellectually upstage a cabinet minister or belittle an opposition leader.

This raises the question of why the CBC should be allowed almost unlimited leeway, at any period, in part, on the attempted humiliation of public figures.

If the politicians are to be cross-examined and given their public come-uppance, it should be done in the Parliament. Rival politicians competing for power, and not by show-business smart-alec without political responsibility, competing for T.V ratings.

It has been suggested by any number of incensed MPs that CBC may have overstepped, on the theory that if it could sufficiently cheapen and denigrate the politicians in the eyes of the as many consider it, abuse of public funds.

Almost all of the political leaders — not excluding in particular Prime Minister Pearson — have been ambushed on TV, trapped and tricked into saying things they should not have said, didn't intend saying, weren't ready-to say and wouldn't have said in quite the way they did.

The only politician who seems to evolve, a formula to beat the insidious CBC "show-em up" rap, was former Finance Minister Donald Fleming. He simply kept talking, non-stop, after the first question, leaving no possible, not even the tiniest opening for the artful, slanted, cut, meanest needle.

Politics are not CBC's nor even TV's dish. They do better with The Beatles.

Degrading Use of Dogs

North Bay Nugget

There is something horrible about watching one human being set an animal against another human being. It is one of the most degrading sights we can think of. We see it in race riots elsewhere in the world and we are occurring in the United States. Recently we were told that people may be breaking the law by causing such riots, is it necessary that they be also stained by the fangs of a dog? Fire hoses, yes, even clubs in extreme cases, but "man's best friend!" Man lowers himself a long way when he turns loose a shepherd dog or other arity-peaceful dog on his fellowman. This is injecting the poison of human hate into the dog — hate which was not put there by the dog's Creator.

20 YEARS AGO

The composition of the H.M.C.S. "BELLEVILLE" Fund met yesterday afternoon in the Council Chamber of the City Hall to discuss the final stages of the campaign and to consider the suggestion that the City of Belleville carry on beyond the "sponsoring" stage with the ship, to be named "BELLEVILLE" for the duration of the war. A motion by His Worship Mayor Rolling, honorary chairman of the committee, was made moving that the "BELLEVILLE" be adopted for as long as it is in the navy service, and that the funds raised for this purpose be incorporated into a trust account to be used at the discretion of the committee. The motion was seconded by Mrs. E. J. Butler, Regent of the St. Julien Chapter, I.O.D.E.

Following the motion to adopt the "BELLEVILLE" that it was moved by chairman J. J. Boyce that the objective from $40,000 be raised to $50,000 for the sponsoring alone, to $4,000 which would make the sponsoring fund over the $50,000 amount. It was felt by the committee that the original outlay of money to equip and furnish the ship with the finest accessories possible, would be lost sight of in a short time if the "BELLEVILLE" was left unadopted, and later taken up by some other town or city.

To Your Good Health
Canned Food Responsible For Few Botulism Deaths

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have some cans of tuna, crabmeat and salmon which have been on the shelves for perhaps four years. Is it safe to use them? — A. B.

There isn't any positive answer to this, but there isn't any way to be positively safe when you ride in an automobile, cross the street, or take a bath.

I suppose, since these are seafoods, you are concerned mainly over botulism. The Type B botulism that has had so much publicity in the last year.

Sad and dramatic as these cases were, you still are vastly more in danger of being killed by lightning — and there isn't much chance of that. I believe only two deaths were reported from items from canned fish; the rest were from smoked fish.

Canned food (commercially canned, I mean) has not been found responsible for botulism deaths in a quarter of a century. Home-canned food is another, averages several deaths a year from this, evidently when the rare occurrence of presence of the botulism organism plus insufficient cooking takes place.

Botulism is rare, and when the cause of poisoning. Far more deaths result from taking baths, being stung by bees, tripping over curbstones or smoking in bed.

Dear Dr. Molner: Every time I go to a urinalysis, I've been told to bring in the first specimen of the day. Last week I had a physical but the specimen was not taken under the circumstances you mentioned as desirable. Should I have another? — Mrs. K.

I don't think so, since you've found the physician not to be free of sugar. The first-in-the-morning specimen gives much information, but not in the case of other times in the day will still give a clue if anything is far out of order, especially sugar.

Today in History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

April 4, 1964 . . .

Canada recognized the insurgent government of General Nguyen Khanh 28 years ago today—in 1938—a few days after the end of the Spanish Civil War which lasted for nearly years and 254 days. The war claimed an estimated 1,000,000 lives.

1932—The U.S. airlights Akron crashed off the New Jersey coast in an electrical storm, killing 73. There were four survivors.

1933—The Roosevelt government smashed a plot to assassinate President Hitler Nehru and other Congress party leaders.

From the French-Canadian Viewpoint

This is a selection of editorials on current topics, translated from the French language press of Canada.

Granby La Voix de l'Est—The convocation (by the St. Jean Baptiste society) of an estate-general of the French-Canadian nation will arouse considerable comment in the future. The object of this convocation is to define and analyze the present situation of the French-Canadian nation, to work out its orientation and to commit it to action that will bring about self-fulfillment. This is not an easy task.

The discussions dealing with the orientation of the nation will have to aim at something besides a mere list of principles. One must strive to mark out the route along that is clear and can be followed in an easily forseeable future.

But to do this, we dare not proceed blindly and try to define the principles of the nation immediately. We must try to go too quickly, we shall commit dangerous errors and we shall even put the success of our cause in danger. We hear it said often enough: "We want to take concrete action immediately"; "Tomorrow will be too late", etc. There are, in fact, persons who would like to do everything overnight, but have significant examples in the history of the separatists and the terrorists.

This impatience is perhaps understandable at times, but all the same we must be reasonable. It will take the estates-general five years to define the goals of our nation. But five years, that is very little in the life of a people who, for one hundred years, have tolerated the worst injustice. Let us not press ahead too quickly, for perhaps we shall not be able to get by the pitfalls it may path. At present we do not know where we are going, we have only a rather vague idea of what we really want. This is so true, in fact, that we have a hard time giving any explanation to the average man, which is asking us to state our case. (March 24)

Quebec L'Action—The abyss widens between the endowed provinces and those that are poor. The latter have won their political independence but this has left them slow all, to feel their impotence and to be conscious of their destitution. An economic financial effort has been accomplished by the provincial powers. France, the United States, Britain and Russia by their economic and technological streams and the specialized groups of the United Nations have done also as well. How does it happen that the results obtained fall short of the effort made? That is clear and can be refuted in an easily forseeable future.

Sherbrooke La Tribune—The federal government can still count on a certain number for uncritical approval of its policy of economic development upon fields falling under provincial jurisdiction. A Halifax representative of the Commune, Mr. G. A. Regan, has just shown that he belongs to that category of leaders. According to Mr. Regan, the "provincial rights" entrenched in Quebec and Ontario are strongly to be blamed for the economic attitude that would make the effect of depriving the federal government of a good part of its taxation powers. To hear the Halifax member, one would believe that he has never cast eyes on the text of the Confederation act, in particular with regard to the dividing of powers and responsibilities between the federal government and the provinces.

If he had, Mr. Regan would not have spoken this way because he would have seen that the provinces are only trying to get Ottawa to give back what it borrowed from them for a definite period and has not yet returned. If the provinces are "depriving" the federal government, it is of what belongs to them and not of what belongs to it.

It has not often happened since 1867 that the provinces have succeeded upon a field of federal jurisdiction or appropriated revenue sources belonging to Ottawa. The reverse has occurred frequently, however, and given rise to a situation that has lasted too long.

In Mr. Regan's view, the federal government's role is to compensate certain provinces for the disadvantages from which they suffer in comparison with others. We do not deny Ottawa a certain role in the redistribution of the national wealth but one cannot say that the conditions of certain so-called poor provinces has improved much since the federal government took up this task. (March 25)

HOW MANY NO-PARKING SIGNS HERE? — There are scads of 'em scattered about Belleville General Hospital grounds forbidding parking . . . and as many parked cars as signs. Hospital authorities, after years of patient wrestling with the problem, have decided all vehicles now may be towed away.

Drastic Action Against Illegal Car Parking

Belleville General Hospital is being forced to take drastic action against illegal car parking.

In the near future, automobiles parked in forbidden areas will be towed away.

This is the only alternative left as car owners continue to ignore no-parking signs around hospital grounds already cramped for room, warned administrator S. J. Johnston yesterday.

And he could point to at least a score of vehicles whose owners had blatantly ignored such signs—among them the entrance ramp to the hospital's emergency admitting area.

The path was lined by vehicles halted by warning posters.

"Right now, there isn't even room for a fire truck to get by," said Mr. Johnston.

No definite date has yet been set for instituting the ultimatum.

Owners of trespassing vehicles recognized by hospital staffers will also be given warning to move before a tow truck is called.

TO GIVE PRIZE

MONTREAL (CP) — Mayor Jean Drapeau of Montreal announced Friday that a book prize of $3,000 will be awarded annually in the name of the island of Montreal. He said the prize will be known as the Grand Prix Litteraire de la Ville de Montreal with the prize money supplied by the Greater Montreal Council of Arts.

Welcome Criticism of Hospital If Justified Says Chairman

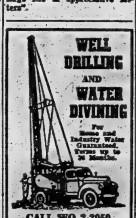
A member of Belleville General Hospital's board of governors, told his colleagues yesterday he had been instructed to relay criticisms of hospital food to them.

Herbert Polnter, Belleville Labor Council representative on the board, said he had been confronted with complaints by the council.

His statement brought immediate reaction from the board.

Administrator S. J. Johnston reminded the governors the hospital served up to 1,500 meals daily.

"We have received criticism, there is no doubt about it", said chairman Jack Yanover.



But, he added the hospital also was in possession of "a large file of appreciative letters".

"It is a difficult thing to try to satisfy 300 patients, some of them ill and not interested in anything — let alone food".

"It's difficult to try and satisfy 300 healthy people — I know that from experience", added Mr. Yanover who is a hotelman in business life.

"I don't think they (the criticisms) are justified to the extent these people express their views", said Mr. Polnter, who was later given a file on letters received from patients on the matter.

"Certainly", concluded Mr. Yanover, "we welcome criticism — providing it's justified.

The 91-day treasury bills were quoted at 3.87 per cent, off .01 per cent, until the 182-day bills at 4.02 per cent, down .02 per cent.

The short-term Canada market generally improved in a 10- to 15-cent range. The 3¼-per-cent bonds maturing Oct. 1, 1964, closed at $98.87, ahead 10 cents, and the 3¾ - per - cent bonds, maturing Sept. 1, 1965, closed at $98.05, up 15 cents.

The long-term Canada market was ahead between ¼ and ⅝. The 4¼-per-cent bonds maturing in 1983 closed at $91 bid and $97.25 asked.

The provincial market remained inactive with prices moving in slightly higher levels. The new Ontario five-per-cent bonds maturing in 1973 closed at $98.25 bid and $98.50 asked.

The municipal market continued quiet during the week with no change in prices.

Prices in the corporate bond market were generally unchanged.

Girl With Hollow Leg Presents Problem for Beau

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Call me Tom. I am a high school junior with big ideas and a small allowance. The girl I like best has an appetite like a horse. She can eat two of everything.

We have a real date either on Friday or Saturday night and $3 doesn't last my time at all. During the week when we walk home from school together she always wants to stop some place for a snack. I can't afford it.

I like this girl a lot but she is eating herself out of my life. Please don't tell me to suggest that she should watch her weight because she is skinny and is trying to put on ten pounds.

ANN LANDERS

Would it be all right if I came right out and told her how I feel? Or should I pay up and shut up?—TOM.

DEAR TOM — Tell that vacuum cleaner with teeth that you can't afford her appetite. A feed-bag date once a week is o.k., but a healthy young girl should be able to make it home from school without stopping on the way for nourishment. If not, suggest she carry two lunches.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I have an old school chum I have known for over 25 years. Whenever we are with friends she manages to steer the conversation to things I said and did when we were teen-agers — nearly 40 years ago.

Back in those days I had no idea she thought I was so empty-headed and silly. Now it seems every word I said was stupid and everything I did was hilarious. She never misses an opportunity to embarrass me with tales that make me out to have been the village idiot. She's been doing it for about 20 years and I am sick of it.

Through the years this woman has had much trouble and sorrow. My husband and I have been at her side through all her tribulations. I can think of no reason for her to want to humiliate me.

I would like to put an end to it once and for all without losing her friendship. How? — OLD FRIEND OR FOE?

DEAR ? — What's the matter with you — no vocal cords? Tell this woman precisely how you feel in language which will leave no room for doubt. If she persists in her routine drop her like a hot coal and don't worry about having lost a friend. Because she wasn't one.

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I wash clothes three times a week. Our four children range from 8 to 13 years of age. They all wear washable clothes and change daily. I'd prefer to have three small washes than one big one.

My husband claims any woman who washes three times (unless she has babies in the house) either is trying to impress the neighbors with her cleanliness, or she is off her rocker.

I might tell you I wash three times a week in winter as well as summer, and I hang the wash in the basement where the neighbors can't see it. Please comment. — NUTS BUT CLEAN.

• • •

DEAR BUT — If you want to wash twice a day six days a week, what's it to him? A lot of young women spend their time and energy in less productive ways.

A Great many husbands who write to me would cheerfully trade complaints with yours.

• • •

Confidential to MIDDLE MAID — It is perfectly obvious you have a lot to lose, but what have you to gain?

Question—When my rice pudding, cooked in the oven, dries, is it too much heat or the milk not fresh enough?—J. C.

Answer—I am mailing you a Baked Rice Pudding recipe.

Your request came in the same mail as the follow-

SATURDAY

Dinner Menu

Main Course Navy Bean Soup (see Wednesday); Rye or French Bread; Individual Wooden Bowl Salads of Cucumbers, Radishes, Tomatoes and Endive; Stuffed Baked Peaches (see Thursday); Crackers and Cheese (optional); Tea.

Letter—Thank you every day for your well loved page, not only for the cooking, but for your lovely character—I'd like to give the lady who asked for a recipe for Rice Pudding, the one which was my mother's "absolutely perfect". One third cup raw rice (not quick cooking), 4 cups milk, pinch of salt and a little nutmeg. Put this in quart casserole at 350 deg. Fahr. and cook for three hours. After 1 hour or when pudding comes to a gentle boil, stir the mixture once. Do not stir any more. It will become lovely and brown on the top and creamy rich inside. No vanilla or eggs—just milk.—Lilian B.

Answer—Thank you Lilian. I hope I live up to your expectations.

Letter—my family likes this:

CRACKED WHEAT BREAD (4 loaves—courtesy Mrs. Roger R.)

Note—This recipe is easy to cut in half.

1 cup warm water, 1 teaspoon sugar, 2 packages yeast, 2 cups scalded milk, 2 cups cold liquid (potato water or water), 2 cups cracked wheat, ¼ cup shortening or margarine, ½ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon salt, 9 to 10 cups flour.

Dissolve sugar in warm water and add yeast. Let stand about ten minutes, while doing the following: To hot milk add shortening, sugar, salt, cracked wheat, liquid. (The cold liquid will cool the hot milk to warm). Stir risen yeast liquid and add. Add about 4 cups of the flour and give the mixture a quick beat. Mix in additional flour until dough leaves sides of bowl—about 5 more cups. Turn dough onto floured surface and knead. When dough is smooth and feels spongy, place in greased bowl, cover and leave until doubled. Punch down, cover and let rise again. When doubled in bulk (to test press two fingers deeply into the dough—if the hole remains it is ready) punch down dough again and turn out on lightly floured boards. Cut into 4. Round each peace, cover and let rest while greasing pans. Shape into 4 loaves. Place in pans, which should be about half full. Cover, let rise until higher than edge of pans. Brush with melted butter. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. for 35 to 40 minutes. Remove from pans and cool on racks.

Answer—Thank you ever so much for your valued recipe. I'm sure our readers will enjoy it too.

GO with the great highway performer

A GENERAL MOTORS' VALUE

'64 Chevrolet Impala Sport Sedan and (background) Impala Sport Coupe

'64 Jet-smooth Luxury Chevrolet

A hill is just something to admire the view from when you're driving a '64 Chevrolet. With engines up to a 425-hp V8*, getting from one side to the other wouldn't be much easier if somebody had put a tunnel there.

And if Chevrolet can go over a whole mountain so you hardly feel it, you can imagine how it goes over plain old bumps. Jet-smooth, of course. We put a big coil spring at all four wheels (not to mention 700 or so sound and shock absorbers throughout the body and chassis) to soak up the bumps just as fast as they come.

As you'd expect, Chevrolet matches performance with outstanding luxury, inside that big beautiful Body by Fisher. All kinds of stretch-out room and wide thick-cushioned seats that let you get in a full day's driving without fatigue. Yards of deep-twist carpeting and elegant fabric and vinyl upholstery that make you feel good just being there.

With all its looks and luxury, you can see how anyone might get the idea that this great highway performer is a high-priced car. Unless, of course, they happened to look first at its reasonable Chevrolet price.

And your Chevrolet dealer will be happy to show you that, wherever you drive, the price is probably what you'll feel least of all. *Optional at extra cost.

Disillusioned American Heir Chose Riviera for Hideaway

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

CANNES, France — Just the other side of Nice, the less frequented side of the Blue Coast (for the gilded sun worshippers of its rocks and waters), lies the quiet village of La Napoule.

On the edge of the Gulf of Napoule stands a curious chateau built around the 13th Century Saracen tower. It was erected in 1918 by one of the most curious citizens ever to migrate to the hothouse atmosphere of the Riviera, now long famous for its blemish and arty-type playings.

He was Henry Clews Jr., son of a New York banker and heir of Newport society. At an early age Clews had become disillusioned with the Four Hundred phonies and intellectual pretenders of Victorian America. He turned his hand to art, now dead sculpture and painting that cut deeply into the risibilities of his class and, to say the least, was scarcely appreciated by it.

After living in Greenwich Village and the garrets of Paris, he came here to work and live out his life, turning out bizarre, avant-garde creations that came to rest in the dim half-world between madness and genius.

"The chateau he made into a kind of Disneyland of horrors that suited his temperament," said his wife dressed in medieval costume. He filled the arches, lintels, and high halls with bitter paintings and grotesque carvings satirical of the world he had left outside. The world he either understood not at all or understood all too well.

STRANGE FIGURES

Life - size paintings of nose-up dandies hang in the salons, and there are busts of half-imaginary, half-identifiable denizens of his universe with names like "Jan. King of the Jins," "Goo-hoo of Troy" and "Wog of Wagarda."

Though he was capable of great tenderness and reverence, as in his "Virgin of the Manchu" he took delight in pooping, in Gallic exatures with fierce beaks, owlish eyes, feathers and scales. He erected a mock - up withered old duchess draped absurdly in jewels. His most famous work is in the chateau courtyard, is "The Thinker," a contorted and shriveled old man who has poured all his life energies into his mind.

Clews died in 1937, unchristened, and unregarded. But his works and the chateau, now a school of art, are on view to whatever segment of the public cares to tear itself away from the more conventional delights of the Riviera.

Ever since Lord Borrough, en route to Nice for the winter, discovered he didn't have his vaccination certificate or something and decided to defly in the sunshine of southern France instead, the rich and the near-rich have been flocking here. The most exclusive claim of the moment is that it has leased out the Joan Golf promontory east of Cannes known as Cap d'Antibes to the Aga Khanoglous, leaving Elba for his last 100 days.

Nuns Plan To Convert Residence

MONTREAL (CP)—Six nuns of the Congregation of Notre Dame, a Roman Catholic order, are preparing to move from a rectangular brick 19th century their founder gave refuge to pioneer brides - to - be sent from France.

The nuns plan to convert the residence—a farmhouse in suburban Point St. Charles—into a museum stocked with mementoes of the nation's earliest days.

The house was built in 1668 after fire destroyed another dwelling built for the order five years before.

The nuns intend to stock the museum with furniture, books and other household effects used in the days when Mother Bourgeois' Bourgeoys was sheltering the young women dispatched by the French government.

Mother Ste. Germaine de la Croix, superior of the sisters, said:

"We have a wealth of genuine early Canadian furniture, church finery and hand-made farm accessories, plus a great number of authentic household pieces."

The nuns have engaged a cabinet maker to recondition old pieces for the museum, which will likely open to the public in September.

Meantime the nuns will be moving into a new 30-room residence adjacent to the ancient building.

Young Brother Probably Admires Fifteen-Year-Old

DEAR DORIS — I am 15 years of age. My brother is four. I think he is being babied too much. I get blamed for things he does.

My father takes things from my room which are mine, and gives them to my brother. He doesn't think of asking me, but when I do things without asking, boy; do I get it.

Well in this case my father took my key from my tackle box. When I took the key from my brother he started to scream, which isn't unusual. He hit me, so I pushed him away from me, not hurting him. My father, thinking everything I do is sheer brutality, smacked me and ordered me to my room. I tried to explain but no soap.

UNFAIR TREATMENT.

DORIS CLARE

DEAR UNFAIR — It's no fun to be blamed when you don't feel guilty; and you do have some right to your own possessions.

But you can catch more flies with honey than with vinegar. Has it ever occurred to you that your four-year-old brother probably thinks you are quite wonderful? Have you ever tried sitting up in bed with him and reading him a story? Could you make him a present of playthings you have grown out of, or show him how to put worms on a hook?

Try something. And prove to your dad and yourself that you are really growing up.

Second Glance

FROM THE HOLY LAND

"The soul of a journey is liberty, perfect liberty, to think, feel, do just as one pleases." — William Hazlitt.

"My chief reason for coming to Israel," continues Mary Boyce, a Philosophy graduate from the University of Toronto, in letters to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Boyce of Carrying Place Drive, Trenton, "is to see the kibbutzim. . ."

Before leaving I read a great deal about them and from then on now find myself far better informed about them than any one else.

I became interested in their system of education, in their social set up, their organization, their experiences among the different movements and I chose a hostel founded by people from different countries.

As you know, kibbutzim are unique communities," and Mary describes one: "It looks like a very large and prosperous farming village, except that many of the facilities are communal and there are no private cars.

For instance, there is a communal laundry and dining hall and a well stocked shop, also a swimming pool and a large theatre, beautifully owned by several kibbutzim in the area.

The countryside. . .looks somewhat like Orlando, Florida, for the citrus trees. But in the distance, there are ancient hills, mostly rock covered, and glimpses of other settlements."

Each kibbutz has a school, at Ulpan where languages are taught.

"Where else in the world," Mary asks, "could one have such opportunities: to learn a language, be given food, lodging, clothes, concerts, lectures, today live cheaply, be made welcome and given all the necessities? Have things arranged, immediately upon arrival, when travelling about in a foreign country? Nowhere else.

"Also Israel is a fascinating country: built from scratch in 75 years right into the 20th century (sorry, I'm not putting it very well). And, of course, Israel is full of historical interest of ancient and modern and its history is continuing by that, I mean, its events are not repetitive; it is not a static society.

It has more or less absorbed 1½ million immigrants in 15 years, tripled its population in 12 years and provided work and housing for all who need it. . . Israel is far, far more than I could have imagined it to be."

She learns, "Anyone who wants to work on a kibbutz can just come to Israel, go to the central office of one of the kibbutz movements (there are four) and he will be offered a choice of at least two kibbutzim which need workers (one kibbutz in the north, the Galilee and one on the south, the Negev) as a general rule. Or he can take his chances on simply walking on to a kibbutz and asking the secretary if workers are needed, and they usually are.

By "working on kibbutz" I mean that one is given a place to sleep and cupboards for his clothes, food and other necessities and is much appreciated money as the kibbutz can afford (on a well-to-do kibbutz, about 10 Israel pounds per month, about $3.00) which sounds terrible but really isn't since most of the necessities and more of the luxuries of civilized living are provided."

Mary finally chose to stay and study at the Ulpan, Kibbutz Sa'ad which "is southeast of Hadera. It seems to be a large and prosperous kibbutz, with a population of about 800 and such amenities as a library, a theatre good housing and food and (of course) a coffee house where one can read or play chess while drinking expresso or cocoa. The people who have arrived for the next ulpan seem very good sorts and are from various places: Switzerland, France, Germany, Holland, England and the U.S.

AGREED — IT'S THE PRETTY LOOK

We all agree that the "Pretty Look" will reign supreme, at least until next fall, when the designers will present us with another look. Fortunately there are variations of the pretty look, all the way from the standard "chocolate box" sweetness to the healthy outdoor girl for whom pink does very little. The trick is to choose from the myriad variations of the look and arrive at a wardrobe which suits you and your activities.

Even though white is the only color you can find in any store, you most certainly should not buy it if white does not flatter your complexion or your figure. Canadian women usually have far too much sense to be impractical, and the individual, to slavishly follow the dictates of the fashion press. We do, so she likes to believe, have a knack of choosing the best for us individually from all of those Fashion's offerings and adapting this best to our own special needs. Each year this part of the writer's boot has become the fashion for Eastern Canada. Regardless of what fashion decrees this boot will remain until the bootmaker comes up with something more practical and just as chic.

FAVORITE LOOK

The shift is still sportswear's favorite look, especially for women who find slacks unbecoming. The shift for all its air of unleashed comfort still calls for a slender figure. In my opinion, it should not be worn by any woman who needs a size larger than a sixteen. It tends to hide a multitude of figure imperfections in the smaller sizes, but it seems to magnify these faults when cut in the larger sizes.

Pleats are in—welcome back! Every woman, with less than perfect legs, will be happy to see the flattering shows of a softly full skirt again. But there are pleats and pleats! The full, butterfly pleated skirt can make even the most slender hip-line look broad and "baseball." Bet a skirt with stitched-down inverted pleats, smoothed over the hips is every woman's fashion.

Another leading fashion in this season's "Pretty Look" is the scarf dress, blouse or jacket. It can have the scarf tied in a bow under the chin, knotted in a sailor's tie or flipped carelessly over one shoulder. I heard a well-dressed woman complain this season that she feels dowdy and frumpy in her new blouse with the bow tied up around her neck. She confessed that she related these necklines to the kind her grandmother used to wear. Although she looked chic, this fashion is not for her if she does not feel chic.

If you have a question on fashion, just write Pegg Rogers care of this paper.

St. Paul's Girls' Auxiliary Presents Easter Pageant

ROSLIN — St Paul's Church hall, Roslin was the setting for the Easter program presented by the St Paul's Girls' Auxiliary on Wednesday and Thursday evenings, under the direction of their leader, Mrs Bert Gray and assistant Dianne Gean.

On entering the hall the guests were presented with a program made in the shape of a cross, along one wall the girls' work which had been done through the year was on display and included sewing, children's clothes, stuffed toys, altar linen and plastic foam articles, and a globe of the world depicting what their study book is this year.

The stage had been arranged to depict the area of Golgotha at the time of the crucifixion with the wooden cross in the background on which was the inscription "Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews".

Mrs. Bert Gray was welcomed the guests and a short worship service followed. Read by Mrs. Fraser and the G.A. members.

Rev. G. Black spoke of the work of the G.A. and expressed thanks to the leader for her leadership and dedication to this work.

Mrs. Gray spoke of this year's study book, which was entitled, "Youth and Their Problems" throughout the world. She told how it had been using the different countries as if they were visiting them and how real it had been.

Dianne Gean expressed thanks to all who had assisted to the pageant.

The girls were presented with badges for home nursing and one was presented with a music badge. These badges had been earned after taking instruction from a registered nurse and passing examinations on the course.

Two teams of girls were chosen and a Bible quiz was conducted.

The winning team on Wednesday night competed with a new team on Thursday evening. Speed and accuracy in answering the questions provided the winning team and the results were 16 to 10.

The pageant was presented in two parts with the first entitled "They Who Passed By".

The cast was as follows: Angel of Mercy — Anne Enright; Angel of Power — Wendy Howell; Naomi — Helen Mercer; Jared — Ethel Slingerland; Rachel — Donna Silliy; Paul — Barbara Johnson; Sabrina — Norma Marsels; Simeon — Mary Ward; Madras — Dianne Sills; and Barabbas — Dianne Gean.

During the presentation of the pageant the soloist, Mrs. Bev Shaw of Belleville sang several selections with Mrs. Bates as accompanist. While the cast were changing costumes for the second part of the pageant and the stage was being changed Mrs. Shaw sang a solo, with Rev. G. Black as accompanist.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

Question: When it's necessary to call someone on the 'phone for whom one does not know, or knows only slightly, what is the correct way to introduce oneself? I am concerned because I've been asked to help man the telephone pool in the nursery school my daughter attends. I know some of the parents, but I'm not familiar with the majority. Should I introduce myself as "Mrs. John Smith," or just use "Mrs. Smith," as a form of identification? — Mrs. E. F., Peterborough, Ont.

Answer: When calling other parents you would introduce yourself as "Mary Smith" and mention the name of the nursery school, so that they will know immediately at what connection you are calling.

Coroner's Jury Finds Errors In Judgment

TORONTO (CP) — After deliberating for more than two hours Friday, a coroner's jury found that errors of judgment, inadequate procedures and careless chart preparation contributed to the Dec. 3 death of three - year - old Christopher O'Kelly, who died about eight hours after removal of his tonsils and adenoids.

The jury, after studying two days' testimony regarding the death of the Toronto boy, also said there was lack of continuity and communication among members of St. Michael's Hospital staff.

Dr. Terence J. Maloney, the ear, eye, nose and throat specialist who performed the operation, said he was critical of hospital doctors for failing to notify him until the third time his patient began hemorrhaging—about six hours after the operation.

Dr. Robert E. Greenway, specialist at the University of Western Ontario at London, told the jury Friday that errors appeared to have been made in estimates of the amount of blood the child had lost.

BAD HEART STOPPAGE

Pathologist Hugh Van Patter of Toronto St. Michael's Hospital said the child died from heart stoppage resulting from loss of blood and accumulation of bloody exudate in his windpipe and bronchial tubes.

Mrs. O'Kelly, who was a nurse at St. Michael's Hospital until last August, said she took her three children, Jean, Christopher and Michael, to hospital to have their tonsils removed Dec. 3.

"About 2:15, (two, hours after the operation) Chris started vomiting and two kidney basins were partially filled," Mrs. O'Kelly told the inquest.

... told the nurse about his condition, and she replied: 'I'm surprised at a nurse worrying about this. We get it every day.'"

... The jury recommended that at the first sign of bleeding, the nurse in charge of the floor should be contacted for notifying both the attending physician and the resident staff.

It also recommended that at the first indication of primary bleeding, a blood sampling for cross - checking and typing should be taken; that a post-operative toniall room be made available for children and that it be kept under constant surveillance.

MINISTER DIES

TORONTO (CP) —Rev. William James Gatiy, 70, the first general secretary of the Canadian Council of Churches, died Friday night. After more than 30 years of United Church pastoral work in Ontario he became joint secretary of three separate inter - denominational boards in 1942 which two years later became the Canadian Council of Churches. He was to have retired in June.

INTEREST RATE RISES

Labor department officials in Ottawa announced Friday a rise to 5¼ from four per cent interest on "immediate" and group plan "deferred" federal government annuities to bring rates in line with private companies. Individual deferred annuities are unchanged. "Immediate" annuities are usually bought by persons in their 50s or 60s with a lump payment for immediate monthly returns.

ASSETS RISE SHARPLY

Assets of selected Trust and Mortgage loan companies rose sharply in the last quarter of 1963, the bureau of statistics reported Friday. The report showed a 13-per-cent jump in total assets of trust companies compared with the same period in 1962, with deposits up almost 19.5 per cent.

STORE SALES UP

Department store sales for the week ending March 21 were valued at 19 per cent above those in the same period in 1963, the bureau of statistics reported today. Part of the increase was attributed to the early date of Easter.

May Use Drug To Prevent Form Of Heart Disease

TORONTO (CP) — A drug being used in gout research may prove to be effective in preventing a form of heart disease, a University of Toronto medical researcher said Friday.

Dr. Hugh Smythe told a Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society research symposium the drug colchicine, an alkaloid—has been found to affect the blood platelets which collect around cuts in blood vessels and bring on clotting.

Toronto university research chiefs believes an irritation often associated with gout — a condition in which deposits of uric acid cause painful swelling of joints—might be caused by an inflammatory substance released from the tiny particles, or platelets, as they perform their sealing duty.

Dr. Smythe said it was believed that arteriosclerosis or hardening of the arteries, can result when unusual turbulence in the bloodstream damages a blood vessel.

"Platelets stick, silt up around the injury, harden and plug the artery," he said.

Research has indicated that antarum, besides reducing the uric acid level in the blood of gout sufferers, seems to curb release of the platelets' irritating substance, serotonin.

Dr. Smythe explained that researchers were led to investigate a possible connection between gout and heart disease through knowledge that gout victims were twice as prone to coronary illnesses and high blood pressure than other persons.

FUND IN RED

As of last Tuesday—the end of the 1962-63 fiscal year—the fund was $4,500,000 in the red, although it had some cash on hand from advance contributions for April.

Sitting in the Senate's public galleries when Senator O'Leary "resisted" was Stanley Knowles (NDP — Winnipeg North Centre) who then rushed to his office, dusted off a handwritten bill calling for the abolition of the Senate and filed it with the Commons clerk for first reading Monday.

Another NDP member, Frank Howard (Skeena), dashed to his office with a statement accusing Senator O'Leary of sole responsibility for denying unemployment benefits to thousands of unemployed in Canada.

He said the Ottawa senator acted in "a disgraceful manner which one wouldn't expect from only the most peevish and spoiled child".

Outside the chamber, Senator O'Leary said he acted on principle.

'WE SHOWED THEM'

"We showed them we could hold up a bill to point up this practice of sending the bills to the Senate at the last moment."

He said it was not vital to have fresh funds for the unemployment insurance fund, as the government contended.

In the Commons, MPs had "stopped the clock" while they awaited Senate action.

All week, the Commons had debated the final spending estimates for the last fiscal year—a $360,000,000 package. The job was still not finished when the House finally adjourned until Monday.

SHOWS SCARS

Thus Parliament goes back to work Monday with the scars of some bitter exchanges and a still-standing threat by several members that never again will they allow government bills to be hustled through their chamber.

"The government must take the responsibility of planning the business of Parliament so that never again will we see a repeat performance of this past week," said Conservative Senator George S. White, a former Speaker in the Senate.

"In future I shall refuse to be a rubber stamp for the government or the other, place (the Commons)," declared the Ontario senator.

Mr. Matchen met for 2¼ hours with Mr. Fortier after the Senate adjourned to assess the situation.

The minister told reporters afterward that some unemployment workers may be unable to collect their benefits Monday. He expected the situation would return to normal Tuesday after Senate ratification of the government loan.

One Korean soldier has died and 202 cases have been reported in South Korea. One Korean soldier has died and 202 cases have been reported in South Korea. One American serviceman has died from the disease. Serum to determine if the disease was typhoid was flown to Korea from Tokyo by the American armed forces.

Khrushchev Predicts World Communism Will Close Ranks Against Red China

By JOHN O. KOEHLER

BDAPEST (AP) — Soviet plea."

Premier Khrushchev has bitterly denounced the Communist Chinese in the strongest indication yet that the ideological breach between Moscow and Peking is too wide to close.

Khrushchev predicted that the world's Communist parties will close ranks against the Chinese and emerge from the struggle "even stronger and more hardened than before."

His new attack on the Chinese Friday coincided with Prayda's publication in Moscow of a violent condemnation of Peking and a call for a world Communist showdown conference to read the other Communist giant out of the government.

The Soviet leader, speaking at a rally on the eve of the 19th anniversary of Hungary's liberation by Russian troops, assailed the Chinese as "splitters."

He denounced "the grave danger inherent in their subversive activity within the socialist camp and the international Communist movement."

'WILL RALLY'

"There can be no doubt," Khrushchev declared, "that the Marxist - Leninist parties will rally ever closer together under the great banner of Marx-Engels - Lenin in the struggle against the (Chinese) splitters of Marxist-Leninist parties.

"They will emerge from this struggle even stronger and more hardened than before and will lead the working class, the working people, to new historic victories of socialism and Communism!"

Obviously referred to the Chinese, he asserted that "nobody will be able to divert them (pro-Moscow Communists) from the only correct Leninist road."

Khrushchev called for creation of "some organization for the correlation of foreign policy" among members of the Warsaw Pact and the Communist council for Mutual Economic Assistance.

WOULD BE OUT

This would be a legalistic method of reading Peking out of the movement because China is not a member of either organization and would be excluded from a role in the decisions of the other Communist nations.

Khrushchev also criticized the United States, charging that developments in Cyprus, South Viet Nam, Latin America and Africa showed that "imperialism, American imperialism in the first place, is the main enemy of the freedom of the peo-rival from Brazilia and introduced members of his provisional cabinet. He described his government as a "bridge between the old situation and the situation to come."

In Washington, State Secretary Dean Rusk said the United States will work with the new government on Brazil's urgent problems. Because Goulart refused to introduce austerity measures to check inflation and reduce Brazil's $2,000,000,000 foreign debt, the United States had withheld a considerable portion of the $135,000,000 promised to aid for this year.

Mazzilli said the government would use all "effective means" to bring stability to the Brazilian economy.

Under the constitution, congress must elect a president and vice - president within a month, filling out Goulart's unexpired term which was to end in January, 1966. Mazzilli, however, said he didn't know when congress would act.

Russia Will Counter U. S. Trade Formula

GENEVA (Reuters) — Soviet Foreign Trade Minister Nikolai Patolichev Friday described United States advice to needy countries to help themselves as "a rather cynical formula."

He told reporters outside the United Nations world trade and development conference in that Russia was countering the U.S. formula with one of its own.

It consisted of low - interest credits to the developing countries to finance projects which would become their own property, the Russian reported.

Accused Says 'Kickbacks' Are Legal

QUEBEC (CP) — The "custom" of paying kickbacks to intermediaries on Quebec government purchases is legal and goes back a long way in the province's history, Legislative Councillor Gerald Martineau said Friday.

Mr. Martineau, former treasurer of the Union Nationale party, was testifying in his own defence at trial on 31 fraud charges involving a total of $24,-000.

The charges were laid following a report of the Quebec royal commission which investigated the purchasing practices of the Union Nationale administration between 1955 and 1960.

Mr. Martineau said he had seen the late premier Maurice Duplessis himself enter names on the list of "intermediaries" who were to receive kickbacks.

"Mr. Duplessis . . . could not say right or dishonest, in my opinion," he said. "I know his probity."

WAS 'SLIPPING'

Crown Prosecutor Laurent Belanger remarked that Mr. Martineau was slipping if he looked to Mr. Duplessis' guidance in legal matters.

Judge Albert Dumoulin rebuked the prosecutor, asking him to show the witness more respect.

Mr. Martineau submitted as evidence a pile of old cheques which he said represented kickbacks paid by the Liberal administration of premier Adelard Godbout in 1939-44.

He also testified that he sent Premier Duplessis a list every month of persons who contributed to the Union Nationale party fund and those who got money from it.

Keep Branch Railway Lines To Handle Wheat

SASKATOON (C) — Federal Transport Minister J. W. Pickersgill said Friday there have been a second thoughts among top officials about abandoning railway branch lines since the major wheat sale to Russia and other countries in 1963.

"Very few branch lines will be abandoned quickly, especially if the wheat sales keep up," he said in an interview.

The federal government was not anxious to abandon railway lines, but the Canadian Pacific Railway was in business to make money and the government had told the Canadian National Railways not to lose money, he said.

"The government's interest is to make sure the railways serve the people and to make sure that communities which have been built up because of the railways don't have them pulled out from under them and lose the whole works."

A Lift for Living

Body Only Tool of Man's Soul So Must Be Taught to Follow

By REV. HAROLD E. KOHN

Some time ago a cartoon appeared in a national magazine showing a very little boy attempting to lead a huge St. Bernard dog on a leash. The dog was perversely protesting and insisted upon trying to drag the boy off in the opposite direction. The lad suddenly braced his feet turned upon the dog and said, by exclaimed, "Let's get this straight! You are my dog. I'm not your boy."

Some such stubbornness as the boy showed is needed by all of us. We are often hauled off in some direction we should not go by powers unworthy to be our leaders. Some of these leaders are in politics, some in education, some in religion and some in entertainment, but most often they are inside us. The beasts that tug us away from our best course are our selfishness, vagrant wishes, untamed moods, primal passions, fears, hostilities and all those other inner refusals to be what we ought to be and do what we know is best. We need the perspective of the lad with the dog, so that the soul will say to every other aspect of our human nature, "Now, let's get this straight. You belong to me and not I to you." Soul is master here. It is the ongoing thing. It has lasting reality, and should be in control.

HEARD TOO SELDOM

The word "soul" is a rich, old word that is heard too seldom these days excepting in poetry and religion. Perhaps the reason for its rare use now is that it has had so many meanings that we cannot be certain which definition another person has in mind when he is using the word; therefore the word has been dropped from some people's vocabulary for clarity's sake. Primitive people thought of soul as a shadowy, misty replica of the body, much like breath. It was capable of leaving the body during sleep and returning before a person awakened. This vaporous image of the body survived the body after death. Many Greek philosophers understood the soul to be man's essence, his life, consciousness and intelligence. Plato believed the soul existed before the body, and Aristotle taught that the body's purpose is to exist for the soul's use.

The Biblical use of the word "soul" varies from passage to passage. In the Old Testament it basically means the life principal of the living being, and it has much the same significance as our word "self." Today, the centre of urges, emotions and purposes. The New Testament uses the word "soul" in the same way. "soul" usually means the inner vitality, the life of a person that is hidden within the body, but expressed through the body. It is the centre of life's choices and the place where the decision-making decisions are made. This does not mean that soul is cut off from the Gospel of Luke. (Luke 12:15-21) His crops have been abundant and his bins and barns have overflowed with harvest. "And he said, 'I will do this: I will pull down my barns, and build larger ones; and there I will store all my grain and my goods. And I will say to my soul, Soul you have ample goods laid up for many years; take your ease, eat, drink, be merry!' But God said to him, 'Fool! This night your soul is required of you. . . .' That man's soul was in spiritual imbalance, in his decision-making part of the man that determined what would happen to his crops, his barns, his body and his destiny. The soul is that essential selfhood that is intended to lead all other aspects of our lives. We get into trouble when life's other aspects lead the soul, when more crops and more barns lead us away from God, for example.

The supreme business of life is to see that the soul is healthy and controlled by the consciousness of God, and that the soul makes the best uses of the body to advance the soul's high purposes and to fulfill its supreme possibilities. Then our primal passions become the servants of the soul rather than the soul's masters; spirit triumphs over warring forces of the flesh, holiness over sin, trust over fear, love over hostility, hope over discouragement, joy over misery and eternal life becomes victorious over time and death.

One of life's pivotal decisions comes when a soul says to the body, "Let's get this straight. You belong to me, not I to you . . . and we both belong to God."

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARTER, Sports Editor

The wily pickerel, walleyes, dore, call it what you will—it is still the tastiest morsel that ever sputtered golden-brown in a skillet—is due for an all-out invasion in Bay of Quinte waters May 1st, through May 3rd, inclusive.

May 1st is the day open season is decreed on these fishy dinners in the Bay of Quinte and up to the first dam of rivers flowing into it. The opening date includes all inland waters in Prince Edward county.

The season does not open in inland waters of the Tweed Forest District until May 15th. The catch limit in all spots is six per day.

Two years ago these Jolly Rogers of the Prince Edward County Chamber of Commerce, bearing as mailee toward M'sieu Dore et Cie, inaugurated a hook-and-line welcome by inaugurating a Fishing Derby.

The three-day relish of the picktrel preserves by Waltons from all parts of the province, resulted in a sudden depletion of the wallaye population.

The catches, some of them bankers, were enhances with handsome prizes given by the Chamber. And these boys don't spare the flaxenist horses when they shop for awards.

Take this year, fr'instance. They are offering a first prize, a Johnson motor, aluminum boat and trailer with license, worth $316.00, to the angler hauling in the biggest fish.

The runner-up receives a Johnson motor valued at $299; the place rodder gets a Remington pump gun, worth $118.

And there's a special prize to the guy that hauls in the nearest-the walleye. The smallest entry is worth a family-size tent complete.

Registration fee is one dollar for adults and fifty cents for children.

And here is an important note. The winner can come from anywhere in the county, district or province.

There was some dissatisfaction in the past two years when the sponsors declared the winner had to come from a point outside a fifty-mile radius of Picton.

A lot of county anglers refused to enter because of the chance which they felt was unfair—and rightly so—to local fishermen.

However, everything has been adjusted and, as was said, one and all entries are eligible for all prizes.

The weekend activities also include a fish fry, dancing at the Prince Edward Yacht Club and a Sportsmen's Show at the arena in the Fair Grounds.

By the way, there is a special award for the angler hauling in the largest Northern Pike. He will get a beautiful movie camera.

SHOULD BE FUN

The Picton intermediate hockey club, glimpsing the Ontario "B" championship over the not too-far-off horizon have girded their loins for a tough battle over in the county town tonight.

They tangle with the Delhi "B's", whatever that means, in the third game of the three-of-five series and can wrap up the series this evening.

According to reports the Delhi crew are a rough, rugged, body-checking bevy of boys who are not averse, as they say in the best hockey circles to "laying on the wood" on any available part of a foreman's anatomy.

Our vice-president in charge of hockey in the county says it looks like a "blood-and-thunder" battle and anything can happen, hockey or otherwise.

Davy Jones' crew was given a rugged reception in Delhi the other night and they're in no need to be trifled with. A spark can light a flame of fisticuffs that would astound fans over there should not miss what could be a bristling, battling combat.

In Florida Derby

Dancer Odds-on-Choice

MIAMI (AP) — The Gulfstream Park track record was in danger today as Northern Dancer and seven other swift six-year-olds lined up for the Florida Derby.

Record for this 1¼-mile early spring version of the Kentucky Derby is 1:48 4-5 set by Gen. Duke carrying 122 pounds in 1957. It was equalled by Day Court, a five-year-old, in 1960, under only 118 pounds.

Canadian-bred Northern Dancer, odds-on choice at 1-2 to win the $118,500 feature, and four of his rivals — Roman Brother, Dandy K., The Scoundrel and Ky. Pioneer — also carry 122 pounds, having won stake races. The others, Saltville, Ishkoodah and Greek Episode, get in with 118 pounds.

Willis Shoemaker on Northern Dancer is expected to go for the lead from his inside post position to avoid being shut off, and Greek Episode probably will go after him in the early stages.

Roman Brother, Ishkoodah and perhaps Saltville will come from off the pace while Dandy K. also is a stretch runner.

They'll be going for $78,500 top money but others close up at the finish will be richly rewarded, with $20,000 to second, $10,000 to third, $7,000 to fourth and $3,000 to fifth.

There were 85 nominations and the eight to see action today are the best of the lot except for Hill Rise, who shipped from California to Kentucky.

H. A. Levy, trainer for Tony Amonte's Windfields Farm, said he plans to ship Northern Dancer to Keeneland after the Florida Derby and, if all goes well, start in the Blue Grass next.

Depend On 'Needlers' ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Canadiens To Play Minus Beliveau

By JOE DUPUIS

MONTREAL (CP)—There are a lot of little guys on the lineup of the rookie-laden Montreal Canadiens and a lot of big guys on the roster of the star-studded Toronto Maple Leafs.

And therein may lie the tale of a Stanley Cup playoff.

Some of the little Montreal guys, trying to relax in the team's Laurentian Mountain hideout Friday, suspect that the big, bad Leafs will use their weight to bring the lighter Habs down in the fifth game of their best-of-seven series here tonight.

One of the most vociferous of these is Claude Provost, who stands a stubborn 165 pounds patrolling right wing for the Habs "needling" line.

"I know their idea is to play it rough in the first period to put us down because we're not as heavy as they are." Provost said. "That's what they're going to do. But we're going to take them right back.

He, and other pint-sized Hab players such as Henri Richard, Billy Hicke and Bobby Rousseau, have been credited by coach Toe Blake as the guys who have been "needling" the Leafs into costly mistakes.

SAYS NEEDLING HELPED

It was this kind of needling, says Hicke, that enabled the Canadiens to beat Toronto 3-2 in the dying minutes of the third game.

Now, as the team's get set for the 5th game tied with two wins each, Blake may have to depend on his "needlers."

Big Jean Beliveau, the vet-eran centre having one of his finest seasons, is out of action with an injured knee. X-rays today will determine if the big fellow will be out for the rest of the season, or able to play next week. It could be that he will miss the rest of the Toronto series.

Blake earlier lost Gilles Tremblay, high scoring left winger, who played only one game of the series. The Canadiens have summoned Claude Larose, a right winger from Omaha of the Central Pro League who saw some action with the club during the regular season.

But Blake says he will use Ralph Backstrom as centre between Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion and John Ferguson in place of Beliveau.

Leafs arrived in the city by train Friday night and took up their usual lodgings in a town-town hotel. They reported a healthy squad.

After tonight's game, the teams move to the Gardens for the sixth game Tuesday. If a seventh is needed, it will be played next Thursday in Montreal. Said Leaf coach Punch Imlach on the team's departure for Montreal Friday: "As long as we don't lose the last game we play, I'll be happy."

Two of the games in the series so far have been periods spectaculars. The teams amassed 31 penalties, a record for Stanley Cup play, in the opener in Montreal, won by the Canadiens 2-0. Thursday night, they piled up 30 penalties in a game Leafs won 5-3 to even the series.

Beliveau's knee was injured in that game when he was boarded heavily by Toronto's Eddie Shack.

Henri Richard sported a five-stitch gash over his right eyebrow, another gift of Shack, who butted him with his head like a bull moose during the first period brawl of Thursday's game.

"That's one way of getting hurt," Richard said, patting the wound gingerly. "Did you see the way Shack hit him?" said Ferguson, himself quite a hard-rock.

Provost said Leaf defencemen Carl Brewer started the big Brawl by charging Richard. "He started everything, then he ran away, that guy," said Provost. "I can't understand him."

Blake's summation of the fourth game was that the Leafs beat his team because they had the better power-play team. "We played well for about 25 minutes," he said. "In fact, we were outplaying them until they got those two quick goals in the second period. Two, or three of our guys got out of position and they got the goals."

LIONS LODGE PROTEST

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions accused Winnipeg Blue Bombers Friday of violating regulations governing the Western Football Conference's Canadian equalization fund. Herb Capozzi, Lions general manager, said the 5-2 club has filed an official protest with commissioner Sydney Halter, and has advised him that Lions will oppose any selection by Winnipeg of a B.C. player. Capozzi said "we have proof that not only did Winnipeg have some one contact one of our players, but they also advised this player as to the names of other players on the (unprotected) list.

Trenton Team In OABA Hoop Finals Today

Trenton Wilson Concrete will be battling for the OABA Intermediate "B" basketball championship in a day-long tournament being held in Oakville today.

Champions from four different districts are taking part. Trenton holds the Eastern crown since they have the only Intermediate "B" club in this area. Other clubs are from North Bay, Waterdown and Aylmer.

The tournament got under way this morning at nine o'clock with Trenton meeting Aylmer and North Bay clashing with Waterdown. The two winning teams and the two losing clubs meet in the 1.00 p.m. round while the finals are slated for seven o'clock this evening.

A rather odd arrangement has winners of "C" and "D" rounds meeting for the crown. Thus a team could lose its first game this morning but still win the Ontario championship.

Included in the Trenton lineup are four Belleville players, Terry McGee, Warren Whitley, Don Smith and Doug Rose.

Trenton captured the Intermediate "C" championship last fall but moved up a notch this year. The club prepared itself for playdowns with a number of exhibition games during the winter months.

UFL BID WITHDRAWN

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto group seeking a franchise in the United Football League has withdrawn its application, a spokesman said Friday. Jack Turrall said the group decided on the move when it found it impossible to organize television coverage of the games.

By JACK SULLIVAN

Canadian Press Sports Editor

CHICAGO (CP) — Coach Sid Abel of Detroit Red Wings has been applauded in many bowls, edgeable hockey circles as the shrewd fellow. He deserves the plaudits.

Before the current Detroit-Chicago best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final series started, he mentioned that the Alex Delvecchio line would be sent against Chicago's big three-some. In other words, right-winger Gordie Howe would be assigned the job of handling the Hawks' Bobby Hull.

This shaped up as a showdown between Howe, the game's acknowledged superstar, and Hull, the blonde bomber who is tabbed as Howe's successor as king of the National Hockey League.

Today, as the two teams get ready for Sunday's fifth game at Chicago Stadium with the series tied at two games apiece, many experts say that the 36-year-old Howe has overshadowed his 25-year-old rival. The statistics back them up.

HULL STARTED WELL

Hull won the initial scrimmage 10 days ago when the Hawks whipped the Wings 4-1 in the series opener here. He repeatedly broke away from Howe and observers said at the time that the "old pro" may have lost his touch. How were wrong.

Since then the man who keeps rewriting the NHL record books has effectively shackled Hull, a 43-goal scorer during the season. The Hawk winger has been outgunned and outhustled.

To date Hull hasn't scored a goal in the series. The best he has been able to do was to collect four assists. Howe has scored two goals, assisted on three others and has been the leader of the Wings.

Hull logged nearly 40 minutes in each of the second and third games when the Hawks lost 5-4 and 3-0. In Thursday's fourth game, which Chicago won 3-2 in overtime, he appeared to be tiring and took little more than his normal shift except for crisis faceoffs.

A year ago, when the Wings disposed of the highly favored Hawks in six games in the semi-finals, Hull scored eight goals. Howe wasn't content to cower him and Abel remembered the omission.

SEEMS DEFINITELY OUT

His strategy has paid off to date, but the Wings are in trouble.

Goalkeeper Terry Sawchuk, the NHL's shutout king with a career total of 96 in regular season play, is, according to Abel "definitely out of Sunday's game due to a recurrence of an ailment in his left shoulder." It has been diagnosed as a pinched nerve.

This means the Wings will go with Roger Crozier, a victim of Chicago's overtime victory Thursday. That was his first appearance in cup play. He took over early in the second period and appeared to be fit-tery the remainder of the game.

Apart from Sawchuk, the Wings were reported to be in good physical condition. The Hawks, though, have defenceman Elmer Vasko in hospital for observation after the 210-pound defencemen developed a rash and swelling on his right thigh.

The Moose may have bought with a stick, or a puck or a knee in Thursday's game," said manager Tommy Ivan. "We don't know what the problem is. It may be a boil or some other infection but, in any case we want it arrested as quickly as possible."

Vasko is expected to dress for the fifth game.

Goderich Tournament Bars Don Mills

Result Of Brawl

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Young Canada Week pee-wee hockey tournament moved to Goderich Friday, but the first game brought by Scarborough Lions had to take a back seat to other developments.

Tourn a m e n t officials announced they have barred future entries from the Toronto suburb of Don Mills after a last night fight during Don Mills' 4-1 loss to Scarborough Thursday.

Don Mills coach Bill Rainbow wasted few words in his comment on the action.

"The whole thing is ridiculous," he said, denying reports of a "brawl" in the final minutes of the game. He said the team "didn't deserve the suspension, so I'll choose to ignore it."

The organizers of the team made no comment.

Despite the controversy, Scarborough had little trouble winning the title, downing Peterborough 4-1 in the semi-final and defeating Winnipeg by the same score in the final. Winnipeg had tied Sarnia 3-3 in their semi-final, but advanced to the final on the basis of a better shots-on-goal average.

In earlier play, Streetsville advanced to the B series semi-finals with wins over Oakridge, 3-2, and Tillsonburg, 4-1, in C series action. Dracken blanked Point Edward 3-0, Harriston shut out Norwich 4-0 in the B s e r i e s, Virginiatown dumped Lucknow 4-1 and Ayr trounced Virginiatown 7-2. Dundas, Hanktown and Ayr advanced into the semi-finals.

The other Goderich games saw Tillsonburg turn back St. Mary's 6-1 in B series action and Dracken blank Point Edward 3-0 in C series action.

Teams from Trenton, Toronto Fasalina and Toronto Dorset Park won their respective divisions titles in the section of play at the Little NHL tournament in Orillia.

Trenton in the NHL crown with a 9-1 victory over the Fasalina NHL entry. The Fasalina AHL team beat Orillia 5-3 for their victory and Dorset Park dumped Orillia 8-1 for the Junior A championship.

In A section quarter-final play teams from North Bay went undefeated to advance into semi-final play here today. North Bay NHL shaded Peterborough 3-1, North Bay AHL blanked Peterborough 3-0 and North Bay Junior A trounced Peterborough 5-3.

Today's windup of the eight-day Brampton hockey festival vice tournament will have an international flavor as Toronto St. Robinson meets Detroit for the A group championship.

Bart Robinson made it to the finals with a pair of triumphs over another Toronto entry, Don Mills, 3-0 and 3-1. Detroit blanked Winnipeg in two outings 6-0 and 5-0.

B series winners were Barrie and Oakridge Acres. Barrie edged Brampton 3-2 and then blanked Islington 3-0. Oakridge shutout Leamington 3-0 in the first game, lost the second 2-1 but won the third goal.

In D s e ries play, Woodbridge and Elmvale both advanced to the finals. Woodbridge defeated New Hamburg 5-1 and 3-1 while Elmvale split with Port Perry, winning 5-4 and losing 2-1. Elmvale qualified with a 7-3 edge in goals.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., won the Amer i c a n championship with a 9-4 win over Detroit while Winnipeg downed St. Michel, Que., to take the East-West title.

Glanworth in the D series and Garson in the B series won division titles in the Georgetown International bantam tournament. Glanworth defeated Hespeler 6-2 and Garson coasted Galt 3-1.

In A division play, Winnipeg took the championship with 9-3 and 7-4 victories over West Kildonan, Markham and Leamington still tied in the finals in C series. Markham qualified by dumping Georgetown 6-1 and then tying 3-3 with the latter. Leamington won out on a 6-5 edge in goals, losing 5-3 and winning 3-1 in a pair of games with Milton.

Collingwood, Newmarket and Midland were big winners at Parry Sound's Little NHL provincial tournament, each winning two games in their respective divisions.

In the NHL series, Collingwood tinned back Clarkes 4-1 and blanked Wilsons 3-0. Newmarket took top honors in the AHL, edging Cobourg 2-1 and trouncing Parry Sound 5-2. Midland dumped Parry Sound 6-1 and shaded Wilsons 2-1 in Junior A play.

Other Parry Sound action saw Parry Sound defeat Newmarket 4-3 and Huntsville whitewash Merriston 5-0 in the NHL; Collingwood dumped Agincourt 6-1 and Pensteing shutout Merriston 3-0 in the AHL; and Newmarket shaded Agincourt 4-3 and Huntsville blanked Merriston 3-0 in the Junior A series.

Rodriguez Outboxes Jesse Smith

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — Luis Rodriguez mixed his lightning-like speed with years of ringsmanship to earn a unanimous decision over Jesse Smith of Philadelphia in a listless 10-round fight Friday night.

For Rodriguez it was his 56th ring victory in 69 appearances. The former Cuban fighting out of Miami outboxed the Philadelphia boy all the way.

Nobody was hurt seriously in the dancing duel, although Rodriguez suffered a cut over his right an eye. It was quickly patched up.

Smith, one-time sparring partner for Sonny Liston when the former heavyweight boxing champion was looking for speedy opponent, came out somewhat stiff after taking unlimited jabs to the face and body.

There were no knockdowns and if the television audience saw Smith go down in the fifth it was because he slipped, went to his knees and was up before referee Jimmy Peerless could begin counting.

Says Campbell Leaf-Hab Series Just Rugged

MONTREAL (CP) — Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, said today that the Montreal Canadiens semi-final between Montreal Canadiens and Toronto Maple Leafs has been "a spectacular clean series so far, if rugged." He said it was not dirtied by the astronomical penalty totals piled up in the four games, including Thursday's game in Toronto and the opening game last Thursday in Montreal, which Canadiens won 4-0 at all to any special punitive action.

Campbell said the calibre of officiating in the current Canadiens-Leafs series has been "exceptionally good."

The referees had called a lot of penalties "but that indicates to me that they are sharp."

It was "a chippy series with a lot of small fouls" but the referees remained in control of the situation.

Top Woodstock 6-4

Alouettes Win Opener

NORANDA, Que. (CP) — Rouyn-Noranda Alouettes Friday took a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven Ice Canada Alias Cup semi-final series by dumping Woodstock Athletics 6-4.

The Alouettes won the Northern Ontario Hockey Association senior finals while Woodstock won out in the Ontario Hockey Association series.

Rollie Paradis and Larry Pilement paced the Als with two goals each. Ray Carpentier and playing-coach Jerome McGuire added one each.

Woodstock marksmen were Beryl Elrick, Ron Mason, Bic Cairns and Jack McIntyre.

Alouettes appeared nervous in the opening period and fell behind 2-0. They settled down to nine doubles and 13 runs scored. He is tied for the lead in triples with two and his 31 blue mark ties behind Carl Yastrzemski, the American League batting champion, and Frank Malzone, who each have 38.

He's batting an unspectacular .306, but 15 of his hits have been for extra bases, giving him a .548 slugging percentage.

Conigliaro, only in his second year of professional baseball, appears somewhat unconvinced by everything that is happening to him.

"Every time I see my name in the batting order," he said, "I run to the outfield as fast as I can to get out the manager's sight. I want to get out of the manager's sight. I don't want to give him a chance to change his mind if he sees me."

At the same time the shortstop, three, 185-pound youngster remains confident. A best his chances once the regular season starts.

"I don't have any kinks or something American League pitching, but neither do I have any ideas of their murderous ways."

In other exhibition action, Carl Willey suffered a complete compound fractured jaw as he helped pitch New York Mets to a 9-1 victory over Detroit Tigers. Don Drysdale pitched his first complete spring game in for Los Angeles Dodgers' 13-2 triumph against Cincinnati Reds.

Baltimore Orioles bombed Whitey Ford and the New York Yankees 8-4, scoring five runs in the first inning. San Francisco Giants beat Cleveland Indians 6-5 in the ninth straight time, 5-3 behind Orlando Cepeda's two home runs and four RBI.

Washington edged Chicago white Sox 4-3 through the Senators' Claude Osteen had his seventeen inning streak stopped and Pittsburgh Pirates to a 13-5 victory over St. Louis Cardinals with a first-inning three - run homer.

Wes Covington's two - run homer helped Philadelphia Phillies edge Kansas City Athletics 5-4, and Minnesota Twins trampled Milwaukee 13-5, halting the Braves' 10-game winning streak against American League teams.

Dodgers Win, Yanks Lose

Bosox Rookie Sets Torrid Pace

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

At the age of 18, most kids are stumbling around trying to find a job or are batting their way through American English.

Tony Conigliaro, at the same age, is powering 415 was through major league opposition into permanent employment as a freshman starter with Boston Red Sox.

The rookie outfielder continued his torrid spring pace Friday, knocking in two runs on the winning tally in the 12th, as Boston nipped Los Angeles Angels 3-2.

The way the Red Sox have been going, Conigliaro looks at out of place as Cary Grant in Bonnie Bowers.

He leads Boston with 16 runs batted in, four home runs,

Sammy Snead Clings To Lead

In Greensboro Open

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Jimmy Stead, a wisened, 50-year-old veteran of the fairways, has been caddying for Sam Snead for some 25 years in this area.

Between them they've lived more than a century. Snead still be 52 next month.

A pretty handy man with a golf club himself, Stead was in command of the tourney lead in his three-stroke lead through the second round of the $35,000 Greensboro Open golf event.

Snead's par 71 after a faltering beginning gave him a 133 total for the 36 holes played over Julius Boros and Bill Dunk going into today's third round of the 72-hole tournament.

Slamming Sammy is after his eighth Greensboro victory, starting back with the first one in 1938.

But Snead was going to have to tend to business on the 7,000-yard Sedgefield Country Club course.

Jack Nicklaus jumped from an 11th-place tie into fourth at 138 with four shots back.

HAD UNUSUAL ROUND

Snead had what he called one of the most unusual rounds he ever played en route to his 71. He played the back nine first, then the out-and-back field of 130. He went one over par on the 10th and 12th holes, then brought back with four birdies to balance them and two later holes where he needed an ex tra stroke.

"After that start, I played well and finished to end up even par and still three shots ahead," Snead said.

Back of the top four came Bob Shave, Larry Mowry, Al Geiberger and Al Johnston of Monticello, Ill.

Johnston fired a 71 Friday to go with his first-round score of 69.

The other Canadians in the tournament had bad days. Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg had a 77 and a two-round total of 145.

Toronto's Al Balding and Gerry Magee and Vancouver's Dick Leonard failed to survive the second-round cut.

Wellington Midgets Beaten 6-3

PICTON (Staff) — Belmont Cruisers, using their extra ice speed to good advantage, defeated Wellington 6-3 before 300 fans last night to clinch a tie in the first game of the OMHA Midget "D" finals.

Second game in the best-of-three series is slated for Belmont next Saturday night.

The Wellington boys appeared a trifle leg-weary in the opening stanza and fell behind 2-0 in the opening stanza. It was a 5-3 score going into the third when Belmont added the only goal.

Leo Farquhar was the pick of the Cruisers and earned three of the winner's goals.

Lavender, one of the top Wellington stars, played a strong game, despite a badly bruised ankle received in his club's previous game.

Belmont collected eight of the game's 13 penalties.

Leafs Will Air All Away Games

TORONTO (CP) — If radio stations are willing, Maple Leaf Gardens will be broadcast free of its hockey team's out - of - town games next season on a coast-to-coast network.

President Stafford Smythe announced plans Friday to provide radio coverage of the 34 National Hockey League away games of Toronto Maple Leafs over a network of stations that but said only CFRB Toronto has agreed so far.

Dan A. Poyntz, arranging the venture for the Gardens, said no other stations have been approached "because we first decided to keep the plan secret until details could be worked out and a sponsor found."

Smythe said the "Newfoundland to - Pacific network" was the result of negotiations from "a tremendous number" of hockey fans across the country.

Poyntz said he expects no trouble in lining up stations in all 10 provinces. He said 30 stations is the target, "but that's neither a minimum nor a maximum."

He said details will be announced at the conclusion of the present Stanley Cup finals.

Thoroughbred Race Season Opens Today

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP) — Canada's 1964 thoroughbred racing season starts today when the horses will be on the line running at Fort Erie race track.

When the season is over in November it will have 126 racing days—the Jockey Club Limited will have distributed $4,500,000 in purses to the racing hopeful thoroughbred owners.

The initial 36-day spring meeting will have a total purse of $466,000, which includes $22,500 added money offered in the Bold Venture, Queenston and Vigil Stakes, three of the 70 stake races scheduled this season.

Canadian racing received a shot in the arm last year when E. P. Taylor's Northern Dancer defeated the best thoroughbreds the United States had to offer.

This season, Grand Garson, owned by Frank Sherman of Hamilton, could stand the turf world on its ear. The big bay three-year-old will compete at Fort Erie, then head for Louisville for the Kentucky Derby.

For Olympics Proven Athletes Needed

TORONTO (CP) — Frank J. Shaughnessy, chief of mission representative at the 1964 Olympics at Innsbruck, Austria said today Canada needs not only athletes of proven international calibre to the Olympics.

Speaking to the Canadian Olympic Association committee, he said:

"If we don't think that when our best men are unable to go, that they be replaced by athletes who don't have the ability to compete in a world competition, just to fill the position allotted to that team."

"I don't think that we are being too rigid in restricting positions on the Olympic Canada team to those who have the potential of finishing in the first half of the field."

On Canada's future in Olympic hockey, Shaughnessy said: "My Father (David) Bauer, has the answer to our problem on how to win the Olympic hockey gold medal and hope the hockey association executive (the Canadian Amateur Association) will continue to carry out a program for 1968 similar to that which was organized for Innsbruck."

Father Bauer proved to be a fine leader and his confidence and inspiration were felt throughout all Canadian teams at the Olympic Village, he said.

London Jrs. Defeat Waterloo 5-3

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — London Nationals picked up an early 4-1 lead and then held off a late rally by Waterloo to defeat the Sixties All Stars 5-3 and win the best-of-seven provincial Junior B hockey title.

Walt McKechnie, Gilles St. Jacques, Larry Davenport, Mike Laughton and Jim Glanfield scored for London. Jim Lorentz, Bruce Dodg and Gary Phillips counted for the Siskins.

The crown of 8,500 lifted at Queen's Park last year, was defended in 26 home games for the Nationals. The next games in the series will be played in Waterloo, with the fourth back here Monday.

Big Angie Stands Out For Charity

MONTREAL (CP) — Angie Mosca is no more docile a performer on a hockey rink than on a football field.

But he's considerably less effective.

Anyway Angie is not the type of fellow that can be ignored and he was a focal figure in the hijinks Friday at the "Stanley Cup Party" game.

It's a charity affair—proceeds to the Red Cross and Combined Health Appeal — featuring Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference against other football opposition — in a hockey game.

The Als thumped Hamilton Tiger-Cats 8-3-1 Friday.

Hamilton's half - goal was the result of a penalty shot awarded Moses by referee Red Storey. Said Storey: "Well, he gave it half an effort."

Kingston Ousts Burlington

KINGSTON (CP) — Ron Earl and Garry MacMillan scored two goals each to lead Kingston Junior Frontenacs to a 12-1 win over Burlington Mohawks here Friday night. Kingston had their best-of-seven quarter final series in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A playdowns.

Kingston opens best-of-seven semi-finals play against Weston Dodgers here today and the teams meet in Weston Monday.

Barry White, Guy White, Don Smith and Kerry Baker rounded out the other Kingston goals. Ron Blais of Burlington spoiled Ned Perry's shutout bid at 17:03 of the third period.

MANITOBA WINS

VANCOUVER (CP) — John McCorriter of Winnipeg Friday won the Dominion firemen's championship of the decathalon at the British Columbia rink of Pat Stanberg from Salmon Arm 114.

Effects To Show In Ten Years

WATERLOO (CP) — Geoffrey Dyson, director of the Royal Canadian Legion sports training plan, says it will take Canada 10 years before the effects of the plan will start to show.

Dyson, a former coach of the English national track and field team, took over the Legion post a little more than a year ago and has since travelled 30,000 miles back and forth across Canada conducting clinics and lecturing.

He was interviewed at a track and field clinic at the University of Waterloo.

Dyson said: "I think there is a fine group of track and field athletes in this country. Two or three of them stand a good chance to win gold medals at the Olympic games this fall in Tokyo."

He said it is always a great burden to be "proved" in an Olympic event.

"It's best to go in unknown and you don't have the burden on your shoulders. Many find it handicap when people are counting on them to win."

HELD OVER

"THE CARDINAL"
Otto Preminger

It was Thomas Wolfe who once suggested that a wanderer away from home should avoid disillusionment and never "go home again." Otto Preminger did just that when, after many years, he returned to his birthplace, Vienna, to direct an important episode in his latest Columbia Pictures release, "The Cardinal," based on Henry Morton Robinson's novel and now being held over at the Park Theatre in Panavision and Technicolor. If anything, Preminger's return to Vienna was rather triumphant, the record of his early achievement there and his accomplishments in America are pretty well known to the young and old of Vienna.

Filming of "The Cardinal" also took Mr. Preminger and his company of players and technicians to New England, Vienna, Rome and Hollywood. But his most gratifying personal experience was to find himself once again in Vienna where he began his theatrical career at the age of 17 as Lysander in Max Reinhardt's production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

There were few "old friends" around for him to meet, but the city itself was still very much the Vienna of the waltz and the warmth, the "gemuetlichkeit" of its people. It was the city in which Max Reinhardt appointed Preminger producer-director—at the age of 21—of Vienna's Theatre in Der Josefstadt. A string of successes followed, and then New York theatre and Hollywood film offers began to reach Preminger.

Preminger pioneered in the present film world policy of setting up his own company and working independently. He made New York rather than Hollywood the centre of his production activities, and has a policy of making one picture at a time with a personal care that reflects his theatre experiences in Europe and motion pictures in Hollywood. This contributed considerably to his outstanding independent productions, such films as "The Moon Is Blue," "Carmen Jones," "The Man With the Golden Arm," "Bonjour Tristesse," "Anatomy of a Murder," "Exodus," and "Advise and Consent."

The screenplay for "The Cardinal," Preminger's latest work was written by Robert Dozier. It tells the story of a young American who rises to the eminence of Prince of the Church in the period encompassed by the two World Wars. It stars Tom Tryon in the title role, Romy Schneider, Carol Lynley, Jill Hayworth, Raf Vallone, John Saxon, Josef Meinrad, Burgess Meredith, Oasis Davis, Dorothy Gish, Tullio Carminati, Maggie McNamara, Bill Hayes and Cecil Kellaway and John Huston also stars as Cardinal Glennon. Bobby (Morse) and his Adorables are also in the film.

See "The Cardinal" from the beginning tonight at 8.15 and 9.15 p.m. Monday one showing only at 8.15 p.m.

Aces Sting Hornets By 6-2 Score

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pittsburgh Hornets are reaping long on goaltenders and short on victories in their American Hockey League playoff battle with Quebec.

The Aces took a 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven Calder Cup event - final set Friday, bombing Pittsburgh's second- and third-string goalies 6-2.

They beat regular guardian Roger Crozier 3-2 in Wednesday's overtime opener between the AHL's regular season champs in the Eastern and Western divisions.

Crozier's subsequent recall by Detroit of the National Hockey League put alternate Hank Bassen on the spot Friday night but Bassen lasted only 21 minutes before giving way to Joe Daley.

BASSEN SHAKY

Bassen, somewhat shaky in his first appearance in two months, gave up four goals and turned away 22 glue Quebec blds. Daley, up from Johnstown of the Eastern League, stopped 17 of 19 shots over the final period and a half.

The series shifts to Pittsburgh for Sunday's third game and the Hornets are sure of one thing—Crozier won't be available. Roger will be minding the Red Wings' cage in their Stanley Cup tilt with Chicago.

Five Quebec players shared in Friday's rout. Cleland Mortson led the way with a pair of unassisted goals. Bill Hosken, Ed Hoekstra, Skippy Burchell and Leon Rochefort were the other marksmen.

John MacMillan and Lowell MacDonald scored for Pittsburgh.

In quarter - final games tonight Providence is at Hershey and Rochester at Cleveland. The Reds and Bears are even at 1-1 in their best-of-three series while Cleveland leads Rochester 1-0.

Junior Players Suspended

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—C. G. (Pat) Patterson, president of the Ontario Hockey Association, Friday announced suspension of one London Nationals player and two Waterloo Siskins following a fracas in the final seconds of their OHS Junior B playoff game opener at Waterloo Wednesday.

Jack Kilne of Siskins was given a three-game suspension while Darryl Edestrand of the Nationals and Ron Beacom of Siskins will be out for two two games.

All three received match penalties Wednesday. Kilne struck Nationals' forward Gord Shuttleworth to the ice and tried to kick him with his skates. Beacom sprang a punch at London's Dave Del Faps and fought with Edestrand.

Dramatic Role May Get Uncle Miltie an Emmy

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Uncle Miltie's getting serious again!

After CBS television announced it was running a segment of The Defenders about schizoid because the network believes they have an Emmy dramatic performance from Milton Berle, I called the comedian in Las Vegas.

"Yes, it's true," he admitted. "I play a night club comic with suicidal tendencies. I have often died on stage but this will be the first time that I ever tried dying offstage. It's called Die Laughing."

It always surprises people that Berle can be so good a serious actor.

Berle reminded me he started in show business as an actor with Pearl White in The Perils of Pauline.

HOLLYWOOD UNKNOWN

"We shot them on Long Island because no one—except a couple of orangoo—had ever heard of Hollywood."

Berle's segment airs April 11. He had to get written permission from NBC television to appear on another network.

"My exclusive contract (at $125,000 a year) doesn't expire until 1961. Then, some of the jokes I'm using now will be new again."

NAMED BBC CHAIRMAN

LONDON (AP) — Lord Normanbrook was named Thursday to fill the newly created post of chairman of the BBC. Normanbrook, 61, was secretary to the cabinet from 1947 to 1962, serving under four prime ministers — Lord Attlee, Sir Winston Churchill, Lord Avon (then Sir Anthony Eden) and Harold Macmillan.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21)—Avoid scattering your forces. Finish one thing at a time. Tendency is to try expanding in too many directions. Obtain advice you regard before making major move. Catch up on correspondence.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 - Jan. 20)—Be a careful observer. Information gained today could prove of immense value. Piece together bits of information. Facts now closer to the surface. Come up with complete story.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 - Feb. 19)—Cycle high. Spotlight on personal appearance, abilities. Get past the secretary today and see the boss. Hence, don't waste time with intermediates. State case "at top."

Pisces (Feb. 20 - Mar. 20)—Emphasize ideas which make use of current possessions. Economize — avoid waste. Highlight quality rather than flash. Be ready to co-operate with family member.

WOMAN APPOINTED

ROME (AP) — The Italian government Friday appointed a woman director of the state-owned telephone company. Eugenia Grilli, a doctor in engineering, is the first woman director in any large Italian state-operated agency. She is a widow.

Point Anne

POINT ANNE — Mr. and Mrs. Milton Alkey and family spent Good Friday with his mother, Mrs. Percy Alkey at Camilton.

Mrs. Ray Gilmour and Mrs. Jennie Charlton are patients in the Belleville General Hospital. Also Mr. Ed Fraser who fortunately lived here.

Sympathy of the community is extended to Mrs. John McConnell in the loss of her husband, Mr. John McConnell who passed away suddenly Saturday in Belleville. Mr. and Mrs. McConnell lived in Point Anne for many years before his retirement when they moved to Belleville. He was employed at the Canada Cement Co. as a foreman.

Pea Crop To Be Increased By 400 Acres

PICTON (Staff) — The Baxter Canning Company plans on having an extra 400 acres of peas grown under contract this year, to help offset the frozen food market.

Last year the company contracted 1,100 acres for canning purposes, this 400 acres will be in addition to this. The peas for freezing will be threshed in the county and transported to the company's soon-to-be-erected chilling shed at Trenton Cold Storage.

The Cold Storage will quick freeze and store the peas after they have been graded, blanched and chilled in the Baxter addition to the storage facilities.

Baxters report the entire 1964 pea average has been completely contracted.

FOR COMMUNITY WORK

The Picton Kinsmen Club are going to be busy this summer. They plan on raising money for community work by the sale of brooms at $1. each including tax.

The club ordered 1,000 brooms in order that they might be able to sell them at such a low price. It is hoped the brooms will be delivered in time for the club to start canvassing, selling brooms, on Tuesday, April 7.

shipping operations and bred violence.

Unity of effort was a major theme of the union-trustee automation.

The trustees are to continue to exercise their powers but "continued close relations will be maintained" between the SIU of Canada, an independent union, and the SIU of North America, affiliated with the AFL-CIO.

The peace plan envisages a co-operative effort by the maritime industry of Canada and the United States "to solve any and all differences on the Great Lakes."

RE-INTEGRATION EFFORT

It also involves an attempt to re-integrate the SIU of Canada with the Canadian Labor Congress. The SIU was expelled from the CLC in 1956 for union raiding.

The trouble along the lakes won public attention with the harassment of Canadian ships in U.S. ports.

The harassment started when the CLC set up the CMU to combat the SIU.

The raiding activities of which Congress accused the SIU were said to have affected two other maritime unions operating in the area, the National Association of Marine Engineers and the Canadian Merchant Service Guild, both affiliated with the CLC.

The CMSG claimed the raiding was unsuccessful as far as its locals were concerned. The N.A.M.E. was eliminated from the Great Lakes labor scene.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

Question—We are planning our first trip to Florida. Could you give me the name of a hotel or motel where we could stay in Miami, one that is not too expensive and where our money is accepted at par?—Mrs. D. R., Belleville.

Answer—There is one reasonably-priced hotel in Miami area that takes Canadian money at par. It's the Sarrento, next door to the Fountainbleu, Miami Beach. For complete listings write the Chamber of Commerce in Miami and Miami Beach.

Question—We are planning a trip to Halifax and would like to know the best route, the Canadian, or the American, also the quickest, and how many miles from Belleville. — E. M., Belleville.

Answer—Both routes are good but the quickest way to reach Halifax would be the American route crossing over to Cornwall and on to No. 37 to No. 11 to Rouses Point, down No. 7 to Burlington to No. 2 all the way to Bangor, Maine, then No. 1 to St. John, No. 2, from there to Moncton and Amherst, then No. 6 and No. 2 to Halifax. You can return if you have time by the Trans-Canada Highway No. 2 from Halifax to Moncton, Fredericton, Edmundston, Riviere du Loup to Levis, the south side of Quebec and then take No. 9 to Highway No. 3, just south of Montreal, continue on No. 3 to Valleyfield, cross over to No. 2 and home.

The distance to Halifax by the Trans-Canada route is approximately 1,175 miles and by the American route approximately 1045 miles.

Question—When will the Chesapeake Bay Bridge - Tunnel be opened at the mouth of Chesapeake Bay, and how long is it? Also would you know the rates?—O. W., Trenton.

Answer—The opening date of 17.5 mile highway across the mouth of Chesapeake Bay has been scheduled for April 15th, 1964. The rates will be $4 for the car and driver and 50c for each passenger. Virginia 166 has been completed as a 4-lane divided highway from the Bridge-Tunnel to U.S. 13. The Bridge-Tunnel Commission is a mixed bag.

Question—We would like to make a trip to Washington to see the National Cherry Blossom Festival. Could you please give me information as to the opening date.—Miss M. M., Picton.

Answer—This year's Cherry Blossom Festival opens in Washington April 7, continuing until April 12. . . In addition, other important events, pageants and convention will take place along with the usual spring tourist traffic.

Question—We would like to know where we can get a map of the World's Fair and can you tell us what date it opens?—F. McK., Belleville.

Answer—If you would call your local Ontario Motor League—Canadian Automobile Association office it would be pleased to give you a map. The fair will be open April 22 to October 18, 1964, and April 21 to Oct. 17, 1965.

Has Charles Adopted Beatle Cut?

LONDON (AP)—Has Prince Charles adopted the Beatle cut?

The 15-year-old heir to the throne, who took a fair trip, pet and twists rather fab (fabulous to you), returned from a school in Scotland Thursday night.

As he strode into the wind at London Airport, his dark-ish hair came down over his eyes Beatle style. It stayed in the familiar droop as he climbed into a royal sedan.

Was it really a Beatle hair-cut?

Yes, said Beatle fans.

No, said squares in gallant rear-guard defence.

Squares pointed out that Charles had been exposed to clippers and abarry in the rear, especially along the neck line. It was just the wind blowing on Charles' fairly long frontlocks, they said.

A spokesman for palace attaches, who saw pictures of the prince in the London morning newspapers, said:

"We really don't know if it's a Beatle haircut or not. Doesn't look it from the rear or the sides perhaps. And we really can't ask, now can we?"

Wholesale Price Of Sugar Down 25 Cents Bag

MONTREAL (CP) — Three major Montreal sugar refiners Friday announced a 25-cent decrease in the wholesale price of sugar to $13.50 a 100-pound bag.

The first price change by the three refineries — Canada and Dominion, St. Lawrence and Atlantic—was a 45-cent increase Wednesday to $13.54 a 100-pound bag.

The price of sugar has changed 36 times this year—19 decreases and nine increases. A year ago the price was $11.85. In 1963 the price changed 37 times—22 increases and 25 decreases.

Harassed Men With Government Grants

Hark! How the Universities Clamor!

By CARL MOLLINS

TORONTO (CP)—Five harried men assigned to assess the proliferating claims for aid to higher education in Ontario rank as top candidates for chronic ulcers.

The government-appointed advisory committee on university affairs must pick its way each year through written and verbal submissions from a growing number of universities clamoring for government grants. Traditional methods of raising funds among private donors are failing to meet the spiralling costs of swift growth.

The five-man committee's decisions guide the government in apportioning both operational and capital aid among 14 universities—half of them in their capital-hungry infancy and the rest expanding—plus Ontario Hall law school and the Ontario College of Art.

Committee advice this year led the government to estimate total 1964-65 grants and loans at $101,298,000—a jump of almost 20 per cent over 1963-64 grants of $70,000,000 and more than triple the total four years ago. One estimate of the total sought by the universities for 1964-65 had it approaching $140,000,000.

JURIST HEADS ADVISERS

The harassed five are Ontario Chief Justice Dana Porter, the committee chairman; Floyd S. Chalmers, president of Maclean - Hunter Publishing Company; Senator Thomas D'Arcy Leonard of Toronto; Robert A. Mitchell of London, general secretary of Imperial Petroleum Corporation, and George Gathercole, second vice-chairman of Ontario Hydro. Former premier Leslie Frost has been acting chairman while the chief justice heads the federal royal commission on banking and finance.

Help is on the way for the committee and its secretariat, a small staff in a rented midtown office under J. R. McCarthy, whose fulltime appointment is superintendent of curriculum for the department of education.

The government plans to establish this year a department of university affairs separate from the department of education.

In addition, the government will create a new Crown corporation to finance capital assistance to the universities. Of the 1964-65 estimates of $101,000,000, the Ontario Universities Capital Aid Corporation will handle $33,880,000 in loans earmarked for building projects. The remainder will be provided from the budget in operating grants.

COSTS FORCE CHANGE

Creation of the advisory committee four years ago, and now the projected new universities department and the loan corporation, are the result of pressure from institutions of higher learning faced with an enrolment boom that will see the student population at Ontario and versities leap to more than 90,000 in 1970 from less than 40,000 now.

Traditional methods of financing the more leisurely expansion of the past—endowments and fund drives—cannot keep pace with the rocketing demand of the 1960s.

At long - established Queen's University of Kingston, a medium - sized Ontario university with 3,500 students, endowment income of $686,000 and gifts of $883,000 in the 1963-64 year form relatively insignificant parts of a total operating budget of $7,317,000. Tuition fees account for $2,400,000 Provincial grants for $2,100,000 and federal per capita grants $1,258,000.

Government estimates for the coming year would boost the provincial operational grants for Queen's to $3,460,000 and capital loans would add $4,250,000.

The new universities — Toronto's York, Sudbury's Laurentian, Peterborough's Trent, Brock at St. Catharines, Windsor, Lakehead and Guelph—are in a worse fix because their capital needs are as great or greater than the older schools, they lack established endowment and their very creation restricts the private fund-raising field for all.

FIELD NARROW

A few universities could draw on businesses and individuals across the province for donations in former days but now a university is virtually confined to tapping narrowing regional loyalties.

McMaster University of Hamilton, with a $35,000,000 building project, is looking hopefully to private givers for only one fifth of the total. Waterloo has had a struggle trying to raise $2,000,000 in a fund drive. Communities such as Chatham had to drop plans for a local university when they found even substantial offerings of some $2,000,000 out of reach.

The result has been enforced reliance on government grants, despite a traditional wariness of placing a university open to government interference. Everyone is the only formal provincial university, but its operation differs little from that of autonomous institutions.

Since the end of the Second World War the universities of Queen's and Western Ontario at London were the only Ontario universities qualifying for provincial grants, others have become eligible by adopting the non-sectarian status by administration.

Among those are McMaster, formerly Baptist; Assumption, a Roman Catholic university which joined with Essex College to form non-sectarian Windsor University, and Waterloo, established by Waterloo Lutheran University. The University of Ottawa, a Roman Catholic school, gets grants for its arts science and medical faculties only.

DETAILS MISSING

Just how Ontario's projected new system of meeting capital-needs demands through loans will work in detail has not been spelled out.

Under the present system, the five-man advisory committee weighs requests for grants by assessing their relative merits. Unlike the federal grants to universities—$2 per capita of provincial population shared proportionately among qualifying universities on the basis of enrolment—the Ontario grants committee works to no fixed formula.

The 1964-65 estimates on capital grants are at least the 1963-64 level through 1965-66.

'Jest a Second'

"Why is it that every time I'm going out you have to be coming in?"

Hal Jones, for example. Only York University at the top of the list with $8,000,000 compared to $6,000,000 for its giant neighbor, University of Toronto. But York, founded in 1960, aims to have a 7,000-student campus ready by 1970.

The aim of the new Crown corporation is to spare the annual government budget from the strain of heavy, short-term expense in building. The universities will pay back the loans and interest over a long term out of budgeted operating grants.

The lack of a set formula for awarding grants has been need by opposition parties to fling the Conservative administration of Premier John Roberts, charging the premier to pledge a year ago that universities could count on receiving capital grants on at least the 1963-64 level through 1965-66.

Gen. MacArthur To Lie In State At Washington

Architect of Victory In Pacific Is Dead

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans and much of the world began paying a hero's homage today to Douglas MacArthur, gallant old soldier who has faded away.

The 84-year-old general of the army died at 3:39 a.m. EST Sunday at Walter Reed Army Hospital in Washington after three serious operations.

Soon thereafter the body of the man who etched his name on so much history — St. Michiel, Bataan, Corregidor, New Guinea, Manila, Tokyo and Inchon — began its funeral journey to New York.

The body was brought by motor hearse to this city — where he had lived in a hotel suite since coming home from the Pacific wars 13 years ago.

From 10 a.m. Tuesday until 10 p.m., his body will lie in repose of the famous old 7th Regiment Armory on Park Avenue.

LIE IN STATE

Wednesday, the body will be returned by rail train to Washington. From that afternoon until noon Thursday it will lie in state in the Capitol Rotunda.

Then, by military plane it will be flown to Norfolk, Va., for funeral services in St. Paul's Episcopal (Anglican) Church and burial.

The general had expressed a wish to be buried in Norfolk because there his mother, the former Mary Pinkney Hardy, was born, reared and married. The city has fashioned, out of a 114-year-old courthouse, a memorial to MacArthur, a museum for his memorabilia and a mausoleum for his remains.

There are the famous crunched cap, high, with its "scrambled eggs" insignal, and one of the corncob pipes with which he was trademark.

There, too, above the tomb that will receive him, is this inscription:

"In twenty campaigns, on a hundred battlefields, around a thousand campfires, in long years of peace as well as war he was a soldier who tried to do his duty as God gave him the light to see that duty."

MESSAGES ARRIVE

Messages of sorrow at MacArthur's passing — and praise for his exploits in both world wars and Korea — have been poured in from around the globe. One, from former president Truman, was a great controversy with which historians will wrestle for decades.

Truman said Sunday night:

"I am deeply sorry at the passing of General Douglas MacArthur, who has given of himself with exceptional strength and valor and will be remembered by his countrymen for his rubber-stamp process.

At that point the Senate wound up its Friday proceedings, electing to sit again tonight.

Will Not Accept Makarios' Move To Cancel Pact

Cyprus Appears Headed For New Showdowns

CP from AP-Reuters

NICOSIA — The Cyprus crisis today appeared to be headed for new showdowns both on the political and military fronts.

Reaction was awaited from the Greek-Cypriot government to Turkey's denunciation of President Makarios' move to abrogate the 1960 treaty of alliance among Cyprus, Greece and Turkey.

A Turkish government spokesman said Turkey won't accept Makarios' decision to cancel the treaty. He added Turkey would continue to exercise its right under the treaty to keep troops on the island.

Makarios not fired Turkish Premier Ismet Inonu Saturday that the Greek-Cypriot government considered the treaty dead. But Inonu and his cabinet decided Makarios' move was contrary to international law and carried "no legal significance whatsoever," the spokesman said.

OUTLINES RIGHTS

One of three international agreements under which Cyprus won her independence from Britain in 1960, the treaty gives Turkey and Greece the right to station troops on the island. The Turkish garrison numbers 650 troops, the Greek 950.

The Turkish press said the government considered Makarios' attempt to cancel the treaty a prelude to abolishing other agreements, which include the right of Greek, Turkish or British intervention to protect the Cypriot constitution. Under one of the agreements, Britain also retains bases on the island.

One Turkish cabinet member was said to have warned that if there is any attack on the Turkish troops "Turkey will violently repulse the aggressor."

The government called back to port naval units sailing out of Iskenderun, 100 miles northeast of Cyprus.

On the military front, violence continued for the fourth consecutive day despite the efforts of British and Canadian United Nations peace forces.

POLICEMAN KILLED

A Greek-Cypriot auxiliary policeman was killed in a machine gun fire near a Turkish-Cypriot roadblock in Nicosia. It was the first fatality in the capital in more than a month, although both sides often shoot at each other at night.

In western Cyprus, an incident involving a Greek - Cypriot armored car and Turkish gunmen threatened to touch off a new outbreak of violence there.

A UN spokesman said Turkish-Cypriots fired a bazooka at

Will Air Senate Action

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP)—It isn't anywhere on the agenda, but the Senate's action last Friday night in stalling a government money bill is sure to be a big item in today's Commons proceedings.

Officially, the order paper contains only one reference to the Senate: Presentation of a bill by Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) calling for abolition of the 102-member upper chamber.

The bill, however, isn't debatable on first reading. There would have to be unanimous consent — highly unlikely — for second reading and automatic debate.

Various other devices exist, however, for MPs to thrash out the Senate's refusal to pass immediately a Commons bill that included authority for a loan to the unemployment insurance fund to pay jobless benefits due today.

The Commons today is supposed to be tackling the closeup of supplementary estimates for the fiscal year that ended last Tuesday night.

Originally, the government asked the Commons to finish up these estimates on Thursday, March 26, and adjourn that night for the traditional 10-day Easter recess.

The Conservative Opposition decided to balk, insisting on detailed study of the $260,000,000 involved. Details of this spending were given to the Commons March 6.

SAT ON GOOD FRIDAY

Result: A brief Good Friday sitting and the whole recess week taken up with bickering about various government departments.

The Senate, which had been planning to recess itself on March 26 and come back April 30, sat around all last week waiting for the money bill which finally arrived late last Friday afternoon.

Senator Gratian O'Leary (PC —Ontario) rebelled at the idea of the Senate giving three readings to the bill. He refused the unanimous consent needed for this rubber-stamp process.

At that point the Senate wound up its Friday proceedings, electing to sit again tonight.

Saddened Japan Pays Tribute To Its Conqueror and Rebuilder

TOKYO (AP) — A saddened Japan led the world today today to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, its wartime conqueror who led it to peace, prosperity and democracy.

A sense of sorrow also swept the Philippines and Asian lands, two other Asian states in whose destinies MacArthur was deeply involved, at the news of his death.

The Japanese government sent the country's most beloved soldier statesman, former prime minister Shigeru Yoshida, to represent Japan at MacArthur's funeral.

In a message to President Johnson, Prime Minister Hayato Ikeda said the Japanese respected MacArthur "not only as a soldier but as a friend." Emperor Hirohito and Empress Nagako also sent their condolences.

In the Philippines, where MacArthur's wartime pledge "I shall return" gave hope during the Japanese occupation, President Diosdado Macapagal declared a period of national mourning.

MacArthur returned for a sentimental final visit to the Philippines in July, 1961, receiving a tumultuous welcome and honorary Philippine citizenship.

EMERGENCY MEETING — Labor Minister MacEachen (seated) met the three Unemployment Insurance Commissioners Saturday to lay plans for dealing with the financial crisis in the jobless insurance fund. Scrape Together Two Million Cash To Pay Benefits to Most Jobless

OTTAWA (CP) — The unemployment insurance commission has scraped up enough money to get part way out of its financial crisis.

Labor Minister MacEachen said the commission will have enough money on hand today to pay out more than $2,000,000 in cash benefits to some 48,000 jobless workers.

But insurance benefits for another 36,000 unemployed Canadians, normally mailed out by cheque instead of cash—will be held back until the government gets legal authority to make an emergency loan to the bankrupt unemployment insurance fund.

Mr. MacEachen said Saturday that the post office will turn over money it has collected from the sale of unemployment insurance stamps and meter credits to the unemployment insurance commission today—24 hours sooner than usual.

This revenue will help meet demands for cash benefits when the 206 UIC offices open for business.

The crisis in the unemployment insurance fund was caused when Conservative Senator Gratian O'Leary stopped the Senate from giving speedy approval Friday night to a $130,000,000 appropriation bill, which included the special loan to bail out the empty insurance kitty.

Barring the unexpected, the measure will get Senate approval and be given royal assent tonight.

The government will then have the power to advance up to $55,000,000 in loans to tide the depleted fund over the next two months when claims for unemployment insurance are generally heavy.

Indications are the loan will be made within minutes of royal assent, thus paving the way for quick mailing of benefit cheques to claimants.

Doctors' Strike Protested

BRUSSELS — Belgian labor unions planned today to launch a mass counter-offensive in protest against a strike by most of the country's 12,000 doctors.

With no solution to the six-day strike in sight, a call went out for workers' demonstrations throughout Belgium.

Anger over the strike has mounted steadily. Doctors' homes have been defaced and many doctors have received threatening phone calls and letters.

Engineers Protest Peace Pact

By ROBERT RICE

OTTAWA (CP) — The National Association of Marine Engineers has sent a strong protest to Labor Minister MacEachen over the terms of the Great Lakes peace pact between the government's marine union trustees and the Seafarers' International Union of North America.

In a telegram sent Sunday night, Richard Greaves, national president of the engineers' union, expressed distress about the arrangements announced Friday by the trustees

Mr. K. Hits Back at Chinese

Whoever Loves Stalin Can Take Him If They Like Stench of Corpses

BUDAPEST (Reuters) — The Sino-Soviet ideological dispute appeared to be more bitter than ever today following Soviet Premier Khrushchev's latest blast at Communist China and the walkout of the Chinese delegation at an international conference in this Hungarian capital.

In an indirect but scathing attack, Khrushchev told a crowd of about 80,000 in the Hungarian steel city of Miskole Sunday that "only a complete idiot could pretend to prove that it is easier to build socialism alone than by using the possibilities and support of the fraternal community of people who had previously taken the road. "

Last Tuesday the Peking Communist Party newspaper, People's Daily, launched a bitter attack on Khrushchev, whom it described as "the greatest capitulationist in history."

In what was interpreted as an indirect reply, the Russian leader accused the Chinese of trying to incite the Soviet people against him.

"They make propaganda inside our fatherland and try to incite the people against me as chairman of the council of ministers and as first secretary of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union," he said.

"For this purpose they have invented an accusation against me . . . these charges only make me proud . . . I am proud because of the work which our party and our people are doing for civilization in contrast to Stalin's deformations."

To Chinese charges that he was too concerned with raising Soviet living standards, Khrushchev retorted that after the deprivations of Stalin's time, he was helping the Soviet people "to begin to live like human beings."

"Whoever loves Stalin can take him, if they like the stench of corpses."

The woman leader of the delegation, Han Yu Tung, fiercely attacked the Soviet Union for "dispervicing" the suppressed people in their struggle for independence.

"This is complete capitulation," she said.

She also charged certain people were attacking China at this congress and said they were allies of the imperialists.

Shouting at the top of her voice she said: "Come on, attack us! This does not worry us. We fight to the last."

After this, the members of the Chinese delegation stalked out.

Only Child or Idiot Does Not Fear War

KAZINCBARCIKA (AP)—Premier Khrushchev said today only a child or an "idiot does not fear war.

"The Chinese leaders say it would not be a bad thing to have war — one half of the people in the world would be destroyed and the other would survive," Khrushchev said in a speech to several thousand workers of a chemical plant in this Hungarian industrial centre.

"They say that after some time women again would bear children and mankind would be as before. People who think like that do not show an overabundance of brains, but rather a lack of them.

"I say it is only a child or an idiot who does not fear war," he said.

"The United States is an imperialist country, but its government judges the world situation soberly," he said, and added that President Kennedy's speech at Washington University last summer in which Kennedy called for peaceful solutions to East-West problems was a reasonable one.

"Some people have criticized me for praising this speech," Khrushchev said. "It is primitive to think that we are more prudent than all the others. I think that President Johnson has similar views to his predecessor."

Bhutan Premier Killed

CP from AP-Reuters

GANGTOK, Sikkim — An unknown assassin shot and killed Bhutan's Prime Minister Jigme Dorji Sunday night near the frontier of the little Himalayan kingdom which has become a buffer zone between India and Red China.

There was no indication whether personal or political motives lay behind the slaying of the 45-year-old prime minister, who has been described as strongly anti - Communist despite Chinese pressure.

The prime minister's 30-year-old son Paljor, studying law in London, said reporters there he had no idea who might have wanted his father killed.

Dorji had been reported concerned that the thousands of refugees from Chinese - occupied Tibet in Bhutan might include agents from Peking.

Sketchy reports reaching the neighboring kingdom of Sikkim said Dorji was struck by a single bullet in the back as he sat in a travellers' bungalow in the town of Phuntsholing, near the Indian border.

FIRER FOUND FLED

The assailant fired through an open window and escaped, officials said. Dorji died two hours later.

Shortly before he was abolished prime minister had talked with Avtar Singh, India's political officer in Bhutan and Sikkim.

In New Delhi, Indian officials responsible by treaty for Bhutan's defence and foreign affairs said they had no detailed information. Prime Minister Nehru told Parliament the government "only knows that he has been killed and we know nothing more."

"We are stunned to hear it," Mr. Nehru said. "He was not only a great statesman but a friend of ours in many ways." Bhutan, a country of 18,000 square miles and 700,000 persons, spreads across the Himalayas between Chinese - held Tibet and the Indian states of West Bengal and western Assam.

The Chinese, reported to have moved troops into Tibet's Chumbi Valley adjacent to Bhutan in recent weeks, have been claiming Bhutan territory along the Tibet frontier.

Ambitious Effort to Map Future Of French-Canadians Is Launched

LEVIS, Que. (CP)—An ambitious effort to chart the future of Canada's French - speaking population was launched Saturday as 200 representatives, a term first employed for an assembly before the French revolution.

The aim is to determine by 1966 the political, cultural, economic, social and religious future of French Canada. High on the list of questions is whether province should remain part of Canada and if so under what terms.

Driving force behind the venture is the 250,000-member federation of French Canadian Societies, which started laying the groundwork for the assembly almost three years ago.

Now it has been joined by 16 other organizations ranging from L'Union Catholique des Cultivateurs to the 125,000-member Confederation of National Trade Unions, parent body of Quebec's labor unions.

The object is to rally support from every segment of French-Canadian life, "a true magna carta of the French-Canadian nation."

"We can't allow ourselves to miss this chance," said Dr. Marcel Prevette, president of the federation.

A 21-man general commission now is working on plans and others are to be appointed later —and is to meet again within three months and at regular intervals to supervise the work of five research and study committees.

The original Estates-General, comprising representatives of the principal forces of French society, played a sporadic role in France's history from 1302 onward. In 1789, King Louis XVI, in financial difficulties, summoned the Estates-General and found it clamoring for reform. The French revolution followed.

Splendid Season of Curling Closed With Mixed Bonspiel

A good time was had by all. It was the closing night of the Quinte Curling Club after one of the most successful seasons in the history of the club. There has been plenty of competition, good fellowship and fine social events and Everett Black, president of the club and his board of directors deserve a pat on the back for a job well done.

On Saturday night the finals of the mixed bonspiel in three events were played, presentations made to those winning competitions throughout the winter and bonne bouche of a mixed rink that won a Provincial championship and made a good showing in dominion competition. Also honored were the wife of the president of the Club, the president of the Women's Section and heads of committees who did an excellent job throughout the season.

Ron Bean with his wife, Agnes and Mr. and Mrs. Murray Sheppard won the first event in their rink. Marg Riley, Mr. and Mrs. Goldie Livingston and Dave Brown as skip. The second event was won by Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Sheppard with Mr. and Mrs. Bill Spinelli with the runners-up being Mrs. Edna Hume, Dick Moore, Mrs. Anne Parsons with Murray Johnson as skip. The third event was won by Joan and Al Fraser, Mrs. Hazel McNevin with Hazen Stairs as skip. They defeated Mr. and Mrs. Stan Reston, and Mr. and Mrs. Dick Beare.

Mr. Neil Davidson, manager of the Northern Electric Company was on hand to make the presentation to the winner of the first event and Gil Wambolt, chairman of the spiel, made the presentation to the remaining rinks. James Ward, chairman of the weekend mixed curling presented the trophy and prize to Mrs. Jennie McCue, Dick Beare, Mrs. Edna Smith with Hal Emmerson as skip, while Bill Gault presented the Gault trophy, medals of the club championship in the men's division to Dick Barrett, Jim Fetherey, Dewey Boyd with Bill Riley as skip.

Al McCuliam, chairman of the men's games presented a number of prizes to winners in the several events. Mrs. Catherine Black and Mrs. Orval Bannon were called to the front and were presented with a corsage. Mrs. Black has been a great help to her husband in the year's activities while Mrs. Bannon did an excellent job as president of the Women's section of the club. Mrs. Gladys Duffy, chairman of committee that handled the mixed social functions of the year, was honored along with Mrs. Jessie Barber and Mrs. Kay Pape, who had charge of the kitchen at the Quinte Sanapsis. These duties require a great deal of time and it was given unstintingly by these ladies in addition to every detail. Mrs. Don McKinnon, chairman of the buffet lunch for the closing night, also came in for praise from the assembly.

The Provincial champions, Mr. and Mrs. Max Mohr and Mr. and Mrs. Ron Bens were called to the front to be honored by the club. The president congratulated them on the best in Canada and were not disgraced. The mohr deck being cleared of presentations, Bob Sproutler took over and the boys and girls enjoyed a round of square dancing. Ernie keeps things moving and it was a jolly good time that danced till the midnight hour. A delightful buffet lunch was served and the curling season came down on this season.

Put away the curling shoes, brooms and sweaters, get out the golf clubs and lawn bowling shoes and enjoy the glorious summer but don't forget curling starts again in October.

Employment Picture Healthier Than This Time Last Year

Despite the fact that there are more than 2,200 persons unemployed in Belleville and in the rural areas served by the employment office in this city there are job openings for certain occupations.

The manager the local employment office could place a number of experienced farm hands, while there are also openings for stenographers, sales help and waitresses.

"There just don't seem to be any farm hands available," noted Carl Hiuser, employment office manager.

Also in many of the building trades the employment picture is much brighter than at the same period last year.

Mr. Hiuser noted that at the end of March there were 2,240 persons in the area looking for jobs as compared with 2,315 at the end of March last year.

This is a reduction of about three per cent.

PICTURE HEALTHIER

"The employment picture is healthier than at the same time last year," said Mr. Hiuser, "and is a continuance of a trend that began the past winter."

Job placements for the first three months of the year total led 1,460 as against 918, or an increase of 17 per cent over last year.

To this reviewer's critical ears, the quartet from Ottawa in both halves of the program gave the most pleasing music of all sure. Each voice was under absolute control, the team work flawless, the diction very clear, phrasing and dynamics just right, and as for the difficult art of satisfactory unaccompanied singing, they had me in the palm of their hands. Even in their comedy numbers last night in the program, while uproariously funny, they still remained musically excellent.

Right here I would like to comment on enunciation. I feel that Barbershoppers stress clear enunciation for which the audiences should be grateful. Might I suggest that in order to make the diction even better that if it is not more attention be given to final consonants. Some of them could not be heard beyond a third row. One of the visiting quartets left me mentally half hung in every last consonant "t" and "d" for them. Perhaps I am getting to be too fussy.

Our old friends, the Canadian Chordsmen from East York, whom we have enjoyed many times before, got off on the wrong foot and did not manage to recover until the second half of the program. In their efforts to be funny, they became so involved in their own pranks, that the audience was left far behind. This was a pity, because they really are funny, and nearly can sing, as they proved later on in the program.

District champions of 1963, the Hometowners from Scarborough, quite a youthful appearing group, showed good co-ordination, with attacks and releases excellent, and possessing a rather unusual combination of the three lower voices having remarkably similar timbre. Their forte singing which also found favor, remained musical. A little more variety in their program and changes in pacing after more honors; and please, choice of numbers would injury in any way, but generally even softer. Given this talented group had pitch difficulties in their final encore.

Belleville's special quartet who call themselves "The Quinte Cavaliers," appeared in both parts of the program and to my mind showed up well despite the more experienced out-of-towners. A satisfying blend of voices of varying timbre, and of fine musicianship. The Twelfth Street Rag,' they gave such a good account of itself, reminiscent, that I am sure they would have no difficulty with regid audiences. Tenor, in the second half of the program we had the pleasure of hearing the lovely voice of this gentleman again may I urge this talented quartet to pay considerable to those final consonants if you expect them to go farther than the footlights, especially in the featured solo voices.

FINE QUALITY

You a have a fine quality of tone, good voices, and no goodness' sake, don't stop singing on vowels because I am harped on consonants, but remember that your listeners will enjoy it much more when they can hear the words as they go by the way, congratulations to Jack Bezzmith on his arrangement of The Hawaiian Wedding Song.

Pure glamor, was provided by the appearance of the ladies' section of this organization, Belleville Harmonettes under the direction of Muriel Jobson. Miss Jobson had her charges in black costumes with fringe tips, drawing from them a very commendable blend of voices, especially in their soft passages — no easy task. How about a smile, girls? You do not have to be afraid, dear you do so well. So next time, smile and you will look even prettier than you do now and you do. It improves the tone quality, too.

Phil Fiegler proved to be an excellent master of ceremonies throughout the show, things moving in his usual unassuming, genial way. And so closed another enjoyable if somewhat lengthy evening of 'Close Harmony.'

Close Harmony Night Most Enjoyable Event

By ALEC GORDON

To those lovers of close harmony where a succession of dominant and diminished seventh chords follow each other back and forth, and the tenor sings the voices neat from chord to chord, last Saturday night's offerings sponsored by the Belleville chapter of the S.P.E.B.S.Q.S.A. proved a pleasant evening. Those who scorned the idea because of numerous other competing attractions felt that the evening had been well spent and look forward to next season's concert with undisguised pleasure.

The great British parliamentarian Disraeli once said, "it is much easier to be critical than correct." Keeping this in mind, the readers have permission to disagree with this reviewer's comments about last Saturday's 'Harmony Night.'

Preceding the concert and amidst the high decibel level of chatter of the arriving audience, Jimmie Worrall gave his melodious interpretations of nostalgic tunes from various musical shows which those who were not, gave polite applause when the last number ceased their unrewarding task.

The show proper started with the Belleville Harmony sailing outlined in beige and blue outfits singing a sprightly number of welcome to the audience which was followed by two more numbers which showed careful rehearsal and the good direction of their leader, Don Sexsmith. In the second half of the program, the Belleville Harmony group appeared again with a different set of costumes composed of personal which, to these ears made for a better blend of voices. Which difficult to achieve at times as so often happens in unaccompanied singing. Division was commendable however, in their efforts for clear enunciation, musical phrasing got left out in the picture.

CAN BE PROUD

In spite of these discrepancies, the overall performance of Belleville Harmony in the Q.S.A. chorus was thoroughly enjoyable, and it can be justly proud of its part in entertainment in the last twelve years.

As usual, visiting quartets were featured on the program. They consisted of the Canadian Capitalaires from Ottawa, the Canadian Chordsmen from East York, and the Hometowners from Scarborough. Each quartet appeared in both halves of the program. Each group with its distinctive costumes provided us with numbers of pure delight.

Meet Approves Canada Class Car Rules

Thirty two members of the Canada Class Association — dedicated to auto racing with interesting results — met in Belleville Saturday to approve rules governing Canada Class cars for the years 1963 to 1968. The meeting was held in Belleville because Belleville is nearly half way between Montreal and London — the farthest distance that some members attended — and because the Quinte Auto Sport Club had offered to be host. The club arranged to use Moira Secondary School's cafeteria for the meeting.

Canada Class cars are almost stock sedans — safe, and must use as a basic engine one from production car costing not more than $2,500 new. The cost limit rules out factory built racing engines. Regulations approved Saturday also accept that the engine must be of the reciprocating piston type, (this provision would rule out turbines and some new rotary engines) and limited to four cylinder cam type engines and left at 1,000 cc for overhead valve engines, 1,250 cc for side-valve engines and 1,000 cc for two-cycle engines. The varying sizes allowed represent the potential of the different designs; the four-cylinder, four-cycle overhead cam type engines was planned to accomodate a recently announced English car.

Another change in the regulations eliminates the need for a head light on the automobiles — provided there are two independent foot - operate? braking systems. Hydraulic brakes on all four wheels are required. Brake lights — peculiar to the Canada Class among formula - type racing cars — will be retained.

Car at Corbyville Destroyed by Fire

City firemen received three calls on Saturday, two of them false alarms.

The first call was to Burkish's garage at Corbyville where a 1956 sports model automobile was completely destroyed by fire. The owner, Douglas Burkish, reported to the service station, said he was away at the time. He said the car was parked in the rear of the station with several other automobiles.

Firemen then received a call at 53 Southview Avenue which turned out to be a false alarm. Fire Chief Gerald Vance said this morning that the call came from a six-year-old girl. He added that the department has received numerous calls from a little girl whose voice sounded similar to that of Saturday's call.

The third alarm was received from Ontario Provincial Police that a car was on fire at Rossmore. This also turned out to be a false alarm. There was no explanation for the call.

Revision Made In PC Body's Constitution

South Hastings Conservative supporters Saturday evening approved a revision of the Progressive Conservative Association of South Hastings' constitution. The revision of the 10-year-old constitution had been suggested at last year's annual meeting by Lieutenant - Colonel Bateman of Belleville. Mr. Bateman himself presented the new version, prepared with the aid of suggestions from the floor, to Saturday night's Association's annual meeting in the Kiwanis Centre.

"There are no major or controversial changes," Mr. Bateman told Association members. "The revised draft is designed to serve mainly to legalize practices already in use.

Changes in the constitution provide that permanent poll-captains be appointed in each polling subdivision. There must be eight vice-presidents, three of whom shall be women, and that the president and secretary of each municipal Conservative Association, the president of each ladies' organization and the president of each Young Progressive Conservative Association within the riding shall be considered officers of the Association. Another change provides that membership fees in the Association be paid by the end of the calendar year. In 1925, when the original constitution was drawn up, twenty five cents was considered efficient.

Only one provision of the new constitution was challenged from the floor — that "no meeting of any organization be held at least once every two years. Bruce Pont of Belleville suggested that if they need be held no more often than once every two years, "cringing meeting" is hardly an appropriate description.

The meeting approved Association president Jack Ireland's suggestion that the phrase "annual meeting" be amended to read "meeting for the election of officers".

Says Provincial Premiers Provide Only Leadership, Federal Liberals 'Bemused'

Canada's Liberal government is looking for political solutions to problems which require national solution, South Hastings Conservatives were told Saturday evening. Speaking to the annual meeting of the South Hastings Progressive Conservative Association in the Kiwanis Centre, Dalton E. Camp, president of the National Association of the Progressive Conservative Party, said that the provincial premiers provide the only leadership and initiative in the country. The federal government, he said, is bemused and distracted from important national problems by a serious political dilemma of its own.

A conflict between federal and provincial Liberalism, Mr. Camp said, has no national significance. He added, though, that the result of this conflict could be fatal to the Liberal party. He predicted the split between Premier Hepburn of Ontario and the federal Liberal party led by Mackenzie King, and said the results of this split are still felt in the Ontario Liberal party. He recalled the split in Conservative ranks when the premiers broke away from the party.

UP TO CONSERVATIVES

Mr. Camp suggested that it will be left to the Conservative party to rebuild national unity, after the next election.

During the course of his speech, Mr. Camp listed the business community, communication and industry — including the controlled press, private radio and CBC) and the two-party system as the foundations of a free country.

He added, however, that business, communication and industry have become each "a pervasive medium of communicating unverified and selective information and creating the culture of others."

Mr. Camp said that the Liberals had promised before the election, to reduce taxes. Instead, he said, they increased taxes and did so in a manner which most economists believe will have a harmful effect on the development of the country. The Liberals also promised, he said, to bring stability to government financial policy. The first Gordon budget did the opposite, he said, and very nearly caused a run on the Canadian dollar. The run was prevented, he said, by the wheat sale to Russia.

CONFEDERATION IN DANGER

The Liberal party also promised, said Mr. Camp, that it would restore national unity. It has done the opposite, he said. To the extent that today Confederation itself is in danger, said the situation is growing worse daily, he added.

Most of the failings in Canada today, Mr. Camp said, stem from the twenty-two years of one-party rule by the Liberal governments "in which the country was committed to a policy of non-participation." The post-war years, Mr. Camp said, forged ownership of Canada became an important problem, forward to which the Liberals reacted with "cringing passivity." Only by concerted declaration of the Diefenbaker government, Mr. Camp said, was Canada able to maintain Canadian ownership of Canadian insurance companies. The Diefenbaker government also took steps, he said, to increase the Canadian content of materials and labor in the automobile industry.

Mr. Camp was introduced to the meeting by Mrs. Stuart Howell, president of the Belle-

Says Killers Of Kennedy Still at Large

BUDAPEST (AP) — A New York lawyer appeared before the Communist-controlled Association of Democratic Lawyers Sunday and said the killers of president Kennedy are still at large.

Mark Lane said he hoped the association's annual congress would provide the first step in establishing an international commission of jurors to meet and evaluate" the circumstances of the assassination of the American president last November.

"I will appear, if requested, and present all the evidence in my possession," he said Lane, 37, said there was no evidence that the alleged assassin, Lee H. Oswald, "in any way involved."

Lane until recently was lawyer for Oswald's mother.

Y's Activities

LEADERS' CORPS

Saturday afternoon and evening were busy times for the boys and girls of the cadet, junior and intermediate Leaders Corps. After days, weeks and months of working as leaders in the physical department program of the "Y", the boys and girls decided to get together for a social program of their own. An afternoon of volleyball and refreshments wheeled the appetites of 24 leaders and their instructors, Mildred Gray and Graham Geldart. Later they all sat down to a pot luck supper which they had prepared themselves. After the supper the group went 5 pin bowling at the Belleville Bowl.

John Hayman had the highest score, while Sue Clarke had the highest two-game average. The group returned to the YMCA for a swim, dancing and refreshments to round out the evening.

HI-Y EASTER WORKSHOP

Thursday night Hi-Y members Bette Book, Tom Dolan, Barry Alder and program secretary Graham Geldart, returned from a three - day conference north of Montreal. The quartet left on Easter Sunday afternoon via CNR and were met in Kingston by other Hi-Y delegates and sponsors. The group were billeted for Sunday night with delegates and then went by bus Monday morning to Far Hills Inn at Val Morin, Quebec. There were 132 Hi-Y conference delegates from clubs in Ottawa, Montreal, Sherbrooke, Cornwall and Belleville.

The conference was based on training in human relations techniques. The delegates quickly learned the value of the dynamics involved in the developments of groups. It is hoped that the knowledge gained will benefit the club and themselves in the solution of problems, decision making and the ability to work together to achieve the aims and purposes of HI-Y.

The Belleville delegates paid a portion of the fees themselves and were partly sponsored by the Y's Mennettes, the Y's men and their own clubs. This week they will be reporting to their clubs and sponsors about their major findings. They are already looking forward to next year's conference wherever it may be.

All Children Evacuated In Levis Fire

LEVIS, Que. (CP) — Orderly evacuation of 630 children and 120 aged persons and fire walls that prevented the flames spreading quickly were credited with averting tragedy Sunday as fire raged through a home for orphans and the aged.

Only one of the 75 Grey Nuns who operated the 85-year-old Institut St. Joseph de la Delivrance had to use an aerial ladder to escape from her fourth - floor room. The children, aged persons and 75 other nuns were escorted out quickly.

Firemen from Levis, Quebec City and suburban Sillery were still pouring water into the smouldering five - storey building late Sunday night and battling 30-mile-an-hour winds and 20 - degree temperatures that had hampered them since the fire was first noticed at 9 a.m.

Following the dinner Group Capt. E. M. Butcher, Commanding Officer of RCAF Station Trenton, called upon Group Captain W. H. Schroeder to cut a specially decorated anniversary cake which was ceremonially piped to the head table. G/C Schroeder has served nearly 35 years in the RCAF.

During his talk, the Air Officer Commanding spoke on the history and traditions of the RCAF.

Background music was provided by a concert group from the Air Transport Command Band which played many of the tunes popular throughout the Air Force over the past 40 years.

Following the dinner the guests were entertained by a group of mess members who presented a skit based on a popular television series.

A smoker was held at the Sergeants' Mess, RCAF Station Trenton, to mark the 40th anniversary of the RCAF.

Will Postpone Strike Action Until Meeting

TRENTON — Thomas McMahon, president of Local 2096 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, AFL, CIO, CLC, said Sunday night the members of the union local would postpone strike action against the Trenton Public Utilities until after a meeting between the union's negotiating committee and the utilities negotiating committee, at which John Speranzini, Ontario Department of Labor conciliation officer, will preside. The meeting has been called for Tuesday morning at 11 a.m. Last week, the union local served notice to utilities manager James Page that strike action would commence at 10 a.m. Tuesday.

The meeting with the conciliation officer was requested by the Hon. Leslie Rowntree, Ontario Minister of Labor.

The strike was called after a breakdown in negotiations between the two negotiating committees. Negotiations have been going on since Sept., 1963.

The union's two-year contract with the utilities ran out Aug. 31, 1963. Many of the areas of dispute have been ironed out in subsequent meetings, but the question of wage increases, retroactivity and progression of employees are still in dispute. The utilities have offered the 29 men involved a one-year contract, with six cents of this retroactive to Aug. 31. The union is reported to be holding out for an 11-cent increase on the first year of the contract, retroactive to Aug. 31.

The union wants automatic progression for all employees, while the utilities thinks individual merit should enter into the picture.

Greenhouse Is Destroyed By Sunday Fire

TRENTON — Fire early Sunday completely destroyed a frame greenhouse and the nursery stock in the building on Dundas St. E. owned by Trenton's parks gardener, Bart Boers, at R.R. 4, Trenton. Loss has been set by Mr. Boers at between $5,500 and $6,000. The greenhouse, valued at between $3,500 and $4,000 was insurer. The stock, worth $2,000 ("and," said Mr. Boers today, "three months of hard work,") was not covered by insurance.

The fire was first reported at 2.15 p.m. Mr. Boers said today that he had been out to the greenhouse to check the oil burner an hour before and everything had seemed in order.

The fire, according to Mr. Boers, seemed to break out all over the building at once. Trenton firemen, called to the scene, "did a wonderful job," said Mr. Boers. The greenhouse was located only eight feet from the Boers' home. The all Canadian Knox operations Master of Murray township, Mayor James MacDonald, and clerk-comptroller O. W. Drapeau Sees Three Choices Facing Quebec

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau said Sunday Quebec eventually will have to choose between "binational Confederation" and independence.

He was addressing the annual banquet at La Ligne d'Action Nationale, (The League for National Action) a French-language group.

Mr. Drapeau said French-speaking Canadians were faced with three "tendencies" — cooperative federalism, binational Confederation and independence of Quebec.

"There is no doubt that the choice will have to be made some day mainly between the last two," the mayor said.

Besides the constitutional battles, Mr. Drapeau said it was necessary to build first "the Quebec of tomorrow."

That involves establishment of solid institutions belonging to French - Canadians, spreading among French - Canadians a passion for competence, fighting against the plague of unemployment and under-development, making education accessible to all.

The Changing World

Peking has called Nikita Khrushchev "the greatest capitulationist in history."

The Chinese Communists charge that Khrushchev is paving the way for the restoration of capitalism in the Soviet Union.

Khrushchev, we may be sure, would deny this vigorously. And, for once, the statesmen of the West would agree with him.

It just might be, though, that there is a grain of truth in what Peking says.

Consciously or unconsciously, Khrushchev may be setting the stage for the political and economic system which will follow the existing system of state capitalism in Russia—a system which the rest of the world calls communism but which the Russians themselves call socialism evolving towards communism.

That the political and economic system in the USSR is changing, there can be little doubt. This change, though, is being matched by a change in the so-called capitalistic countries. More and more frequently, amongst intellectuals, one hears the suggestion that both communism and capitalism are becoming more and more like each other, are evolving towards a synthesis, in which differences will be determined more by local conditions than on the basis of communist or capitalist theory. Amongst the latest to advance this view of a synthesis of the two systems is Prof. Toynbee, the eminent historian, in an interview published in the magazine U.S. News and World Report.

Senator J. William Fulbright, chairman of the foreign relations committee of the U.S. Senate, has just startled the Johnson Administration and Senate colleagues by declaring that the Soviet Union is no longer totally and implacably hostile to the West. The Senator thinks that the degrees of hostility of communist lands now varies.

Meanwhile an equally strong trend towards economic rapprochement has gone virtually unnoticed, because it has developed so quietly on both sides of the Iron Curtain.

One of the most convincing instances of the existence of such a trend is provided right here in Canada, and not by the federal government, despite its activity in sponsoring such socialistic legislation as hospital insurance and a universal, compulsory pension plan.

It is Quebec which is in the process of producing a startling economic change. It is no longer any secret that the pragmatists who compose Premier Lesage's government are seriously thinking of sweeping government intervention in the economic life of the province by this should prove necessary to break the grip of financial institutions, the nationalization of hydro power companies was but the first step of many envisaged by the "quiet revolutionists." Unless Quebec's, aspirations are otherwise satisfied, a few years may find this Catholic stronghold embarking on a socialistic adventure, either within the Confederation or without.

It would be a development almost as startling as that which the Chinese communists accuse Khrushchev of planning, a capitalistic Russia.

Need Northern Seaport

The Alaska Highway is really an international road.

It was built in Canada (mostly) by Americans, for Americans.

When it was constructed in 1942 by 6,000 American soldiers, at a cost of $139,000,000, it was regarded as essential to the defence of Alaska from the Japanese.

Today it still carries many more Americans than Canadians. In 1959, the last year for which official statistics are available, about two-thirds of the 40,000 tourists who used the road in the three summer months were from California. Texans ranked next and Canadians third.

There is now an agitation, in Alaska, in Alberta and British Columbia and in the states south of the Canadian border, to have the road paved.

One point at issue is the division of the costs. Senator Mike Mansfield of Montana wants Canada to pay the reconstruction costs, with Canada and the U.S. sharing equally in the estimated $100,000,000 cost of paving the 1,169 unpaved miles of the 1,523-mile highway. (All the unpaved miles are in Canada.)

A reasonable division of costs could probably be worked out, but as the work would be chiefly for the benefit of Americans, Canada would have a right to put a price on its co-operation.

The price we suggest is simple and would do no more than remedy an existing injustice.

It is a corridor to the sea through the Alaska Panhandle, so that the Yukon Territory and northern British Columbia would have easy access to the Pacific.

Segregation Not Top Aim

By Howard Sims in the American Scholar

It has occurred to me only recently that perhaps the most striking development in the South is not that the process of desegregation is under way, but that the mystique with which Americans have always surrounded the South is beginning to vanish.

Driving into Atlanta in a heavy rain one hot August night six and a half years ago, my wife and two small children waking up to watch the shimmering city lights on Ponce de Leon Avenue, I was as immersed in this mystique as anyone else.

For the last full day of driving, the talk and the look of people were different. The trees and fields seemed different. The air itself smelled different.

This was the mysterious and terrible South, the Deep South, soaked in blood and history, of which Faulkner wrote and Margaret Mitchell, and Wilbur J. Cash.

White Atlanta had been ravaged and still bore it. Negroes had been slaves and still remembered it. Northerners were strangers no matter how long they stayed, and would never forget it . . . .

And yet, I can say now after living intensely in the Deep South for more than six years when the South itself has altered most intensely, and the mystique is dissolving, for me, and for others.

The South is still the most terrible place in America. Because it is, it is filled with heroes. The South is enormous and marvelous at the same time.

Every cliche ever uttered about the South, every stereotype attached to its people, while still true, is false. A thousand other characteristics, complex and subtle, are also true.

The South has not lost its fascination. But it is no longer mysterious . . . .

Atlanta is in the Deep South. Atlanta has as many crackpots, KKK sympathizers, country wool - hats, white supremacists, barbershop lynchers, vicious politicians as any Southern city. If the Deep South said "Never," Atlanta, too said "Never."

In 1958 it was tightly segregated. By 1961 the lunch counters had desegregated; so had the public libraries, the rail and bus terminals; a number of theatres and restaurants downtown, the department store cafeterias, the opera, the municipal auditorium, the legitimate theatre, the public schools, the colleges (public and private), several hotels, the plainclothes squad of the Police Department, and the Chamber of Commerce, several professional organizations, the county committee of the Democratic Party and even the Senate of the Georgia General Assembly!

Now that it is all done, there are obvious reasons, which can it advanced with great casualness, if cliche city admiration, a layer of Negro intellectuals, a determined student movement, a band of white liberals giving cosmopolitan talking to the country-style Talmadge hams.

But none of this takes account of the fact that all the above were a small minority of the population, that most of Atlanta's population, the overwhelming majority of its 350,000 white people, still consider Negroes inferior, and prefer a segregated society, and that these people were numerous enough to have prevented most of the changes by vote, by election, by boycott — if they cared enough.

They stood by passively and acquiesced, with the puniest of resistance, to almost all of it.

I changes in the social structure of the city.

There is then a key to the traditionally mysterious vault of prejudice locked inside the mind of the white Southerner.

He cares, but not enough. Or to put it another way, while he cares about segregation, there are things he cares about more.

The white Southerner has a hierarchy of desires, in which many other things are more higher than segregation: monetary profit, local power, staying out of jail, the approval of one's immediate peers, conforming to the dominant decision of the community.

Desegregation has come in varying degrees to perhaps a hundred other places in the Deep South, in the face of persistent, fierce, and violent, in the community, simply because one or another of these desires, which stand higher in the Southerner's value-scheme, was threatened if he did not surrender.

Except as an academic exercise, there is no need then to probe the fog for the reasonably shrouds c... philosophical questions of cessation in race prejudice.

•

What needs to be done is to decide for each city or entities in the community which value is more important and to plan a web of pressures, from negotiation, boycott, lawsuit, voting, demonstration — that will appeal to those priorities.

In a rough semiconscious way, the actions of the federal courts and of the leaders in the South have aimed at this; a more deliberate use of the hierarchy of value concept would bring even more dramatic results.

Letter to The Editor

Praises Courtesy Of Taxi Drivers

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

On April 3, 1964, I had the misfortune of having someone ask me what I thought of the courtesy of the taxi drivers in Belleville. I could think of only one answer to the question, that is, someone is condemning the drivers.

Well, I have driven almost 1,000,000 miles in the city of Belleville and I can only truthfully say that never in a million miles has any one taxi driver put me to an inconvenience, have a very good driving record and I think I owe some of the credit to the courtesy of the taxi drivers and others too. None of us are perfect drivers.

•

If we all were, who would people have to talk about.

•

Any one person who will condemn a whole fleet of drivers because one individual does him an injustice on the street is very unjust in his thinking.

•

Our whole world cannot be handled this way.

•

I feel justified in saying that our city taxi drivers rate very highly among any drivers, both in courtesy and citizenship.

•

I have at one time worked with our taxi services and now own and operate my own service in Belleville and there is no driver I'd rather meet on the street than a taxi driver, because I know he is trained from an office and he knows where he is going.

•

I wish to commend them all

Quebec Not Poor Region

Halifax Chronicle-Herald

Part of Quebec's resentment stems from the alleged fact that Quebec is not sharing equally in Canada's economic prosperity. Maritimers are justified in greeting such assertions with looks of derision.

According to 1961 census figures recently released in a preliminary report of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, the average family income in Quebec was $3,821, or just $8 below the national family income of $3,131.

Little wonder that residents of the Atlantic Provinces are not overwhelmed by the economic aids of Quebec's case.

Twenty-five hundred enthusiastic spectators thronged the Huma Arena Gardens on Friday night to witness the annual Quinte Sarnia Club Whirler show. In attendance was the B.C.I.V.S. band under the direction of Mr. N. Bridge which played appropriate skating numbers for the participants of the event on the occasion. Each and everyone of the "drama on ice" took his part well and gave proof of excellent training and management.

But one almost invariably steals the spotlight in any revue, and this one was no exception. It was none other than little Miss Vi Smith, guest star from the Toronto Skating Club who performed a number of graceful and spectacular jumps, for one so petite, of her stature and of the ice itself. Confident, graceful, yet dainty, powerful, she appeared at perfect ease and wholly in her glory, as she glided over the ice. Last but even in the most delicate and intricate motions, her style could be termed unfaltering.

Local talent also performed admirably. Mentioning a few of the outstanding numbers of the carnival were Bill Davies who received loud applause with his solo establishing act with his partner, Miss Barbara Wolever, and Jack Cook another who proved his fine skating ability in his single performance and in a comic number which received a great number of laughs from the spectators. For the first part of the program the surface of the ice was transformed into a world of fairyland when the old tale of Jack and Cole was enacted with all its color, grandeur and pomp, illustrated by the skaters and the costumes of the members of the cast.

Systemic Disorder Could Cause Foot Discomfort

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My husband's feet bother him in the evening, just before going to bed, and after he gets to sleep. They become flushed and burning like it, too. Rubbing them hard for about half an hour brings partial relief. Other times he has to get up and run cold water over them. This sometimes happens two or three times in a night. What is the cause? — Mrs. A. B.

The causes for buring feet make a long list.

Common ones are toxicity from tobacco or alcohol (or, at times, other things).

Next on the list is vascular disease of some sort, mainly spasm of the blood vessels, or arteriosclerosis.

Feet that have been frozen or frostbitten will burn.

Other frequent causes are: Arthritis.

Arch defects in the feet.

Faulty shoes or too-tight socks.

Obesity.

Mr. A- B. has found that massage helps him. This may be either by stimulating circulation or relaxing muscle spasm.

But the smart thing is to determine the basic cause, as are the most effective measures can be taken to relieve him.

People with foot trouble often do not realize that some systemic disease (such as pernicious disease or toxicity) can be the cause, but it is often enough, in general physical examination is recommended.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please explain "brittle diabetes" and diabetes insipidus. — Mrs. H. D.

"Brittle diabetes," or unstable diabetes, is a type in which there are wide fluctuations in the amount of sugar present, the more frequent in children or young adults. Regularity of meals, proper amounts and type of insulin and frequency of taking, timing of meals and care in sticking to the diet are all factors. About one diabetic in 15 has this "brittle" problem. This is diabetes mellitus.

Diabetes insipidus is an entirely different disorder which concerns the posterior pituitary gland, and interferes with water metabolism. The Merck Manual, a branch of the bank, is in charge for the present.

At St. Michael's Academy last evening the members of the Total Abstinence Society conducted a very successful evening the theft of a suit of clothes. The prisoner was found guilty by the jury, and the judge, E. J. Butler, imposed a fine of forty cents. The crown attorney was J. J. Murphy and the prisoner was defended by E. Lally. The constables were F. Walsh and D. J. Cronyn. Many parts of the play were highly amusing such as witnesses becoming confused in their evidence, some members of the jury falling asleep and a constable was accused of accepting a bribe. T. Winn was the clerk of the court.

Register Firearms

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

A proposal to make compulsory the registration of all firearms has been placed before the Ontario legislature.

Organization of outdoor associations across the province will espouse it. But the measure is a good one.

There was a day when, all over the continent, the citizens of the frontier had to carry a firearm any time they walked across it when it becoming dangerby an unfriendly civilization is an entirely different situation.

Firearms, no matter what they are intended for, are lethal weapons and should be kept under control. Figures from the United States indicate the number of deaths in states with compulsory registration of pistols and those without are remarkably revealing.

Texas, for example, has no compulsory registration of handguns and deaths from them in that state are upwards of 200 times higher than in states where registration is compulsory.

The registration of pistols, as recent events in Dallas indicated, does not go far enough.

It is difficult to see the objection to registration of all weapons. It may be a nuisance, but in the world of today it looks extremely necessary.

Feet that have been frozen or frostbitten will burn.

Other frequent causes are:

Arthritis.

Arch defects in the feet.

Faulty shoes or too-tight socks.

Obesity.

Mr. A- B. has found that massage helps him. This may be either by stimulating circulation or relaxing muscle spasm.

But the smart thing is to determine the basic cause, as are the most effective measures can be taken to relieve him.

People with foot trouble often do not realize that some systemic disease (such as pernicious disease or toxicity) can be the cause, but it is often enough, in general physical examination is recommended.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please explain "brittle diabetes" and diabetes insipidus. — Mrs. H. D.

"Brittle diabetes," or unstable diabetes, is a type in which there are wide fluctuations in the amount of sugar present, the more frequent in children or young adults. Regularity of meals, proper amounts and type of insulin and frequency of taking, timing of meals and care in sticking to the diet are all factors. About one diabetic in 15 has this "brittle" problem. This is diabetes mellitus.

Diabetes insipidus is an entirely different disorder which concerns the posterior pituitary gland, and interferes with water metabolism. The Merck Manual, a branch of the bank, is in charge for the present.

At St. Michael's Academy last evening the members of the Total Abstinence Society conducted a very successful evening the theft of a suit of clothes. The prisoner was found guilty by the jury, and the judge, E. J. Butler, imposed a fine of forty cents. The crown attorney was J. J. Murphy and the prisoner was defended by E. Lally. The constables were F. Walsh and D. J. Cronyn. Many parts of the play were highly amusing such as witnesses becoming confused in their evidence, some members of the jury falling asleep and a constable was accused of accepting a bribe. T. Winn was the clerk of the court.

Register Firearms

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

A proposal to make compulsory the registration of all firearms has been placed before the Ontario legislature.

Organization of outdoor associations across the province will espouse it. But the measure is a good one.

There was a day when, all over the continent, the citizens of the frontier had to carry a firearm any time they walked across it when it becoming dangerby an unfriendly civilization is an entirely different situation.

Firearms, no matter what they are intended for, are lethal weapons and should be kept under control. Figures from the United States indicate the number of deaths in states with compulsory registration of pistols and those without are remarkably revealing.

Texas, for example, has no compulsory registration of handguns and deaths from them in that state are upwards of 200 times higher than in states where registration is compulsory.

The registration of pistols, as recent events in Dallas indicated, does not go far enough.

It is difficult to see the objection to registration of all weapons. It may be a nuisance, but in the world of today it looks extremely necessary.

Shakespeare Will Never Be Found

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

No doubt swayed by all the hoop-la attendant upon this year being the 400th anniversary of the birth of Shakespeare, the Ford Foundation has announced a $100,000 grant to the Shakespeare Institute in Stratford for "scholarly studies into the life and times" of the great playwright.

It so happens that within the last few weeks, two new biographies of Shakespeare have come off the presses: one by a literary critic, the other by a distinguished historian of Elizabethan times. They come to diametrically opposite conclusions about the kind of man Shakespeare was.

I have read them both, and they are bad books — as almost any book about Shakespeare the man is a bad one. They are based on conjecture, surmise, supposition, inference, and academic arrogance.

Nor is there any reason to believe that the studies undertaken by the Ford Foundation grant will be any better. All the hard facts we have about Shakespeare's life are set down on one side of a single sheet of paper; everything else is guesswork, and will remain so. The Shakespeare racket is the scholarly equivalent of the one-shell-game, in which the professor's hand is quicker than the reader's eye.

In one of these two recent books, for instance, the author comes to the conclusion (based largely on the sonnet sequence) that Shakespeare was involved in a homosexual relationship. In the other book, the author just as strongly argues that Shakespeare's unrelenting masculinity. The truth is that nobody can know what Shakespeare's wife was little about the man.

•

It is precisely the characteristic of a man about whom he can assume any stance, any attitude; he has the profound ability to sympathize with all diverse types of characters; indeed, he cannot help doing so. Shakespeare's genius consisted in his ability to put himself into other persons' places, even when he does not like them.

Not long ago, to take a minor example in my own area . . . I wrote a column about alcoholics and the reason I thought they drink. What appeared was a overwhelming — especially from alcoholics who said they had never seen that explanation so clearly or deeply expressed. Almost all of them suggested that I write a book on alcoholism so know so much.

Actually, I have never been even a social drinker; liquor means nothing to me at all and never has. But I suppose that's no meager a talent as myself is able to project himself into the mind of another, and that many million times more effectively could a Shakespeare "become" what he was not? The man will never be found behind the plays.

Douglas-Home Pressed to Name Election Day

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Douglas-Home started a whistlestop tour of eastern England today under heavy pressure from his divided Conservative party to name the day for national elections.

He can choose any day before his government's five-year term expires in early November. May, June or October are considered the likeliest months.

The prime minister was believed to favor an early poll. But powerful figures in the party were advising him to hang on to the end.

Belleville Man Arrested After Assault on Girl

PICTON (Staff) — A 19-year-old Picton girl is in Prince Edward Memorial Hospital here with severe bruises to her neck and forehead, and severe burns to her cheeks as the result of a vicious attack on her about 12:30 a.m. Saturday.

In hospital, where her condition is reported as good, is Miss Audrey Allen, 20 Talbot Street.

Arrested and charged with robbery with violence, is Ronald F. Woodcock, 23, 45 Centre Street, Belleville. Bail was set at $1,000 cash, or two sureties of $1,000 each.

Picton police said that the young lady was walking home from the Regent Theatre when she was attacked from behind by a man who placed a piece of clothesline over her head. He was apparently trying for her throat, but the rope got into the mouth of the girl. She fell to the sidewalk, and it is alleged her assailant kicked her in the forehead, rendering her unconscious.

Her purse, containing three dollars and some change, was also taken.

She came to in time to see the man who had attacked her, and was able to give the police an accurate description of what he was wearing and the color of the car he was driving.

She made her way to the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Wright, with whom she lives; they called the police. Constable George Wright came and suggested they call their physician. Dr. John Anderson came, and while he was driving the injured girl to the hospital, she saw the accused, standing beside his car on Main Street.

Dr. Anderson circled the block, stopped at the police department, and Sgt. Scott Hale and Constable Wright went out and had the man arrested 20 minutes after the attack took place.

The accused will appear in Magistrate T. Y. Wills' court here on Wednesday.

Station Entered

PICTON — Ontario Provincial Police are investigating the breaking and entering of the Tyneo Service Station on Highway 14 just south of Mountain View sometime Friday night.

According to Roland Crooks, owner of the station, nothing was taken, apparently the thieves were interested in cash only.

Segregationist Again Facing Murder Trial

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Byron De La Beckwith, a crusading segregationist, goes to court today for a retrial on charges he killed Negro integration leader Medgar Evers.

The first trial of the fertilizer salesman from Greenwood, Miss., ended Feb. 7 with a deadlocked jury. The all-white jury had deliberated for 11 tense hours, finally splitting six to six.

Whites and Negroes alike gasped with surprise. Most had expected a quick acquittal.

Beckwith, 43, is accused of gunning down Evers from ambush when the Negro leader returned home last summer from a civil rights meeting. Evers, 37, was state field secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The slaying last June 11, Beckwith's arrest 11 days later and the impact of the first trial stirred deep racial passions in this southern state.

WILL BE SEARCHED

Stringent security precautions have been ordered. As before, spectators entering the small courtroom will be searched.

4. THE FOURTH NECESSITY

Do you provide it?

4 out of 5 fathers don't.

Like most people, your family probably takes life's first three necessities for granted . . . .

1. Food 2. Clothing 3. Shelter.

But what about the Fourth Necessity?

Doesn't it stand to reason that the Fourth Necessity is enough life insurance to guarantee that a family will always have the other three? Why, then, have four out of five fathers failed to provide enough? Probably because they think they can't afford it. They don't know how little the Fourth Necessity costs. Take a man of 28 with one child now only five. Just $25.60 a month for life insurance could mean the following benefits: If he should die tomorrow, not only will his policy pay a lump sum of $10,000—but, in addition, it will guarantee his wife $250.00 per month until the five-year-old is twenty. But the chances are good that he'll live, in which case he can use the same insurance for a substantial retirement income. Is your family as certain of its future? Why leave the Fourth Necessity to guesswork?

Metropolitan's Family Security Check-Up will give you the answers.

A specially-trained Metropolitan man will add up your savings, property and present insurance. Estimate your family's future needs. Show you what's needed to secure their future—and the most economical way to do it. Most likely you'll discover the Fourth Necessity—enough life insurance—costs far less than the others. Find out for yourself. There's no obligation—except to those you love.

Women Still Fighting For Equality

REGINA (CP) — Women are still fighting for equality, says Martha Gellhorn of London, who retired recently as secretary of the International Council of Social Democratic Women.

But today, the battle is for equality of opportunity rather than rights, she said during a visit here.

"Most women today are expected to have a knowledge of and an interest in politics. There are few countries in which women do not have the vote, but in many the political abilities of women are not respected as much as they should be.

"In England, there are not many women members of parliament, but they are active in local government, Sweden tops the list for women's political activity as 25 per cent of the members of parliament are women.

"In France, there are few women in government, but the remainder of the European countries have a number of women representatives.

"Ghana and Nigeria are the most advanced English-speaking African countries in the area of recognition of women's abilities. In Ghana, the government has established 10 seats in the government that must be occupied by women. It will do this for 10 years to try to establish a pattern of women representatives. However, many of the women are against this, as they do not want special privileges."

Miss Saran, on the last leg of a lecture tour that took her to the Caribbean, Venezuela, Costa Rica and Mexico before Canada, said it was wrong to say women will not vote for women in elections. This was nothing more than an old myth.

"In the first place, a woman has to be twice as good as a male candidate to get nominated. After that, it's just a question of voting for the best person, whether that person is male or female."

Too Busy To Be Lonely Says Guide

VANCOUVER (CP)—A glamorous young housewife named Judy Peake, who lives among the mountain peaks and helps guide hunters, came to town and said:

"I get lost in the city."

Mrs. Peake, visiting the city for the first time in two years, says she's not sure she likes it.

"All the buildings look the same. In the country the mountains and trees are all different and you have something to find your way by."

Apart from guiding hunters with husband Herb, Mrs. Peake belongs to the vanishing breed of Canadian homesteader.

The young couple, both six-footers with the outdoors in their blood, are settling a 1,300-acre ranch at Pink Mountain, near Mile 143 of the Alaska Highway. She calls it "a sizable section of moose pasture" where moose still roam and meat is no problem.

FATHER WAS GUIDE

Mrs. Peake was raised at Tete Jaune, B.C., in the Rockies, where her foster parents guided American hunting parties. Five years ago she met her husband who was working on an oil rig. They decided to ranch, but he still works at drilling during the winter.

Herb makes it home about once a month in winter—depending on the weather—and his pretty wife sometimes goes weeks without seeing another human.

"I'm too busy to be lonely and anyway the nearest neighbors are five mile away, a long distance when the snow is deep and the temperature is around 40 or 50 below," she said.

Herb and Judy augment their income by guiding hunting parties. On the trail she cooks, he guides, they both hunt, fish and handle pack trains.

Mrs. Peake takes in her stride things that would fall city folk.

"I carry water from the creek, stoke a stove and travel 150 miles to buy groceries."

She doesn't worry about meat supplies — just goes out and shoots a moose, and then cans it. Her pin money comes from shooting rabbits or trapping.

Asked how she manages to look like a model, Judy explained:

"I live in jeans and riding boots but as regular as breakfast I put on my makeup and do my hair, even if I know I won't be seeing anyone but the horses."

Mother's Helper

SOME rather beautiful "true" designs can be made by color-filling the spaces in a sketching outline on cardboard. Make a series of random loops with an inchard machine. Then, with crayons, color the "holes." This can be done on chalk paper, too. The smallest set makes effective gift wrappings.

WEDDING

FOSTER — MEEHAN

MARMORA — A pretty Easter wedding took place on Monday, March 30th, in St. Francis Xavier Church, Stoney Creek when Rose Anne daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Meehan of Marmora became the bride of Alexander Foster son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Foster of Glasgow, Scotland. The rites of matrimony were performed by Father Hugh Smith. Rev. Holland Mc. Louis Warren provided the wedding music and Miss. David Brunsea sang appropriate selections.

The bride, given in marriage by her father was attired in a floor-length gown of white, nylon net over lace fashioned with bell skirt with detachable train, enhanced by a nylon embroidered organza jacket with long lily point sleeves. Her fourtiered shoulder-length veil of fine illusion was caught to a crystal and pearl crown. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink sweetheart roses and white stephanotis.

Miss Mary Meehan of Marmora was maid of honor for her sister and Mrs. James Cosgrove of Havelock was bridesmaid. They were identically gowned in street length dresses of aqua blue peau de sola featuring blue organza jackets, blue mitts and shoes. Each carried a cascade of blue carnations and white mums. The headdress was a large rose surrounded by small roses and petals of the dress material.

Little Misses Susan and Gail Meehan, nieces of the bride were the flower girls wearing dresses of pinkish mauve, organdy over taffeta styled with bouffant skirts. They wore floral headbands, white gloves and shoes, and carried white baskets with mixed colored 'mums and sweet peas.

The bridegroom was attended by William McIlroy of Hamilton and usher was Bill Jarvis, Hamilton.

At the reception in Sidonia Hall, Stoney Creek, Mrs. Meehan received the guests wearing a flowered blue dress with cluster of plain blue lined with the dress material with pink accessories and a corsage of cream roses.

For their honeymoon to the southern states, Mrs. Foster (Mary) a two-piece knit suit of turquoise crepe suzette, a high crown matching hat, bone accessories and yellow rose corsage.

Previous to her marriage the bride was presented with gifts by the staff of Francis Xavier school, Stoney Creek at which she is a teacher. Also a miscellaneous shower by Mrs. James Cosgrove in Havelock and a linen trousseau shower by Mrs. J. R. Barker and Mrs. Glenn Anderson at the home of Mrs. William Meehan Jr.

Out of town guests were present from Buffalo, Niagara Falls, N.Y.; Hamilton, Kingston, Toronto, Orillia, Havelock and Marmora.

Daughter Feels Mother Favors Brother at Home

DEAR DORIS — I'm growing to dislike my mother more and more each day. You've probably heard this same line fifty times before, but she always appears to be "picking" on me.

My brother Has his way out of things and bothers me something awful, but I have yet to "bother" him. But when I so much as touch or tease him, he actually bawls and runs to Mom. Then she punishes me severely, such as taking away my allowance or barring me from a dance.

The one I'm really crazy about in our family is Dad. He's so human and wonderful and also, he doesn't baby my brother like Mom does. Dad is the kind of person everyone should meet. While Mom is strict and grouchy, Dad is sympathetic and logical. He even sticks up for me sometimes, when Mom is blowing her lid.

But there are times when I love Mom to pieces! She isn't really a tyrant or anything. I just think she should be fairer with me. What do you think? — TEEN-AGER.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR TEEN-AGER — Strange as it may seem, parents are human. There are mothers who side with their sons, fathers who side with their daughters, even while meaning to be fair.

Of course, it's much better if both stick up for both! Get that wonderful Dad aside and talk it all over. He might help her remember when she was young and in love with life; and then in love with him!

Perhaps it would help all of you to read what an outstanding sociologist has to say about growing up and all that goes with it; so I am sending you the names of some fine books on the subject.

DEAR DORIS — We have two girls, and live with my parents. We carry most of the expenses and we both work.

There always seems to be some friction. We agreed about who should do what, but this fell through. My mother does all the housework and when I get home I just sit.

Everything is done, even for my daughters. She claims I have nothing to do. But I enjoy doing my share. She always says I can do what I want, like baking or such, but it seems only when she thinks I should do it.

My mother and I used to be more like sisters, but she is getting so set in her ways and so full of complaints that I am afraid this love will turn to hate. — UNHAPPY HOME.

DEAR UNHAPPY — It is baffling to resist being "run," especially since it is done under the guise of helpfulness. Your mother feels virtuous about it. And managerial.

Either you must insist on having your part in things, or move out. For a satisfactory talk about this, you need the wholehearted support of your husband. Your habit of giving in to your mother is probably very strong.

DEAR DORIS — My daughter wants us to adopt the baby she will have in three months' time. She is 22 and unmarried. The man in the case already has a wife.

Our daughter can't bear to think of giving up the baby. Do you think we could take a chance on people knowing it is hers? It might look like her. — WIT'S END.

DEAR WIT'S END — It depends. Canadian society frowns on the unmarried mother; and it is unlikely you can hide the facts of the matter if the baby stays with you.

The new little life is the one which suffers the stigma — unfair as it all is. But each situation is as different as the personalities which are involved. This is why I would pack you off, pronto, to the Children's Aid Society of Belleville, Hastings County and Trenton, 63 West Moira Street, Belleville.

A trained worker can help you and your daughter to come to the decision which is right for you.

DEAR DORIS — The questions you reply to via the newspapers are many and varied. I have been wondering if you might give me some advice on a dental problem.

Do you know anything about the kind of dental work which replaces teeth with permanently installed teeth? I've read about it but judge it would be very costly. I have a good dentist but just wondered about this as I surely dread the task of wearing plates to be removed nightly, etc. — DREADING DENTURES.

DEAR DREADING — Don't borrow trouble. Keep your own teeth as long as you can; use as few of them as you must. Partial dentures, bridges, inlays, should be considered just as long as you have a single good tooth in your mouth.

My dental consultant says so, and he knows from long special practice. He also says that the technique of replacing teeth with permanently installed dentures has a long way to go, although the percentage of successes is increasing. The cost is still prohibitive, for many people. Your own dentist is your best adviser, when it comes to your particular needs.

Discussion of Tobacco Habit Features WCTU Meeting

The March meeting of the W.C.T.U. convened at the Y.M.C.A.

After the business session an inspiring devotional with the Easter message, was given by Mrs. Packman. She urged all to keep this spirit throughout the year as witnesses for Christ in their daily lives. She cited experiences in her own life, while doing social work in England.

The poster and essay contest has been promoted in the city schools and a film has been obtained for circulation.

Plans were discussed for the Consecon children's group.

The clip sheet was presented by Mrs. Way and a number of ladies on "the progress of the national campaign on cigaret smoking."

DEFINITE LINK

All Canadians do not accept the verdict of the Canadian Medical Association that cigaret smoking is a cause of lung cancer, after years of intense study of the findings of scientists in many countries that lung cancer kills 25,000 established between lung cancer and cigaret smoking and that lung cancer kills 25,000 Canadians every year.

One prominent member of the clergy is said to have claimed that reports indicating cigarettes were harmful was nonsense. He is reported to have said "No one has been hurt by smoking, and both smokers and the tobacco industry have a solid grievance against bad publicity."

Such an attitude does not lend encouragement by way of example to the younger generation, whom the great army of 16,656 doctors of the Canadian Medical Association are seeking to save by launching an all-out drive against cigarette smoking.

After the C. M. Association had launched their campaign they urged the Federal Government to warn the public that cigarettes do cause lung cancer — now a major health problem.

RESEARCH CAMPAIGN

After a day and a half conference was held in Ottawa the delegates were given a promise by Miss Judy LaMarsh, Health Minister, that the Federal Government would spend $400,000 on a campaign to divert young people from smoking before they start, and another $200,000 to find out why they start and what it does to them.

Fifteen members of the tobacco and cigarette manufacturing industry were in attendance.

The president of a tobacco company is quoted as saying "We will join any company to curb smoking among the young — any company that seeks to find out facts and doesn't rely on scare tactics." The tobacco industry rejects arguments that a definite link has been established between cigarettes and lung cancer."

It isn't clear how the money raised for the campaign will be used.

Many attempts have been made to end or curtail cigarette smoking. One hypnotist claims two-thirds of his clients go away with the nicotine habit cured.

SOCIAL PRESSURE

Films, clubs, sermons from ministers and lectures from doctors are other methods used. Social pressure with industry make cigarette smoking unfashionable.

"There is no substitute for will-power — quit of your own accord." Others depend on the power of prayer, the meeting was told.

"The church must concentrate on giving to the public the irrefutable facts, cold-bloodedly and without over-moralizing. Parent, teacher clubs are being encouraged to become non-smokers.

Ann Landers

Morning Sour-Puss Resents Early Sunshine and Roses

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I'm no bride. My husband and I have been married 14 years and the problem I'm writing about goes way back. I hope you can help me because I'm just about ready to crawl into with the coffee pot.

Orville is a lovely, kind, intelligent, generous person — from noon on. But heaven help anyone who crosses him during the first hour or two of his day. I've never known the man to utter a civilized word before 11:00 a.m.

I have made a genuine effort to be cheerful and sunny at the breakfast table even though at times I've felt pretty lousy myself. Orville's coffee is piping hot, his eggs are just right and the muffins and rolls I bake are just beautiful.

I've tried every device to threaten up this man in the morning, but I have failed. Help! Please! — END OF MY STRING.

DEAR STRING—Nothing irritates a morning sour-puss like a cheerful, chirping wife.

Orville's disposition is geared to his metabolism. Some people don't come alive until noon. Others wake up feeling simply gr-r-reat — but by 2:00 p.m. they fold like old-fashioned bridge tables. The best thing you can do for yourself —and for Orville — is to turn down the happy voltage and let him alone.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I'd like to say a few words about the women's editors on newspapers — those grand dames who sit on their thrones and decide whose engagement or wedding picture is going to make the page.

I live in a Southern city and if your great grandmother wasn't a descendant of Lafayette and your great great grandfather didn't plant thirty-thousand acres of cotton or sugar, forget about getting your daughter's wedding picture in the newspaper.

I'm sure it's the same everywhere. Ordinary, everyday folks don't have a chance. We are living in the age of the affluent society. I say nuts to these dames and their phony values. O.K., now you can throw this letter in the wastebasket.—RESENTFUL.

DEAR RESENTFUL — I've met hundreds of women's editors. They are the hardest-working, biggest-hearted gals I know.

In larger cities (yours for example) if the newspapers printed the picture of every bride or engaged girl, there would be no space left for the news or for my column. How would that suit you?

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Fix on that creep who said his office gave up in disgust and called a city girl when the dorm or sorority house telephone was tied up.

Before the telephone was invented a gentleman went in person to extend an invitation to the lady of his choice — or he sent a note by courier. A real gentleman would do the same today.

Any fellow who would let a busy signal defeat him must not care very much about the young lady to begin with. In which case who needs him? — MISS HARD TO GET.

DEAR MISS GET—Pre-A. G. Bell a gentleman had to choice. But times have changed. Hardly anybody sends up smoke signals — or notes by courier — anymore.

The way to capture a young man's interest is to be hard to get. The way to lose it is to be just a trifle too hard to get.

U.C.W. Meeting

WELLINGTON — U.C.W.

WELLINGTON — The regular meeting of the Wellington United Church Women was held in the Sunday School rooms recently when the president, Mrs. C. Hicks opened the meeting by reading a poem.

Mrs. J. Dick read the minutes and Mr. Gordon Parks gave the treasurer's report showing $1,201.94 on hand. Corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. Teskey gave her report. During the business discussion it was decided that the U.C.W. would assist in financing of the kids of the Sunday School room with plywood.

A table setting of the open Bible, Easter lilies and three lighted candles symbolizing the days of light and darkness made an appropriate background setting for the devotional. This was under the leadership of Mrs. R. C. Pyne assisted by Mrs. H. East which covered the time from the betrayal to the resurrection and proved most impressive. The Bible study was taken by Mrs. H. Pierson who was the commentator throughout with Bible readings given by Mrs. F. Elliott, Mrs. H. Nash, Mrs. Wayweil and Mrs. W. Teskey, Mrs. C. Cleave read a poem and Mrs. R. A. Thompson sang a solo. A poem was read by Mrs. K. Hubbard and a double duet by Mrs. B. Heed, Mrs. S. Yourt, Mrs. C. Tripp, and Mrs. H. East sang a number. In conclusion Mrs. Carman Burr gave a reading.

A film on India was shown by the Rev. Truax who closed the meeting with prayer.

Refreshments were served with the convener of the social committee, Mrs. Mac Greer in charge.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS — BY PATRICIA LEWIS

WIRE CURLERS NOT PROPER PUBLIC HEADGEAR

Hair styles may be sleeker and more head-hugging this season, but the apparatus for curling them is as wild and wiry as ever.

According to fashion authorities, this is the era of the "no-curl" look. So why, pray tell, do droves of women still parade around during the day with rollers festooning their pates like so many bumps on a log?

There was a time in the now-dim past, when a woman set her hair in the privacy of her boudoir and only her understanding husband had to see the results. But then came the era of the elaborate, teased coiffure, and the age of the wire rollers became a matter of public record. Since it was impossible to sleep with rollers studding the head, setting the hair became a daytime activity. Now the husband is about the only person spared the sight of the rollered-boy, and he's probably just as happy about the whole thing. But coiffing by daylight has had a startling effect in other areas, and it's enough to make your hair curl.

There was a time when the public at large sniffed when a woman went shopping in shorts or slacks, but this died down when the great exodus to suburbia started, and attire, as well as living, became "casual." Women have become so "casual" that many think nothing of going to luncheon and meetings, in addition to shopping, wearing rollers in their hair, usually topped by a scarf of some sort in a ludicrous effort at camouflage.

LITTLE OR NO CURL

It looked like relief was in sight when the fashion dictators decreed there was to be little or no curl this season. But, even to achieve this effect, hair still has to be wound around sausage-shaped wire cages, so we're right back where we started from.

Some women set their hair first thing in the morning and go through the entire day looking like wire-haired terriers. They unwind only when it's time to meet the 6:02 commuter special. In the meantime, the butcher, the baker and even the kiddies recognize mommie only by the color of her curlers. If she ever did let her hair down during the day, she might have a hard time getting a cheque cashed at the local bank without her familiar hair-raising signature.

With so many quick-setting hair sprays on the market, it's a shame that so many women don't manage to keep their beauty secrets to themselves. Appearing in public with curlers stuck out at all angles shows a certain lack of consideration for those who have to view the sightly spectacle and it certainly shows a decided lack of good taste and manners to show up at any business or social function wearing such outlandish headgear.

If there's just not enough time to get the hair in shape before going out during the day, maybe it would be worthwhile, for the sake of a well-groomed, well-mannered public image, to get a wig and give the whole problem a polite brush - off.

Glenhyrst Gourmet Desserts

by Mary Moore

(Second of Four Tastes.)

Hostesses who enjoy cooking with wine and spirits will welcome this recipe. It came to me with full - size sample from one of the members of the Glenhyrst Arts Council. As I mentioned last week, when I gave you their recipe for Stuffed Baked Peaches, it will be made up in large quantities to serve their visitors at Ches Gourmet Pavilion when they hold their Antiques Show and Sale the first week in May.

EGG NOG MOUSSE
(This is sometimes called Rum Mousse.)
2 eggs, separated
½ cup thin (18%) cream
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon gelatine
¼ cup cold water
10 tablespoons rum
¼ pint whipping cream
Beat egg yolks and sugar together very well and add thin cream. Cook and stir in double boiler over boiling water until creamy and slightly thickened. Soak gelatine in cold water, add to hot mixture and stir until completely dissolved. Cool until softly congealed. Fold in rum. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites and whipped cream and pour into serving dish. Garnish top with nutmeg or grated chocolate.

Please watch next week when I will give another Glenhyrst Gourmet dessert.

The following dessert is not from Glenhyrst Arts Council. It was created by my sister Peady. It is so beautiful and simple and flavorful it deserves a place in your gourmet dessert file. It is quite low in calories too.

CUSTARD WITH GLAZED FRUIT
Custard: 2 cups milk
2 eggs
3 tablespoons sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
Coal eggs with sugar and salt. Stir in milk. Pour into shallow baking dish. Stand in larger pan containing boiling water. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 1 hour. Cool.

MONDAY
Dinner Menu

Barbecued Hamburgers; Fluffy Rice; Spinach; Hot Rolls; Mixed Greens Vinaigrette; Lemon Snow with Spicy Custard Sauce; Coffee.

Topping: One package fresh frozen whole strawberries, 3 imported nectarines or large sweet plums, pitted and each cut into 8 crescents, 1 tablespoon sugar (or 4 sugar) tablets), rose or red food coloring (rose is preferable). Drain thawed strawberries. Measure juice and make it up to 1 cup by adding water. Heat to boiling. Add sugar or sweetener. Mix arrowroot with 1 tablespoon water to a paste. Stir in to syrup until thickened and clear. Remove from heat and add coloring to give it a bright rosy hue.

Arrange drained strawberries and nectarine (or plum) sections attractively in 1 layer over top of cooled custard. Pour hot glaze over evenly. Chill thoroughly. A sensation to behold and taste.

First Girl Graduates At Merryvale School

CAMPBELLFORD, — The first graduate of Merryvale School for retarded children to be recognized as such was Barbara Clue.

On March 26th a party was held at the school to say farewell to Barbara Clue who has been a pupil at the school for four years.

She was the recipient of some lovely gifts among which was a gold cross and chain from the teacher and pupils, other gifts included a mother of pearl Rosary.

While to some parting from associates may mean little, to Barbara Clue, as her teacher says, it was a day she will always remember as Barbara is one of the many who will never be able to face life in a normal manner and the four happy years are something to remember.

Club Women Waste Time Says Editor

VANCOUVER (CP) — North American women waste their talents and efforts joining women's clubs, says Mrs. Keshavini Zadeh, 43, who owns and edits a newspaper in her native Iran.

"Women in this part of the world are very active," she said during a visit here. "They belong to many clubs, societies and organizations, but these are useless—they don't have any worthwhile programs."

At one club she visited during her stay, she heard "one woman get up and say she was pleased because her husband peeled the potatoes before she got home. I don't think that is very important."

When her husband died 18 years ago, Mrs. Zadeh took over his job as owner and editor of the weekly Iran in Shiraz, a city in southern Iran.

North American women should take a greater interest in being housewives and mothers, as well as a larger interest in their own country, she said.

"Canada, which claims equality of the sexes, has only a few women parliamentarians. In my country, we have five women in parliament, and women only received the vote a year ago."

During her stay, she lived with a three-car family of three.

"This kind of society doesn't improve the world; it doesn't help do away with poverty. It just creates jealousy from those who don't have as much.

"There's nothing wrong in earning the almighty dollar—it's how you spend it that counts."

Doctors'

French border, unless called on their members to defend clinics and hospitals against "flying squads" of doctors trying to persuade specialists to join the strike.

All hospitals in the country were jammed with patients. Emergency hospital facilities were being set up by the army.

In Brussels, hundreds of civilian patients were placed in a military hospital.

The doctors threatened a complete boycott of the health insurance plan set up by the government unless parliament makes drastic revisions in the law.

Many of Belgium's medical men have fled to nearby countries to avoid demonstrations against them by angered Belgians. Police in the Dutch resort of Valenburg, where 300 of them have moved, ordered drastic security measures to protect the doctors from possible kidnapping back to Belgium.

Dr. Andre Wynen, spokesman for the medical profession, said in a Brussels newspaper interview:

"If Parliament does not vote the guarantees we ask, namely the suspension of the 26 articles we oppose in the law, we would ... ignore the health insurance system. Without us, without hpains, the health insurance would cease to exist. ..."

The system depends for its operation on the collaboration of doctors to fill out insurance certificates and forms. If doctors refused, the patients would not be reimbursed by the mutual aid societies which are the backbone of the health insurance system.

Belgium's doctors went on strike April 1 against government - sponsored legislation reforming the health insurance system—compulsory for all Belgian workers.

The doctors claim the law infringes on professional secrecy and will lead to socialized medicine.

Meanwhile, a palace spokesman denied a Belgian news agency report that a striking doctor in the coastal town of Ostende had refused treatment of the eight-month nephew of King Baudouin.

The agency had said the baby, Prince Laurent, son of the king's brother, Prince Albert of Liege, was running a temperature of 104 degrees when the doctor refused to examine him.

Weather and Ice Continue to Disrupt Shipping

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — Cold weather and ice continued to disrupt shipping in the St. Mary's River and Lake Superior this weekend.

One ship, the Algocen, lost all the blades of her propeller. The C. A. Bennett and the Consmar each lost a blade.

Damage in all three cases came as the ships attempted to push their way through the ice in an effort to reach the Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., canal en route to Lake Superior ports.

Eleven ships were having trouble in the lower river. Some were damaged, some were stuck and some were anchored waiting for a channel to be cut through the ice.

CHICAGO (AP) — The 68,000-ton Portadoc, sailing out of Fort William, Ont., arrived at Calumet Harbor Sunday to open the 1964 Great Lakes shipping season.

Chicago port authorities said the first Canadian grain vessel to clear the Sault Ste. Marie canals last year was the Elmdale, which arrived April 21. The canals link Lakes Superior and Huron.

The Portadoc is expected to take on 30,000 bushels of grain today and begin the return trip. She is owned by N. M. Patterson and Sons of Fort William.

Butter Subsidy Should Continue Says Official

NIAGARA FALLS (CP)—The federal dairy policy, including the 30,000,000 butter subsidy, should continue after May 1 with no drastic changes, President J. H. Hunter of the National Dairy Council of Canada said today.

The subsidy of 12 cents a pound, inaugurated in 1962 to stimulate demand, has resulted in almost perfect balance between milk production and demand, said Mr. Hartwick, head of the voice of the dairy processing industry.

But a surplus currently of some 120,000,000 pounds still persisted. Milk producers are paid 64 cents a pound by the government for top grades of butter. Consumers pay 12 cents a pound less at federal expense than they would otherwise.

In view of the delicate balance in the industry, Mr. Hartwick said, "no drastic policy changes should be made ... before a reasonable period of supply and demand trends it should be possible eventually to gradually reduce or eliminate government subsidies to dairy farmers and permit the industry to stand on its own feet. We should now be giving serious consideration to ways and means of adjusting the entire industry in preparation for such a development."

The dairy year starts May 1.

URGES HOLD OFF

Mr. Hartwick also urged the government to hold off the domestic market any butter in storage more than a year. Quality quickly deteriorated, he said.

The government continues to attempt to sell both fresh and older butter—with some stocks in butter-oil form—for export but has had to do so at a loss on any such sales since world prices are well below the support level of 64 cents a pound.

Mr. Hartwick was addressing the Ontario Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers.

His remarks were contained in a text of his address issued to the press before delivery.

Two Belgian Doctors Held After Child Dies

CP from Reuters-AP

BRUSSELS — Two Belgian doctors from Herentals, in northern Belgium, have been placed under "provisional arrest" following the death of a 13-months-old baby in a clinic here Sunday.

A court was investigating the causes of the death on the basis of reports there was a delay in obtaining medical treatment for the child, Eric Lonis, the youngest of a family of five children, as a result of the six-day doctors' strike.

The two doctors were in charge of the skeleton emergency service in the Herentals area organized by the medical unions to deal with the most urgent cases affecting medical attention during the strike.

Reports before the court said that Eric's father surrendered the family doctor who, since he was on strike, called the emergency skeleton service at Herentals, about 10 miles from the family's home at Tongerlo.

BABY DIES

The two doctors arrived and took the baby to the clinic at Herentals, where he died Sunday morning, according to the reports.

All judicial investigations on deaths which have occurred since the doctors' strike started last Wednesday so far have exonerated the doctors concerned from any direct responsibility.

Meanwhile, Belgian labor unions prepared a mass counteroffensive in protest against the strike by most of Belgium's 12,000 doctors.

Britain Offers Trade Plan To Commonwealth Leaders

By GEOFFREY ATKINS

GENEVA (AP)—Britain offered today to open its doors to duty free imports of primary commodities from all the developing nations of the world and to extend to them tariff preferences now only available to the Commonwealth.

The British offer came in a 10-point plan presented to the UN trade and development conference by Edward Heath, secretary of trade and industry.

Heath said that if the proposals were carried out, Commonwealth countries which suffered by sharing tariff preferences with other major industrialized countries to ensure this is brought about."

Heath told the 122-nation conference.

British sources said their government expected the United States and Europe to provide far greater access to goods from the developing nations, inside and outside the Commonwealth, in return for any such concessions.

Heath also stressed that where preferences are the subject of agreements with Commonwealth countries, Britain could not act without the consent of those governments.

The 10-point plan was outlined by a number of Commonwealth leaders in private meetings and talks with Heath. It is expected to be a major subject for discussion at the Commonwealth prime ministers conference in London in July.

The other main points of Heath's plan were:

1. A standstill in new barriers to the trade of the less developed countries in products which are of particular interest to them.

2. Removal of duties on tropical products.

3. Removal of duties on primary products imported from developing nations.

4. A reduction of tariffs on semi-processed and processed products imported from developing nations.

5. The ending of internal taxes and revenue duties applicable locally to products wholly or mainly produced in developing countries.

6. An end to quantitative restrictions adversely affecting the trade of developing countries.

7. Exchange of preferences between developing countries within the framework of regional economic co-operation.

8. Stabilization of commodity prices.

9. Supplementary financial assistance for developing countries with balance-of-payments problems. Heath suggested the International Monetary Fund use the facilities to meet the short term effects of such problems. But he also hinted that certain may increase financial aid to the poorer nations.

Heath reported proposals by a suggestion of underdeveloped countries that Gatt, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, should be replaced by a new world trade organization under United Nations auspices.

"The wise course is to ensure that Gatt continues to evolve and becomes a more effective instrument for dealing with the problems of the developing countries," he said.

Heath pointed out that Britain was a major market for all kinds of products from the developing countries. In 1963, British imports from them nearly $4,500,000,000 from them, more than 30 per cent of its total imports.

The three-month conference, being attended by more than 1,500 delegates, entered its third week today. The plenary session is to end Wednesday and the conference will divide up into five committees.

MacArthur

April 11, 1951, as the culmination of great differences in views on how to conduct the Korean War, Truman dismissed MacArthur from all his commands.

The general wanted to carry the war to the Red Chinese. The president believed that would risk dangerous spread of the war, perhaps into global conflict.

LONG MOURNING LIST

Among those who mourned MacArthur were:

President Johnson: His "courageous presence among us and his valiant deeds for us will never die."

Former president Eisenhower, who served twice on MacArthur's staff: "Through a long lifetime of service he earned the admiration and respect of his fellow citizens and the personal devotion of those he led in battle."

Former president Hoover, who appointed MacArthur army chief of staff: "He was one of the world's outstanding military commanders. He was also a statesman for peace."

From Japan, where MacArthur was Allied occupation commander, came expressions of deep regret. Former prime minister Shigeru Yoshida said:

"I cannot forget the great achievement of the general in rebuilding our nation out of the ashes of defeat."

IN COMA

Beginning last March 6, the general had undergone operations for removal of his gall bladder, his spleen and an eight-foot section of intestine. Since Friday night he had lain in coma.

When he died, his wife, the former Jean Marie Faircloth, and their son Arthur, 27, were grieving at the bedside. They had seen much history at his side.

For example, the night of March 11, 1942, with Japanese artillery and planes pounding Corregidor to a pulp. By presidential order, MacArthur left the Philippines, going aboard a PT-boat and taking with him his wife and son, then 4.

He vowed "I shall return"—named Corregidor as a "body grain" to be regained—and kept his promise.

MacArthur during his career made history. At West Point he averaged 98.14 in his studies—the highest ever scored—and he collected in war the Medal of Honor and five Distinguished Service Medals.

GENERAL'S SON

He was born in Little Rock Ark., Jan. 26, 1880, the son of Gen. Gen. Arthur MacArthur, a Civil War veteran. In the First World War, he created and led the Rainbow Division. He was gassed and wounded.

As war clouds gathered for the second global conflict, he was relieved from U.S. Army duty to become a field marshal of The Philippines' small trade those islanders for defence.

When the islands fell, he went to Australia and, as supreme Allied commander in the southwest Pacific, pushed the great offensives, including the island-hopping campaigns, that finally helped bring Japan to her knees.

As Allied occupation commander in the beaten empire, he became a sort of supreme-emperor—operating partly behind the scenes to foster democracy and a peaceful spirit. One Japanese newspaper once remarked that many Japanese regarded him as a "living god."

and Paul Hall, U.S. SIU chief.

Mr. Greaves' protest was the first public reaction by any of the unions that would be involved in an ultimate integration of the other marine unions now under trusteeship along with the SIU. Copies of the wire also were sent to William Dodge, executive vice president of the Canadian Labor Congress, and to the trustee.

Mr. Greaves said the agreement will permit the "freedom empire" within the SIU to continue under the SIU's executive vice-president, Leonard J. McLaughlin.

Under the peace pact, Mr. McLaughlin is expected to assume the presidency of the SIU, replacing Charles Turnet, appointed earlier by the trustees after the dismissal of Hal C. Banks.

ELECTIONS 'BOGUS'

Mr. Greaves said the trustees appear to be ready to accept "rigged and bogus elections" in the SIU, which made Mr. McLaughlin vice-president.

"We strongly oppose Canadian seamen being handed over from the Canadian bonded empire of Banks, McLaughlin et al to the American hoodlum empire of Hall," he said.

He charged that the real issue appeared to be whether Canadian seamen will be allowed to have a Canadian union. The decision of the trustees seems to be that they will not, he said.

Mr. Greaves said in an interview from Port Colborne, Ont., that he had not received any phone calls in two days. His phone rings but there is no caller when he answers it.

He said he had not complained to police or the telephone company yet.

Mr. Greaves was the victim of a severe beating in Vancouver two years ago. Banks has been charged with conspiracy in connection with the beating.

Road Salt Destroying Parking Garages

TORONTO (CP) — Road salt is destroying Toronto's municipal-owned parking garages by seeping into the concrete and corroding new steel rods and beams, Ald. George Ben said today.

A $500,000 program to combat the salt threat by waterproofing the garage floors is planned by the Toronto Parking Authority.

Ald. Ben said the garages are the latest victims of salt that has inflicted heavy damage on bridges and cars.

Cars carry the salt into the Civic Auto Parking, Nathan and Richmond-Victoria streets garages, where it drips with melting ice from parked cars. The salt seeps through hairline cracks to attack the steel.

Some seven or eight cars parked all day under heavy dripping ceilings in existing — have required repainting.

The parking authority general manager, Roderick Lewis said the floors must be coated with a rubberized material or "rapid deterioration will begin in seven or eight years.

In several northern United States cities salt had put garages into poor condition. Beams and concrete have been eaten away and expensive repair jobs were required, he said.

STIRLING

Honor Founder IOOF Lodges At Stirling

STIRLING — On Thursday evening, April 2nd, Stirling Lodge, I.O.O.F., No. 220, under the direction of Noble Grand Glenn Bush held a special open meeting of the IOOF lodge hall, Charlotte Street, in honor of Thomas Wilgo, who was born in Jamaica, Dec. 1792, in London, England. In July, 1817, he set sail for America and was the founder of Oddfellowship. He died in 1861, and has left behind him 42 jurisdictions and 200,000 Odd Fellows.

A good program was enjoyed with the Noble Grand as master of ceremonies.

A group of local Boy Scouts impersonated the Beatles which proved amusing. Consisting of nine Doudles and Douglas Faulkner gave tap dance and baton selections with Mrs. Carl Pitman as accompanist. Mrs. Glen Brooks contributed two vocal selections with Miss Marilyn Conley providing the accompaniment. The Jones boys and their mother, Mrs. Bert Jones, contributed several musical selections.

Mr. Lyle Couch rendered two humorous monologues Miss Mona Aide who won third prize at Brighton in the Belleville and district public speaking contest, gave "The Story of Electricity."

GUEST SPEAKER

Bro. Roy Tucker introduced the Grand Master, Bro. Earl Hall who was guest of honor. An informative message on several phases of Odd Fellowship, particularly on the plans dedicated to the memorial gates at the International Peace Gardens, and the visit which expected to visit the Odd Fellows and Rebekahs. Just recently an agreement was signed with the Johns Hopkins University to support the Odd Fellow professorship of ophthalmology.

The Independent Order of Odd Fellows is an international fraternal order which supports work in many different areas of interest. It maintains an educational foundation which provides loans to college students, sponsors a youth pilgrimage of high school students to the United Nations, operates a cancer clinic in Iceland, a leprosy hospital in Denmark, an eye bank in Connecticut and many other benevolent projects.

The gift of $625,000 to Johns Hopkins is the first request for research activity. A faculty member will be appointed and the new post will be known officially as "The Odd Fellow World Eye Bank and Visual Research Foundation Fellowship."

Bro. Charles Carter voiced appreciative thanks to the Grand Master for his timely message. The program closed with the reading of a vocal solo by Douglas Faulkner.

The group then repaired to the banquet hall where refreshments were served. A social hour of dancing followed in the upper hall with the music supplied by Stuart McArthur and Mrs. Mack and Miss Helen Morrow with Gordon Mills calling the squares. Thus closed a delightful evening of entertainment in honor of Thomas Wilgo, the founder of Odd Fellowship.

Garden Notes

Proper Use of Dormant Spray

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

A dormant spray is one that is applied while the plant is dormant, or nearly so. Many plants will not tolerate a spray which would injure the foliage and new growth. A dormant spray cleans up infestations of mites and insects and fungi diseases or will bring them under control. After a dormant spray, summer spraying is necessary in some plants, in others it will cut the seasonal spraying in half.

When the tree is leafless it is possible to cover the trunk, branch and twig completely with spray. This comes in direct contact with pests in their dormant stage such as eggs, cocoons and spores of fungi. There is little danger to birds and other wildlife when applied as directed by manufacturers.

These sprays are especially useful in cleaning up such scale insects as San Jose scale and oyster shell scale. These insects hide under a thin flat papery film which acts like a tent and protects the insect. Also for moths, red spider, aphids and various fungi such as those that cause black-spot on roses.

APPLY NOW

The time to apply this spray is late March or early April before the buds break. The temperature must be above 45 degrees Fahrenheit and remain so until the spray dries. This will be an hour on a fine clear day.

There are some trees that might be injured by a dormant spray and for these controls will have to be carried on with summer sprays. These trees are Japanese maple, Blue spruce, Douglas fir, Birch, Beech and sugar maple.

Lime sulphur is often used on these rather than an oil spray, but it is not effective against some insects.

There are three general kinds of dormant sprays (1) made of petroleum oils (3) dinitro compounds, (3) lime sulphur. Mixtures of oils have incorporated an emulsifier and these will mix with water. This is called dormant-superior miscible oil. Directions for mixing are included with container. Dinitro compounds (DN) may be (1) dry powder that can be dissolved in water or oil emulsion or (2) a thin paste to be diluted with water or (3) pre-mix oil combinations to dilute with water.

REMAINS EFFECTIVE

Lime sulphur is prepared as a suspension to be added to water. Once the spray has dried it will not wash off but will remain effective.

One spray per season is applied, never two. In case of serious infestations or infections carry on the battle with a summer sprays.

The dormant spray will clean up a host of pests and put you a jump ahead with garden pests. It is not a general purpose spray to be applied indiscriminately to the garden. Don't apply dormant spray unless you know the pest that is causing your plant trouble.

Summer sprays must be applied at the right time. Spray for scale insects when the crawlers are out.

Oil sprays are damaging to rubber. When finished clean hose, gaskets, by flushing water through whole system. Take equipment apart and clean thoroughly. Flush hose with mild vinegar, one cup to one gallon water. The metal tank is cleaned with four tablespoons washing soda to one gallon water. Scrub with brush, rinse several times. Assemble, flush with mild vinegar then clear water.

J. Wasylenchuk Freed of Murder, Starts New Life

BURNABY, B.C. (CP) — For the second time John Wasylenchuk started life anew during the weekend.

The ex-conflict, acquitted of a murder charge because a Seattle, Wash., jury refused to believe that a former RCMP officer took a bribe, returned to his home in this community near Vancouver.

He was prepared to return to a job he left last November when he was arrested on information laid by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and later extradited to Seattle over the protests of some opposition spokesmen in Parliament.

"I'm living again," the 32-year-old man said.

A federal court jury of five men and seven women found him not guilty of a charge of first-degree murder and robbery laid in connection with a 10-year-old robbery of the Seattle First National Bank in which a policeman was killed. He was arrested here while on parole from a life sentence given him in 1955 for the $28,000 robbery of a branch of the Royal Bank of Canada.

Wasylenchuk's main defence was the deposition of Ernest Clegg Neitzel, 63, a retired RCMP sergeant who said he had seen Wasylenchuk at his home in this municipality, 150 miles north of Seattle, an hour after the March 12, 1954, robbery.

Low Grade Oil May Be At Fault

By EUGENE E. MILSOM

A motorist may not worry a bit when his engine oil costs begin to rise somewhat . . . but if the red warning light or dash gauge also shows that oil pressure is slumping, he generally experiences a slight case of panic. Visions of budget-breaking repair bills start to haunt him. His fears might be well founded — these symptoms could be due to bearing trouble, for example.

Suppose, however, that these warnings are evident only in warm weather. Then, a low-quality oil—too often the choice when the car is an older model — can be the only trouble. High engine heat thins out this oil too much, so that it burns off readily, causing rapid oil consumption and a drop in pressure. Two separate, easily repaired troubles — such as a defective oil pressure gauge or relief valve — are also possible.

P. Q. asks: "A squeaking noise in my engine was finally traced to a tight fan belt. Do these belts tend to shrink?"

No — it must have been the wrong size to begin with. Fan belts tend to stretch rather than shrink.

From H. P.: "How would you diagnose a heavy dull engine knock which occurs when I step down on the gas pedal to accelerate or lift my foot from the pedal to slow down?"

These symptoms point an accusing finger at loose engine mounts.

W. G. writes: "What is at fault when the brake pedal goes all the way to the floor?"

Fluid loss, air leaking somewhere into the system . . or, excessive lining wear, if the condition develops gradually.

N. T. asks: "My next door neighbor gives his car engine a spring and fall steam cleaning. Does this really serve a useful purpose?"

A layer of grease, grime, dirt and grit on the engine can act as an insulator, thus contributing to engine overheating and to abnormal gas and oil consumption.

Power Squadron Conducts Exams for 17 Students

Winter is no hindrance to boating activities for one Belleville group.

And as ice floes drifted down the Bay of Quinte Saturday afternoon that same group was sending its winter activities.

Freeze-up is the signal for the Bay of Quinte Power Squadron to launch its annual campaign in the interests of water safety through study courses.

Saturday's events saw 17 pupils of this year's course write their exams supervised by squadron officials.

The local unit is one of the many offsprings of the Canadian Power Squadron, and, proportionately, one of its largest.

The basic one-season pilot course which ended Saturday here, is available to all persons interested in boating.

"More advanced courses in piloting and navigation — plus related subjects like seamanship, sailing and maintenance — are open to those who pass today's examinations," a local squadron official explained.

The program while emphasizing safety also is "designed to promote good fellowship afloat."

Among the more important events of the cruising season for all members of Canadian power squadrons is the "rendezvous."

Whether local or international the pattern is the same, with members competing for trophies, pitting against each other the knowledge gained through squadron courses.

Starting in the fall, basic pilot courses are usually held in one of the city's high schools.

This year's instructor was Austin Gonin, on hand Saturday for the examinations along with Edward Smith, district training officer, Dr. John Clarke, local squadron commander and Bill Welles, squadron training officer.

the armored car, stationed at a bridge outside the Greek-controlled village, and also mined a bridge connecting Pahyramos and the Turkish - Cypriot town of Kokkina.

The Greek-Cypriots sent in reinforcements. They have suffered a number of casualties in shooting incidents in the area in recent days.

ENTER VILLAGE

Greek - Cypriot fighters also moved into the Greek village of Alevga. British officers described this as an attempt to encircle Ayios Theodhoros, which also has been the scene of shooting.

Indian Lt.-Gen. Prem Singh Gyani, the UN force commander, flew into the area by helicopter.

Although the rest of the island appeared calm, the Greek-Cypriot press trumpeted the story of the capture of 20 British paratroopers by Greek-Cypriots in the town of Kato Pyrgos Sunday. Newspaper reports said the soldiers were detained for more than two hours for allegedly shooting four village fighters in an exchange of fire early Sunday.

An anti-British campaign appeared to be building up again. Some Greek-Cypriots are demanding a withdrawal of British troops. Under the UN plan, British soldiers will comprise half of the 7,000-man peace force.

Says Religious Life in Suburbs Strong, Vital

TORONTO (CP)—Dr. M. C. Macdonald, chairman of the United Church's committee on church extension, says it is unfair to label, as some critics have done, religious life in new suburbs as "superficial."

Speaking here today to committee members from across Canada, he said: "A major portion of the residents of our new suburbs want the church and its ministries. They are demonstrating a readiness to pay a great price to build edifices adequate for the programs of every division of congregational life.

"They give voluntary leadership in a manner that often puts the older churches to shame, and the people contribute to church funds and charitable causes to a degree that merits commendation."

He reported that in the 17 years since the United Church began its extension program, 223 churches and church halls and 289 manses have been erected. During this period, 214 new congregations were formed.

Dr. Macdonald said that since 1947 about 1,300,000 people have joined the United Church, and if the estimated growth of Canada's population is realized, 2,000,000 more people will become members of the United Church by 1981.

"With the prospect of such an increase, an average of 50 or more new church buildings per year . . . would seem a minimum requirement," he said.

Lines Quoted by MacArthur In His Farewell to Arms Come True 13 Years Later

WASHINGTON (CP) — Gen. Douglas MacArthur, in his farewell to arms in 1951, stirred the words of an old song:

"Old soldiers never die, they just fade away."

The famous line came to mind often during the last years of MacArthur's life and especially during the long night vigils at Walter Reed Army Medical Centre here where at the age of 84 the general was unable to win any more battles with disease.

MacArthur had been ill before, but he had fought back successfully, just as he had through more than 30 years in the military service.

Because of his advanced years, fears were felt for MacArthur when he entered Manhattan's Lenox Hill Hospital Jan. 29, 1960—three days after his 80th birthday—for a prostate operation.

But he rallied from that and went on to lead an active life, including a trip in the summer of 1961 to The Philippines to revisit Second World War scenes.

WAS ARBITRATER

MacArthur was spry enough in January, 1963, to accept an appointment by president Kennedy to arbitrate a dispute between the Amateur Athletic Union and the National Collegiate Athletic Association over eligibility requirements for Olympic athletes. He effected a truce.

The general accepted his advancing years philosophically. On leaving The Philippines in 1961 he commented that his visit there was his last.

Similarly, addressing cadets at West Point in 1962, he said: "Today marks my final roll call with you. But I want you to know that when I cross the river, my last conscious thoughts will be of the corps, and the corps, and the corps. I bid you farewell."

MacArthur, in the course of a dramatic life, had forged some of the proudest and most controversial episodes in the military annals of the U.S.

PLAYED KEY ROLE

For the first half of the 20th century, he played a powerful role in U.S. strategy in war and peace.

He won fame as a front-line general in the First World War. He was supreme Allied commander in the southwest Pacific in the Second World War. He headed the occupation government in Japan. He led the free world's forces against the Communists in Korea.

It was the drawn-out Korean conflict that led to his sensational break with president Harry S. Truman, who relieved him from his command.

The action set off an emotional and political explosion.

A tall, stern-jawed man of imperious mien, MacArthur's personality had a compelling impact.

"Though I am a Caesar," he once said, "I rendered unto God that which was His."

PRAISE AND GLORY

Even after their break over policy, Truman called him "one of our great military men."

President Dwight D. Eisenhower, who once served under him, commented:

"General MacArthur's name has been a symbol of courage, of patriotism of loyalty and generalship. Together these earned him a foremost place in the hearts of our people and in the annals of our military endeavors."

The general became a legend in the Pacific during the Second World War.

After leading the hopeless defence of Bataan and Corregidor, he organized the island-to-island campaign that victoriously carried American forces back to The Philippines as he kept his famous pledge: "I will return."

CAMPAIGN 'BRILLIANT'

Henry L. Stimson, then secretary of war, called MacArthur's drive "one of the most brilliant campaigns in history."

As supreme commander of Allied land, sea and air forces, MacArthur directed the ensuing onslaught that brought Japan to her knees. On board the battleship Missouri on Sept. 2, 1945, he accepted Japan's surrender.

"We must go forward to preserve in peace what we won in war," he said then.

At head of the occupation powers in Japan, MacArthur guided the reconstruction of that beaten country and the rebuilding of its industry and economy. He ruled with almost dictatorial authority.

The Japanese came to hold him in such high esteem that one newspaper said many regarded him as "a living God."

HEADED UN FORCE

The Communist invasion of South Korea came in 1950. MacArthur was named leader of United Nations forces in the protracted struggle against Russian - trained North Koreans, later reinforced by Chinese Communists.

The break with the president came over the grand strategy for fighting the war.

MacArthur advocated bombing China in what he called the Communists' "privileged sanctuary." He also wanted a naval blockade of China and an attack on the Chinese mainland with Chinese Nationalist troops.

The administration policy opposed such measures. Truman said they might start a global war. British Commonwealth forces also had misgivings. MacArthur maintained the steps were necessary to end a "bloody stalemate." Truman fired him in 1951.

Repercussions rolled across America. Republicans generally thundered against Truman's action, most Democrats defended it.

GOT HERO'S WELCOME

The then 71-year-old general came home to a tumultuous hero's welcome, in San Francisco, Washington and New York.

In an address to Congress, MacArthur said:

"It has been said in effect that I was a warmonger. Nothing could be further from the truth. I know war as few other men now living know it, and nothing to me is more revolting. . . .

"But once war is forced upon us, there is no other alternative than to apply every available means to bring it to a swift end. . . . In war, there is no substitute for victory."

Efforts were made as far back as 1943 to boom MacArthur as a presidential candidate. His name was put forward again in 1948 and in 1952 when he was the keynote speaker at the Republican national convention.

NO POLITICAL AIMS

"I have no political aspirations whatsoever," he said at the time. "The only politics I have is contained in a simple phrase known well by all of you: 'God bless America.'"

Upon his retirement from military service in 1952, MacArthur became board chairman of the Sperry-Rand Corporation at an estimated salary of $65,000 and got $19,548 in retired military pay and allowances.

He lived quietly in his hotel apartment in New York.

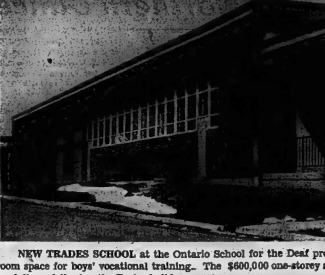
Friends and old army comrades gave him a birthday party there a few days before his 1960 illness struck.

A stream of messages from well-wishers throughout the world poured into his hospital suite. His wife, Jean, appealed to Providence to stop the flood of prayers.

GENERAL'S SON

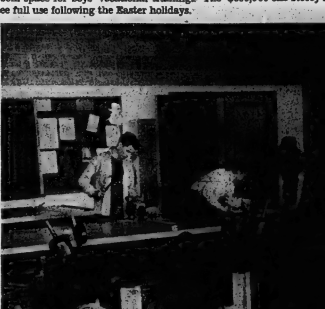
MacArthur was born at Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 26, 1880, the son of Lt.-Gen. Arthur MacArthur.

Appointed to West Point in 1899, he graduated as No. 1 man in his class. He had an average grade of 91.14, never equalled before or since.



He was the youngest division commander in the First World War and led the crack Rainbow Division. He was gassed and wounded in the fighting.

MacArthur served in The Philippines almost continuously from 1937. He returned to active duty for the U.S. just before Pearl Harbor in 1941.



MacArthur held the highest U.S. decoration for valor, the Medal of Honor. He also had all the other American medals and many foreign ones, but never wore any.

Police Officer Dies of Injuries In Accident

GUELPH (CP) — Constable Eric W. MacAulay, 38, of the Guelph police department died in hospital early today of injuries received Saturday when he tried to stop a car while he was off duty.

Const. MacAulay was shopping in downtown Guelph with his five - year - old daughter, Cheryl, when he saw a car being chased by Const. Carl Meyers in a police cruiser.

He saw the pursued automobile turn from one street to another and strike the parked cars. Const. MacAulay jumped from his own car and ran to the stopped automobile.

While he was trying to seize the keys or arrest the driver, the car backed away from the scene of the accident and dragged the policeman along with it.

Police said Sunday night they believe the driver of the car smashed up the window pinning Const. MacAulay's arm.

About 200 yards along the street, the fleeing car pulled around stopped for a traffic light. Const. MacAulay was squeezed between the cars, pulled free, was thrown into the air and fell to the pavement.

The car continued along the street, struck a traffic island and the driver jumped out and fled.

Ronald McEachern, 23, of nearby Acton, was charged with impaired driving, careless driving and leaving the scene of an accident.

WILL VISIT RUSSIA

ALGIERS (Reuters) — President Ahmed Ben Bella said Monday he would visit Russia in May and also would go to Bulgaria and Czechoslovakia.

OSD Vocational Building Realization of Old Dream

A long time dream of the part of Ontario School for the Deaf officials — a boy's vocational building — has now been realized.

Originally intended for opening last September, completion of the new $600,000 building was delayed and it was not until early January that classes moved in.

But there was still a wait for delivery of certain new equipment and it was not until just prior to the Easter holidays that the new structure went into full use.

The new vocational building includes space to teach carpentering, building construction, woodworking, upholstering, press work and offset printing, machine shop work, industrial arts in both metal and wood, auto body work and maintenance, general shop work and drafting.

The new one-storey building, approximately 200 feet square, is located north of the main building and west of the playing field. It is constructed of brick and concrete, with a generous provision of glass and contains eleven teaching areas, office accommodation and combination film room and library.

PLAN OPEN HOUSE

Open House will be held in June when visitors will be shown through the new facilities.

The dream of a separate boys' vocational building has been in the minds of OSD officials for many years.

But new residential accommodation and academic classroom space, and a new heating plant were deemed more urgently needed and the vocational school was forced to wait.

In the meantime a "make-do" policy was necessary for boys' vocational classroom accommodation and work areas were scattered in basement and other rooms.

In the past 30 years vocational training at the OSD has seen great advancement.

Industrial arts in both wood and metal have been added and the carpentering course has divided to become carpentering and woodworking, while more recently the course was again divided to add upholstering, and frame building and spray finishing.

The OSD print shop is one of the best equipped shops of its kind in the province and boasts of special presses, automatic machines and offset printing.

The former agricultural class has been expanded into welding, machine shop, small gas engine starting, blueprinting, horticulture, sheetmetal and janitorial trades.

The boys' vocational school has a staff of 12, headed by John W. Hodgson as supervising teacher. Mr. J. G. Demeza is OSD superintendent.

GETS WRONG IDEA

WILLIAMS LAKE, B.C. (CP) — A story in the RCMP periodical Quarterly tells about an RCMP officer putting a mannequin beside him in his patrol car to make unsuspecting motorists think he was on a Sunday drive. One result was an irate motorist here reporting to the officer's superiors that he spotted him entertaining a woman passenger in his car.

Entire Family Held for Theft And Possession

TORONTO (CP) — An entire family of five from Dundas, near Hamilton, was arrested by city police Saturday and charged with theft and possession of stolen property.

The arrests were made after police received a complaint from a downtown hardware store.

Charged were Ralph Henry Mitson, 48, his wife Lily, 43, his daughters Marion, 18, and Carole, 22, and Carole's husband Albert Waskan, 20.

Each was charged with two counts of theft and illegal possession.

World's Greatest Inland Waterway Is Losing Most Precious Commodity - Water

TORONTO (CP)—The world's greatest inland waterway is losing its most precious commodity —water.

Rain and snow falls this winter have been unusually low, and the result is a massive headache for shipping companies, hydro-electric power authorities and cottage owners throughout the 100,000-square-mile Great Lakes basin.

Lake Huron's water level is three feet below normal, at its lowest level since records were started in 1860. Lake Michigan's level is almost as low, Lake Ontario is down two feet from normal, Lake Erie about 1½ feet and Lake Superior one foot.

The level in the St. Lawrence River between Kingston and Lake Iroquois in eastern Ontario is the lowest in 30 years.

The smaller-than-normal precipitation has been accompanied by higher-than-usual evaporation. Scientists say precipitation in the Great Lakes area has been averaging about eight inches below normal for the last three years, and evaporation has been continuously high.

Capt. Bert Beazley, fleet manager for Upper Lakes Shipping Limited of Toronto, says each of the company's 10 large carriers is shipping 1,000 tons light every trip because of trouble getting into ports. Other fleets report similar difficulties.

Tourist operators, commercial fishermen and cottage owners have literally been left high and dry. Heavier boats will be forced to have to be dragged to the water's edge, from docks where the water once lapped.

At Collingwood on Lake Huron, the town's main industry, Collingwood Shipbuilding Limited, is faced with the prospect of laying off its 1,000 employees. General manager Alexander Webster said the lake "has dropped four feet in the last three years, and if it falls another foot this year we could go out of business."

The company is hesitant about building new ships, for fear there won't be enough water to launch them.

Cottage owners in the Owen Sound and Parry Sound areas of Georgian Bay are similarly affected by the drop in Lake Huron. And residents along the St. Clair River, connecting Huron with Lake St. Clair, claim that dredging in the river has brought the water level to its lowest point since 1934, exposing sewage pipes and rocky shores.

The situation is not considered as critical along the St. Lawrence, where water levels fluctuate almost daily. However, a severe drop at Prescott recently caused silt to infiltrate the town's water supply.

Hydro officials in Ontario are not overly seriously concerned. With less water to feed its network of power stations on the Great Lakes and Niagara River, hydro must make up the deficit by using most costly coal-burning stations.

Stratford Festival Company Taking Part in Celebration

CHICHESTER (CP) — The Shakespearean Festival Company from Stratford, Ont., in England for three weeks to help celebrate the 400th anniversary of Shakespeare's birth, showed their paces Sunday night to some 400 guests at the British acting profession.

They played Love's Labor's Lost, which opened the season today before a capacity audience in the 1,300-seat Chichester Festival Theatre, where the Canadian ensign snaps proudly in the breeze.

The second play in the group's repertoire is a modern - dress Timon of Athens set in a night club East London in the turbulent post-Suez period, with a jazz score specially composed by Duke Ellington, a great admirer of the Ontario company. He also has written a suite on Shakespeare themes in their honor called Such Sweet Thunder.

The trio of plays is completed by an English translation of Moliere's Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme.

Among the actors and actresses who have come from Canada to Britain for the season are Sunday to size up the Canadians was Dame Sybil Thorndike, who is making a suite on the ships backstage with the leading lady Frances Hyland and Bill Hutt.

The blonde, elfin Miss Hyland said rehearsals for the three plays had gone well but Love's Labor's Lost was the English play most people knew and it would be a special test playing it before professionals.

Director Michael Langham said he chose the courtly comedy for Chichester because it had been a "very happy production" in Stratford, Ont. "I would be played in a romantic, high-comedy style while Redgraves perhaps did not expect from Canadian actors.

He said Timon had the reputation in England of being turgid and unplayable but he felt the technique of putting it into a modern context would clarify the play and reveal certain strengths and values in it.

The Moliere was chosen, Langham said, to add "an international flavor."

Since arriving Easter Monday in this picture-book town tucked in beneath the West Sussex Downs, the 33-member company has been very hard at work with no time to visit the remains of Roman Chichester or explore the area's myth-haunted as a sailing centre.

They won't have much relaxation before the first week is safely behind them.

Under Langham's restless, Moliere-like direction, and a slightly more relaxed style of Jean Gascon, who directs Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme, the company rehearsed from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. each day.

Also living in digs at home in the Chichester Festival Theatre, a hexagonal modern building with a thrust stage similar to the open-stage theatre at Stratford and is the first of its kind in Britain.

"It is less formidable here than at Stratford," says Miss Hyland. "Actors living in Chichester has no balcony the audience is not overlooking the actors at disconcertingly close range.

But they find the backstage quarters cramped compared with Stratford.

Disaster Clings to Side Of Volcano in Costa Rica

SAN JOSE (AP) — Disaster in a dark grey cloak topped by a giant grey plume clings to the side of a volcano erupting in central Costa Rica.

The thousands who live off the green, gently sloping sides of Mount Irazu, the volcano's cradle, are looking apprehensively upward as the rainy season approaches.

Rain could mean death and destruction in the shape of floods and avalanches of a grey mud called lala (pronounced 'la-la').

A foretaste of this came to mountain-side dwellers last December. More than 4,000 were left homeless and nine perished in a giant slide of water and mud. Advance warning saved hundreds of lives.

With the April-May rainy season drawing near, fear of a repetition of such slides has overtaken the basic dread of a giant volcanic eruption. Authorities are preparing all available disaster relief resources to meet any contingency.

At the foot of Cartago, 12 miles east of the capital and nine miles from the volcano, bulldozers are throwing up four-to-15-foot earthen dikes along flood channels. "Transportation is being registered in a mass evacuation scheme. Two villages directly in the path of a possible mud slide, have been evacuated.

Irazu (see-rah-zoo) has been spewing a fine greyish ash and sand in steady eruptions of varying intensities and intervals for 12 months.

Oscar Padilla, head of the national planning office created to deal with effects of the volcano, estimates the entire national territory—19,700 square miles—has been affected in varying degrees.

The area of greatest harm lies within the 1,800-square-mile level.

central plateau, the national breadbasket where 60 per cent of the volcano's crater. Much of this is planted in coffee. The highlands once were rich grazing land.

Lala, a mud of extraordinary density, sometimes runs like water mixes with the volcanic residue. Impressive vestiges of the lala's crushing strength in last year's rains remain at Cartago, the town of 19,000 on Mount Irazu's foothills.

The grey tide, carrying boulders the size of small houses, left a scar more than 200 yards wide, miles long. Some homes that escaped total destruction show mud marks up to roof level.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

"That was the weekend that was."

All depending, of course, on whose side you were on.

If you were a Detroiter you'll be screaming "We Was Robbed." If you prefer the Windy City over wearing the Black Hawks livery, you'll shake your shoulders and say "One of those things—but that puck was in the net."

If you prefer the blue-and-white of Toronto you'll probably be chuckling the Punch Imlach fee "real-judgment" for tossing five forwards at a shorthanded Montreal crew and giving them the chance to score four goals.

If you're an O'Mahoney, an O'Feaver or an O'Herrington you'll be grinning and gurgle "Now, we're separating the men from the boys."

Don't believe it.

True the Hawks and Canadiens have what the boys like to say a "stranglehold" on finals berths but that's strictly for the oddsmakers and the boys in the back rooms.

It could be all over in Toronto and Detroit tomorrow night when the boomers clash in the sixth game of the series. The Leafs and Wings have that "hometown" background—if that means anything in battles like those—but don't bet it will be the deciding factor.

It's one of those "back-to-the-walls" jobs for both home teams. Desperation is a fine incentive. It will give added punch to Leafs and Wings and if they do go down their battle colors will be flying.

SHOULD TAKE IT

Over in Picton Saturday night Dave Jones' fine intermediate crew shoved a strong Delhi crew into oblivion with a neat 3-2 victory.

Davy has whipped together a fine squad and has them playing the type of hockey that should take them to the championship. They meet either Forest or Lucan for the title.

The Delhi club was a big lanky squad that did anything but live up to the "woodchopper" reports that preceded them. It was good hockey with the visitors wearing back in the final period in an effort to snatch the win.

ONE OF THOSE THINGS

An unfortunate occurrence marred the Belleville Minor Hockey Association peewee tournament here Saturday when a mechanical failure of ice-making equipment in Memorial Arena forced an abrupt halt to the proceedings.

A switch of venue was necessary and to the credit of all concerned the tournament was able to be resumed in the Napanee arena.

The coaches and managers of the visiting teams from as far as Ottawa and Bowmanville showed fine sportsmanship in agreeing to the extra mileage" and the tournament was played to its completion.

Appreciation of the fine gesture of Napanee Gardens manager, Walt Gerow, for his fine co-operation was expressed by BMAA officials. Walt, obligingly cancelled public skating and other arena dates to allow the Belleville association the chance to complete its tourney.

Belleville Beaten 4-3

Mimico Cops CNR Title

The C.N.R. Bed, White and Blues, representing Belleville in the senior C.N.R.A. tournament in Stratford on Saturday, were eliminated by a close 4-3 score by Capreol in the second finals.

Belleville won its opening game in the tourney, also by a narrow margin, 6-5 over Toronto.

Seven teams were entered in the day-long affair, in other first-round games, Stratford defeated Hamilton 6-3, Mimico nipped London 3-2 and Capreol drew a bye.

While Belleville got knocked out in one half of the semi-finals by Capreol, Mimico eliminated Stratford by a 3-2 count.

Mimico captured the championship with the club's third close win of the day, 2-1 over Capreol.

The game between Belleville's Red, White and Blues and Toronto was hard fought from start to finish with Jerry Mosher scoring the winning goal in the final minute of play.

Other Belleville goals were scored by Vern Goyer, with three, Bunky Risser and Doug Morgan. Coughlin, Bishop, Eley, Goyer and Lupinette had assists.

Pegg and Baggage each scored twice for Toronto and Clayton goe one.

In Belleville's 4-3 semi-final victory over Capreol, Junior Day and Elzier fired a goal apiece. Boutlier, Crabbe and Pointer drew assists. Capreol scorers went to Edwards, McNeil, Thompson and Haystead.

Coach Fred Carmichael and manager George Bishop were happy with the tournament and with the club's play, vowing to "win it all" next year.

The Team: Ray Mortimer, Jerry Genereaux, Vern Goyer, Bill Nolen, Bob Hurst, Bucky Risser, Elzier, George Crabbe, Don Bishop, Junior Day, Bill Coughlin, Jerry Mosher, Ron Lupinette, Herb Poister, Doug Morgan, Don Conway, Norm Boulter.

Blades Oust Denver 5-3

DENVER (AP) — Los Angeles Blades knocked Denver Invaders out of the Western Hockey League playoffs Saturday night with a 5-3 victory to gain a two-game total of 7-5. The Blades won the semi-final series four games to two. They will go into a best-of-seven playoff against San Francisco Seals starting Wednesday at Los Angeles.

Disputed Goal Gives Hawks 3-2 Win

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

CHICAGO (CP) — Chicago Black Hawks are sitting pretty today because a rookie goalkeeper Roger Crozier of Detroit Red Wings lifted a leg and there, for everyone to see, was the puck.

But, did it get there before or after referee Frank Udvari had tooted his whistle? If it went in after he played his music, it's no goal. The question now is: was it a legitimate score or, as some non-partisan observers here are saying, were the Wings the victims of some grand larceny?

This probably never will be answered to the satisfaction of all concerned but the National Hockey League hook will record a goal by the Hawks' Ken Wharram at 9:28 of the third period of Sunday night's contest before 16,586 howling and, possibly, whistle - tooting Chicago fans.

It will record that the goal tied the score at 2-2 and the Hawks, by courtesy of Stan Mikita's goal during the first half and later, left the Chicago Stadium madhouse 3-2 winners with a 3-2 edge over the Wings in their best-of-seven cup semi-final.

NO CHANCE

The Wings can holler from here all the way back to Detroit for Tuesday's sixth game but nothing can change the result or the controversial goal. Here is Udvari's version of the "whistle" incident:

"I blew the whistle when I saw the puck lying on the mesh on the outside of the net or inside. I wasn't exactly sure where the puck was at the time but I thought the puck was dead and so I blew the whistle. As I started toward the net, I noticed the puck was inside."

"Nuts," said Red Wing defenceman Bill Gadsby and his teammates. Defenceman Jack Stewart Syd Abel and Crozier.

"Wharram put it in after Udvari had blown the whistle," said Crozier.

'I LET UP'

"The puck . . . wasn't in the net when he (Udvari) blew the whistle," said Gadsby, "I let up when the whistle blew. Do you think we'd let up if the whistle hadn't blown? I don't know how the puck got into the net, but it wasn't in when he blew the whistle."

"All I can say is nuts," exploded Abel.

And, true to the tradition of winning coaches in situations such as this, Billy Reay of the Hawks wondered what the fuss was all about. "I didn't hear any whistle. The puck hit Crozier's pads and went in."

"I didn't hear any whistle," echoed Wharram. He said he first backhanded a shot and missed the net and then waited after the puck and backhanded it again. It hit Crozier's pads and went in."

Whatever it was, it caused all sorts of confusion.

HULL GETS ONE

The Hawks had opened the scoring in the first period on a powerplay goal by Bobby Hull, his first score of the series, when the puck caromed off Detroit defenceman Marcel Pronovost's back. Gordie Howe tied it in the second period on a low 10-footer, also on a power play.

Andre Pronovost had put the Wings ahead 2-1 at 5:12 of the third period on a backhander. The unassisted goal came 13 seconds later.

Wharram's shot from the right boards hit the side of the net. Crozier appeared to have it trapped with his stick and glove but the rebounding action he was sitting in the goal with the puck under his leg a foot over the line.

He was squatting there for a couple of seconds when he lifted his leg and goal-judge Grant Esson of Toronto pressed the red-light button. Maybe an experienced goalkeeper would have slid out the puck with him but that is conjecture.

Udvari skated around making motions with his hands.

Some interpreted these gestures as meaning no goal. The Hawks skated around him in a tabative mood.

He had a couple of consultations with the linesmen, made signals that a goal had been scored and the fun started.

LIGHT ON TWICE

Meanwhile, the red light had gone on twice.

"Udvari asked me if it went in and I said yes," said Esson. "He asked me a second time and I said yes again. I signalled the light the first time and when there seemed to be confusion I signalled again.

"There's no doubt the puck went in the net."

Gadsby wagged a big finger under Udvari's nose. Detroit players fanned him in at the boards and Larry Jeffrey made the mistake of pushing him. That called for a 10-minute misconduct. While this was going on, the Hawks were conducting their own war dance. They had the tying goal and were waiting to go on with the game.

Mikita's quarterback was the mildest of the night. a 20-foot effort that Crozier waved at as it went by. The Wings used five forwards for the next four minutes and increased this to six in the final five seconds by yanking Crozier for an extra. Chicago Stadium Hall held them out.

CAMPBELL'S VIEW

NHL President Clarence Campbell, who watched the game from the press box, said it appeared from where he sat that Crozier may have turned Wharram's shot into the net himself. That seemed to be the consensus of most experts.

This was the third time in the NHL playoffs this season that a playoff game by a 3-2 score. He lost in overtime to Quebec Aces, Montreal Canadiens in the opener of the American Hockey League semi - finals Wednesday and to Hawks in overtime at Detroit Thursday.

Crozier has the reputation of being one of the best goalies Hawks were shooting for this season and shooting at has effectively gathered in all of these.

He had taken over from injured Terry Sawchuk early in the second period of the fourth game with the Wings ahead 2-1. Sawchuk, in traction in a Detroit hospital, had a pulled muscle in his left shoulder, may be ready to take over Tuesday night.

Referee Udvari called 17 penalties, 11 to the Red Wings.

Howe's goal made him the highest point-scorer in Stanley Cup play with 137, one more than Maurice Richard of Montreal Canadiens. He has played 122 Cup games to the Rocket's 133.

Belmont's Wilsey, Beary and Gauthier put the game safely away in the early minutes of Stirling effort in the final frame.

Wins Easily At Gulfstream

'Northern Dancer' Derby Favorite

MIAMI, Fla. (CP-AP)—Northern Dancer, Canadian-bred and owned three-year-old colt, established himself as one of the favorites to win the Kentucky Derby in May by capturing the Flamingo Stakes Derby in easy style Saturday.

The R. F. Taylor colt, which had shown a promising form for racing United States dollars since being turned loose on U.S. tracks this year, won the 1¼-mile race at Gulfstream Park in 1:50 4-5, four seconds off the track record and well behind the time of 1:47 4-5 with which he grabbed the Flamingo Stakes March 3 at another Miami-area track.

But the colt wasn't pressed in winning by a length over The Scoundrel, a Rex Ellsworth entry. Dandy K. was third, Beaman Brother fourth and Greek Episode fifth.

This victory, 10th in 13 starts for the Canadian colt which has never finished worse than third, convinced most of the experts that Northern Dancer is the best of the three-year-olds in the east. He will be pointed for the Derby clash with Hill Rise, current best in the western U.S.

MAY MEET APRIL 20

Hill Rise, owned by George A. Pepe of Los Angeles, may fight it out with Northern Dancer in the Blue Grass Stakes April 20 at Keeneland Track, Lexington, Ky. Hill Rise already is a Kentucky Derby favorite. Lure, who trains the Taylor colt, will be taking Northern Dancer there in a few days. The $25,000 Blue Grass Stakes is a 1⅛-mile race, as eight-of a mile shorter than the Kentucky Derby 10 days later, in which Hill Rise and Northern Dancer are already rated the top favorites.

By winning first money of $76,550 Saturday, Northern Dancer raised his career earnings to $261,365, a record for a Canadian-owned colt. The record of $250,076 was held by another Taylor colt, Victoria Park, a two-year career and only 19 starts.

Nearctic, Northern Dancer's sire, won $133,364 in 47 career starts.

Northern Dancer was 1-to-5 favorite, and paid off $2.80, $240 and $2.20. The mutuels opened with a single show bet of $57,020 on Northern Dancer, creating a minus pool which the track had to make up in order to pay the 10 cents on the dollar required here. The anonymous $50,000 bettor picked up $5,000 in winnings.

The Scoundrel paid $4 and $2.20 and Dandy K. was $2.20 to show.

North Bay Whips Trenton In Tournament

ORILLIA (CP)—North Bay's bantam team took a 4-1 victory over Trenton's bantams Saturday night to clinch the overall title at the annual little NHL hockey tournament here.

North Bay had dominated the three days of play in the tournament, which involved a total of about 200 players.

In the deciding game, Greg Hull scored two for North Bay and singles went to Paul Farrar and George Mick.

Trenton's passing Welland team won the Atom league honors with a 4-3 victory over Toronto Marlboros for the second division title.

In consolation events, Barrie proved to be the only double winner of the tournament. Its bantam team won the consolation NHL title with a 2-2 overtime win over Dorset Park, and its entry in the Atom league beat Gravenhurst Park 4-3 after a 5-0 for the consolation crown.

Total attendance during the tournament was 2,000.

Weston Nips Kingston 6-5

Allan Osborne led the Dodgers third-period assault that wiped out Kingston's 4-1 lead. Osborne scored three goals, all in the final 20 minutes of play.

Bob Collins, Dave Parkins and Mike Pander were the other Weston goalgetters.

Frontenacs managed four shots in the Weston goal in the final period.

Junior 'A' Finals Opener

Habs, Marlies Tie 5-5

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The opening game of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A best-of-seven final series between Toronto Marlboros and Montreal Junior Canadiens might suggest a close series similar to the one between the parent National Hockey League clubs.

Sunday the Marlboros and Montreal dashed to a 5-5 tie in a see-saw game in which neither team had more than a one goal lead at any time. The NHL clubs—Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens—have also been battling back and forth with the Canadiens presently holding a 3-2 lead in games.

Junior Canadiens advanced to the finals with a 9-4 Saturday victory over Ste. Catharines Black Hawks to win the semi-final series 4-2.

A goal by centre Pete Stemkowski with 25 seconds remaining in the game earned the tie. Defenceman Bob Solling set up the play for Stemkowski's goal which was scored while Marlboro Gary Smith sat out on the bench in favor of an extra attacker.

There is no overtime in the junior playoffs and the first team to collect eight points is the winner.

Wayne Carleton, with a pair, Andre Lamaire and Mike Walton were the other Toronto marksmen. Leftwinger Bob Charlebois and centre Jacques Lemaire paced the Canadiens with two goals each. Andre Sabourin had the other.

The second game of the series will be played in Montreal Wednesday, with the third in Toronto Friday and the fourth in Montreal April 18.

Yvan Cournoyer fired three goals in Montreal's Saturday night victory. Defenceman Jean Boudrias had one goal and four assists. Lemaire and Andre Lacroix had the others. Ken Laidlaw, with a pair, Fred Stanfield and Ken Hodge scored for St. Catharines.

Next Sunday's game scheduled at Woodstock Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday.

Jack McIntyre, Ted Power, Tommy Wilson, Ron Hergott and Jerry Striegle were the Woodstock marksmen.

The Alouettes were led by Jean-Guy Thibault's two-goal performance.

Fourth game will be played in London tonight.

London goalkeeper Jerry Desjardins, a standout in the first two games, was called on to make 62 saves.

The Waterloo scoring was divided among Gary Phillips, Jim Lewzik, Rosaire Paiement and Ron Smith who scored two goals.

London scorers were Mike Corrigon, Ian Lightfoot and Bob Cook.

Aces Down Hornets 4-1, Lead 3-0

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Quebec Aces need one more victory against Pittsburgh Hornets to take a holiday prior to the American Hockey League finals. Their first three performances in the best-of-seven semi - finals indicate the rest may not be far off.

The Aces dropped the Hornets 4-1 Sunday to take a 3-0 lead in the series. Quebec can wrap it up Wednesday with a victory in Pittsburgh.

Meanwhile Cleveland Barons and Hershey Bears, winners in a quarter-final round, open a best-of-five semi-final set Tuesday.

Saturday, Cleveland defeated Rochester Americans 4-1 to take a best-of-three series 2-0. Hershey advanced to the semi-finals with a 3-2 win over Providence Reds, capturing that best-of-three series 2-1.

Punch Imlach Strategy Fails

Habs Win 4-2

By TED BLACKMAN

MONTREAL (CP)—Like the monster in the Grade B horror movie that finally turns on its creator, Punch Imlach's awesome power play pulled an about - face, jeopardizing Toronto's hopes for a third straight Stanley Cup.

Imlach's stratagem of five forwards against the short-handed condition corrected for four goals last Thursday but backfired Saturday night. The Montreal Canadiens took advantage of that act of sabotage for a 4-2 victory over the Leafs and a firm 3-2 grip in their best-of-seven semi-final playoff.

The Canadiens, now 13-to-8 favorites to win the series, travel to Toronto by train Monday afternoon for Tuesday's sixth game. If a seventh is necessary, it will be played Thursday in Montreal.

The Leafs power manoeuvre features forwards manning the point instead of defencemen but Imlach explains there is no defensive sacrifice because Swift Dave Keon can cover roaming penalty - killers and intercept breakaways.

KELLY REPLACED KEON

Keon, however, isn't at his greatest these days and Imlach removed him from the power play last season. Inserted 36-year-old Red Kelly in his place. At the key point Saturday night stood a winded Andy Bathgate, who had just finished a regular shift.

With Dave Balon off for elbowing Canadiens penalty-killer Jim Roberts stole the puck from the Leafs power-play combo and fed a perfect pass to Bobby Rousseau, who had been cruising outside the blueline.

Rousseau outraced Bathgate and Kelly to the Toronto goal and beat Johnny Bower for the winning goal at 19:35 of the second period. The Canadiens held the 3-2 lead until Claude Provost added another, into an empty net, at 19:30 of the finale.

"Jim gave me a perfect pass," Rousseau said afterwards. "Bower moved to his right side — he knew that's where I usually shoot — but left Provost an open spot on his left. Somebody tried to pokecheck me but didn't hit my stick hard enough and I managed to shoot into that little opening."

ROUSSEAU ENDS DROUGHT

Rousseau's goal — his first in 11 games — and an assist, plus his outstanding play both ways and creditable penalty-killing removed him from the Canadiens doghouse.

"I was just up for this game more than I have been in quite a while. A couple of little talks this afternoon had something to do with it."

The "talks" were discussions with coach Toe Blake and club vice-president Kenneth Reardon, who have not been too enthused with Rousseau's uninspired play in this series.

Don McKenney scored both Toronto goals by tipping in teammates' shots. He deflected Andy Bathgate's drive to give the Leafs a 1-0 first-period lead and George Armstrong's shot to tie the game 2-2 in the second.

Dave Balon beat Bower early in the second with a backhander and emergency replacement Claude Larose scored his first playoff goal to put Montreal ahead 3-1 nine minutes later.

COACHES AGREE

"They just outhustled us," Imlach said and Blake agreed. "It was our best game in this series. Everyone improved."

Larose will remain with the team and Ralph Backstrom will continue to centre Bernie Geoffrion and John Ferguson in place of injured Jean Beliveau. The latter won't play until he's 100 per cent fit, says Blake, and the chances of him reaching that condition by Tuesday are "slim."

"I'll see at practice Tuesday," Beliveau added.

Imlach concedes the Leafs face a considerable task. "But, he said, "I told them (the Leafs) after the game if they have the guts or determination or heart or whatever you call it of a championship team, now is the time to prove it or forever hold their peace."

NO REBOUND — Goalie Johnny Bower of Toronto Maple Leafs stops a high drive from the blue line in the fifth game of the Stanley Cup best-of-seven semi-final series in Montreal Saturday night. John Ferguson (22) of Montreal Canadiens looks for a rebound that never came. Montreal won the game 3-2 to take a one-game lead in the series. (CP Wirephoto)

Win Second "D" Title In Row

Wellington Juvenile Champs

PICTON (Staff) — Faced by the hat trick scoring of Don McNeill, the Wellington Juveniles snatched the visiting Blyth Juveniles by a 4-1 score to win the OMHA Juvenile championships. Wellington won the best of three series, two games to none.

It was all Wellington as Don McNeill, Bill Gallagher and Alan Channell fired first period markers, with Ken Dack lifting the lone tally for Blyth.

Don McNeill fired his second, Larry McKenzie fired one to give the winners a 3-1 edge going into the last period.

McNeill fired his hat trick in the last period. McKenzie added another and Bill Gallagher added his second of the game to round out the scoring.

Blyth took the long end of 23 minor penalties called.

On Monday night (tonight) the Wellington Juniors go after the OHA Junior "D" honors for Eastern Ontario, and oddly enough, the same team will form the Junior D team.

They have already played one game with Stouffville which they lost by a close 3-2 score, but the OHA ruled the game off as Stouffville used an ineligible player.

What was to have been a best of seven series, now becomes a best of five series, with the first game here tonight.

Winnipeg Nips Port Arthur 5-3

FORT WILLIAM (CP) — Chuck Lumsden scored a goal in each period Sunday to lead Winnipeg Maroons to a 5-3 victory over Port Arthur Bearcats in the Western Canada Allan Cup semi-final.

The victory, gave the 1962 Allan Cup finalists a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven playoff.

Bill Johnson and Elliott Chorley also tallied for Winnipeg. Ken Harris, Gary Veneruzzo and Herb McCubbin scored for the Bearcats.

Wins Toronto Five-Mile Race

TORONTO (CP) — Dave Ellis of Toronto Olympic Track Club streaked across the finish line Saturday to win the Toronto Gladstone Athletic Club's annual five mile road race.

There were a number of outstanding youngsters in action on both teams and only the unfortunate ice incident in Belleville marred what would have been a top-notch tournament. All the teams had their share of supporters.

Ajax Nips Belleville

Bowmanville Wins Peewee Tournament

Bowmanville blanked Ajax 3-0 and Kingston Fort Henry edged 4-3 on the way to the championship in the second annual B.M.H.A. Peewee hockey tournament played here and in Napanee on Saturday.

While Bowmanville grabbed top honors, the favored Ottawa Alta Vista squad settled for the consolation title and Belleville MacCormacks lost a tough final-round 4-3 decision to the strong Ajax entry.

A break in a brine pipe turned Belleville Memorial Arena's ice surface into slush after five of the journey's ten games had been played, almost forcing the cancellation of the remaining games.

Tournament officials attempted to secure several district rinks before Napanee Arena manager Walt Gerow agreed to cancel earlier commitments to allow the teams to finish up there. He postponed an exhibition game and public skating.

Rob Burrows, local arena manager, said that the break down marked the end of the hockey season as far as the Belleville Arena is concerned.

The host MacCormack squad bowed out of contention when they blew a 3-1 lead and dropped a 4-3 decision to Ajax. Late penalties played a major part in the local team's defeat.

Belleville built the 3-1 lead on goals by Darryl Demers, Dennis MacCormack and Fred Stickle. MacCormack also had an assist. Peter Gunn potted the first two Ajax markers and goals by Rich McLean and Nelson Matamontro blasted Belleville and put Ajax in the finals.

Wayne McRoberts, Rich Ellis and Wayne Paeden fired a goal apiece to give Bowmanville the titular battle. O'Brien, Paeden, Wayne Donoghue and Tom Tamblyn earned assists.

Ajax's two tough battles earlier took too much out of the club for it to maintain the hot pace against the well-balanced Bowmanville crew. Bowmanville was presented with the Harry Rollins champion ship trophy.

Tom Simpson also took the Most Valuable Player award back to Bowmanville for his excellent play throughout the tournament. He received the George H. Carver Trophy. Gananoque goalie John Wing, who saved his club from more lopsided defeats, received the top goalie's award.

Wayne McRoberts scored twice and Ken Tamblyn equalled the feat as Bowmanville whitewashed the defending champion Kingston Fort Henry Heights team 4-0 to reach the finals. Ellis drew two assists.

In the consolation finals, for the Booth Radio - TV trophy, Ottawa's Alta Vista crew nipped Napanee 5-4 in the finals, sparked by Bill Potter's two goals. John Leavitt, Peter Gaw and Dale Doran also scored. Napanee goals went to Wayne Elder, Garry Brinklow, David Johnston and Scott Knapp.

Ottawa dumped Gananoque 6-1 to qualify for the consolation finals while Napanee had ousted Picton 7-1 in the last game played on Belleville ice.

Brinklow and Johnston each scored twice for Napanee. Terry Shortis, Knapp and Murray Johnston added. Robert Ferguson got Picton's lone goal.

Ottawa's half dozen goals went to as many players, one each for Gaw, Ray Monette, Rick Reynolds, Steve Hull, Bob Lackey and Potter. Terry McLaughlan scored Gananoque's only goal of the tourney.

In the opening round: Belleville blanked Gananoque 3-0 but the score would have been much higher except for John Wing's fine puckstopping. Terry Meagher scored two goals and Dennis McCormack bagged the other. Bruce Lattimer and Chuck Powell drew assists.

Bowmanville whipped Picton 8-5, paced by Tom Simpson's three goals. Bruce Welsh and Murray Carter each scored two and Tamblyn had one. David Wright and Gary Joka were the Picton marksmen.

Ajax surprised Ottawa 6-3, led by Matamotto with two goals. Ken Gyles, James LaBar, F. Crumb and A. Mitchell notched the others. Bill Potter had a pair and Mark D'Amico one for Ottawa.

Bill Bruyea, with two goals, and Pete Visceral with one gave Fort Henry its 3-2 win over Napanee. Neil Paul and Brinklow scored for Napanee.

Picton Ints. Oust Delhi

PICTON (Staff) — The Picton Intermediates are on the way to the Ontario Hockey Association Intermediate "B" title.

They are on the way, but if they don't play better hockey than they did on Saturday night in eliminating a stubborn Delhi team 3-2, they won't win the title.

The Delhi 88's fighting an uphill battle to try and get another game on their home ice, gave it a real "College try" and put for some sensational work in the part of Tom O'Hallorn in the Picton nets, they would have been forced to drive back there for another game. Picton won the semi-final best of 5 — 3 games to none.

Picton fired three markers in the first period, and were hanging on the ropes in the other two frames, as Delhi put up some of the most stubborn resistance seen on local ice this season.

Rob Hull opened the scoring at the 06 mark with Shaker Baker getting an assist. Picton's playing coach Davy Jones who had a tremendous two-way game made it 2-0 when he tipped in a pass from Keith MacDonald at the 7.01 mark. Lionel Botly set up the second play.

Keith MacDonald, who was a stalwart on the defense all night fired it 3-1 when he fired home perfect passes from Larry Pero and Doug Murray at the 15.55 mark.

Dan Barratt finally beat O'Halloran at the 15.50 mark of the middle stanza when he converted passes from Earl O'Neill and Don Hoskins, for the only score of the second period.

Trailing 3-1 and with the clock running out, Delhi pulled Sonny Pennington from the pipes for a sixth attacker and were rewarded at the 19.55 mark when Floyd Beets knocked one past O'Halloran after taking passes from Art Partlo and Roger Heshawka.

Meanwhile in Lindsay Saturday night, Picton Merchants bowed out of the OHA Junior "C" playdown picture by losing a 6-3 decision to the Lindsay Lancers.

Lindsay captured the best-of-seven series four games to one, winning four consecutive games after Picton took the series opener in overtime.

Trenton Splits Decisions In Hoop Tourney

Trenton Wilsons won one and lost one in the O.A.B.A. Intermediate "B" basketball championship tournament in Oakville Saturday — but they picked the wrong one to lose.

The Wilsons defeated Aylmer 61-77 in the club's first game and later dropped a 79-57 decision to Waterdown.

Meanwhile Aylmer came back to defeat North Bay by ten points and then topped Waterdown 69-58 to win the championship. Waterdown, earlier defeated North Bay by a 66-60 margin.

Trenton club officials were not too happy with the tournaments arrangements, which allowed a club to lose its first game but still wind up capturing the championship. A team official also said that lack of conditioning and long games played a major part in the Wilson's elimination.

Trenton came from behind on several occasions before getting the win over Aylmer. It was 33-33 at half time and the losers moved in front early in the second half. Trenton took a four-point lead in the game's final minutes and held Aylmer at bay.

Wilf Borden, best of the Trenton players during the day's play, bagged 30 points to pace the attack. Bob Moore was close behind with 28 and Terry McCabe hit for 13. Fahl with 24, and Fortye, with 17, starred for Aylmer.

Waterdown took advantage of a poor game by Trenton to eliminate the Wilsons. The winners led 35-26 at half time and never looked back.

Borden struck for 18 points in this one while Moore was held to 11. Alex Savickis collected 22 for Waterdown and Dick Andrews got 14.

Members of the Trenton club were: Gil Bambers, Wilf Borden, Bob Moore, Terry McCabe, Bob Burleigh, Don Smith, Doug Rose, Warren Whitley and Arlen Burleigh.

Many Tournaments Close

Minors Declare Champs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ingersoll captured its first championship in the Young Canada Week peewee hockey tournament at Cooperstown during the weekend and a lot of the credit was due to the combined coaching efforts of John Bartram and his wife Edith.

Ingersoll blanked Exeter 3-0 to win the B series title—one of five championships decided at the tournament.

Bartram drives a highway transport out of Cookville week days and his wife looks after the team while he's on the road.

"We would have had a better record over the season (29 wins, 13 losses and five ties) except for the mumps which one of our better players had during the Ontario Minor Hockey Association playoffs," said Bartram.

Earlier in the tournament, one of a number featuring minor hockey week in Ontario-Becton captured its D series championship by downing Belmont 5-1 while Wingham trounced Ayr 4-1 for the C series crown.

Windsor Riverside took the A series title Friday and Toronto Scarborough won the AA championship.

The victory over Belmont in the D series was a gratifying one for Beeton supporters whose team lost in a best-of-three series to Belmont for the OMHA peewee title just before the Goderich tournament.

In semi-final games Saturday, Exeter defeated Streetsville 4-1, Beeton walloped Ripley 14-0, Belmont downed Paisley 6-1, Wingona whipped Harriston 4-3 and Ayr dumped Dresden 6-2.

UPSETS AT BRAMPTON

It was a day of upsets in the Brampton novice tournament, climaxed by Barrie's unbeaten Detroit 5-1 to win the grand championship final. Barrie had previously won the B category title, edging the favored Oakridge Acres 3-1 and then eliminating Woodbridge 8-0 in the semi-final.

Detroit upset Toronto Bay Robinson 4-3 in an overtime match to capture the A crown. In the championship game, Canals Detroit squeaked by Hespeler 5-4.

Ken Hammerman paced Barrie's victory with a pair of goals. Others came from Brian Kinsella, Gerald Raycroft and Murray Bowen.

Woodbridge entered the grand championship semi-final with a 3-1 decision over Rimvale. Woodbridge won the D series crown. Hespeler defeated Milton 6-3 to capture the C series title.

John Saville scored a pair of goals to lead Toronto to the grand championship laurels at the Georgetown international bantam tournament with a 5-3 win over Sudbury Garson. Billy Fifield, Gary King and Gary Coulter had one each, with Garson goals going to Mick Tweedy and Guy Delparte.

WINNIPEG LOSES

Most exciting game of the week-long competition came in Toronto's 3-3 overtime victory over Winnipeg for the A series championship. Alan Demchuck scored at 2:33 of the second-five-minute overtime session.

Glanworth in the D series and Garson in the B series also won division titles. Glanworth defeated Hespeler 6-3 and Garson ousted Galt 5-1. Other Saturday games saw Markham edge Leamington 3-1 to win the C series title, Garson shade Lanworth 4-3 and Toronto whitewash Markham 11-0. The latter two games were in the grand championship semi-final.

Parry Sound won the grand championship with a 4-1 win over Bradford in the finals of the Little NHL provincial tournament in Parry Sound. Larry Fleetham led Parry Sound scorers with two goals. He also counted four of the five goals in his team's 5-2 semi-final win over Fort Hope.

Huntsville blanked Thorold 6-0 to capture the AHL championship while Pembrokeshire record a 4-2 win over Newmarket in winning the Junior A crown.

In semi - finals, Bradford dumped Orangeville 7-2 in the NHL, Huntsville downed Orangeville 5-1 and Thorold edged Collingwood 3-2 in the AHL; Penetanguishene blanked Orangeville 3-0 and Newmarket shaded Bowmanville 3-2 in the Junior A.

Bulldogs Even Series With Komets

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toledo Blades and Fort Wayne Komets, who finished first and second respectively in the International Hockey League this season, are having a tough time with their opponents in the best-of-seven semi-finals.

The Blades, who came on strong to shade Fort Wayne for the league championship, Saturday night were forced to go to edge the third-place Fort Huron Flags 3-1. The win gave the Blades a 2-1 lead with the fourth set for Fort Hyron Tuesday.

The Komets looked to be in for an easy time Saturday when they knocked off the fourth-place Windsor Bulldogs 8-1. However, the Bulldogs came storming back Sunday to win 3-1 and even the series at two wins apiece. The fifth game will be played in Fort Wayne Tuesday.

Omaha Dumps Rangers 11-0

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Omaha Knights, apparently embarrassed at dropping the opening game of their Central Professional Hockey League best-of-seven final series, struck back with vengeance Sunday to crush St. Paul Rangers 11-0.

The previous night, the Knights, who finished the season in first place by 17 points, lost 3-1 to the Rangers. The teams now move to St. Paul for games Friday and Sunday.

Actor, Older and Wiser, Looks to Canadian Debut

By DAVE PIKE

TORONTO (CP)—The Manitoba Theatre Centre in Winnipeg is a long way from London's West End, but for Paul Massie the distance is measured in more than miles and money.

It represents the growing gulf between Massie the actor who relied on personality alone for public success on British stage, screen and television, and Massie the individual made wiser by experience who is determined not to repeat past mistakes.

It represents the transition from the young man who was catapulted into fame and success one soon to the man of 30 who realizes he must give up the security of a film contract in order to flesh out the deep hollows in both his career and character.

Massie, acting in his native Canada this year for the first time, opens at Winnipeg May 6 in a two-week run as Erich in Tennessee Williams' Cat on a Hot Tin Roof.

It was in this role, opposite Kim Stanley, that he achieved stardom in London a decade about six years ago. Nervous as a cat in his first West End play, he feels he failed miserably in a part he wasn't ready for to begin with, and is looking forward to a more mature interpretation at MTC.

A veteran of some 30 plays on British TV, Massie will be seen May 12 in the CBC-TV Festival series production of The Private Secretary, one of confessions of a Justified Sinner, a 90 - minute adaptation of an early 19th century Scottish novel by James Hogg.

WON FILM AWARD

Much of Massie's success in Britain—which included a British Film Academy award for his role seven years ago as Alexanders to Kill—has been disappointing to him artistically.

"I just wasn't ready for what I did. I should have taken more time to develop. I was just pure personality in Cat on a Hot Tin Roof. I'll be giving it everything he's got.

John Wayne's Daughter Faints At Her Wedding

Melinda Ann Wayne, 22, and Gregory Robert Munoz, 26, a Los Angeles county deputy district attorney, were married in the Roman Catholic Blessed Sacrament Church.

During the nuptial mass that followed the wedding ceremony, Melinda started teetering at her kneeling bench.

Before she could fall, Wayne made a fast, 15-foot dash from his front pew and caught her.

With Wayne holding her one side and the kneeling bridegroom on the other, the pretty, brunette bride soon recovered.

A priest brought a chair and she sat throughout the rest of the mass.

Wayne said afterward: "I don't know whether it was the right procedure or not, but she's my baby and so I dashed up there."

King of the Hill

Bud Petican turned back all challengers to retain his "King of the Hill" crown at the Bowlerama.

Petican rolled games of 261, 268, 310, 237 and 294 for a total of 1390 in the qualifying round.

Jack Canning was his closest opponent with 1277, followed by Leo St. Louis with 1236. Canning had the day's high single, a fine 240 game.

Canning and St. Louis both chased the "Pot of Gold" by hitting for six strikes in a row before falling short by two.

Says Senator Molson "Referees Do Good Job"

MONTREAL (CP) — Senator Hartland de M. Molson, president of the Montreal Canadiens, said Sunday National Hockey League referees "are doing the best job possible under the present circumstances."

But, the National Hockey League club owner said, "if the referee keeps his eyes on the puck at all times, as he is supposed to do, he isn't possibly see the rest of the ice surface. After all, he only has one pair of eyes."

Asked if he thought the two referees system should be revived to give the powers of linesmen expanded, Senator Molson said he didn't want to elaborate. However, he added, "I've taken this up with the league governors and will again."

A great many people have been writing to me about the way hockey is being played. My impression is that there are too many brawls and sneaky tactics. But I don't blame the referees. They are doing the best job possible under the present circumstances."

Two New Panel Games Did Not Show Great Promise

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Carl Reiner is a bright, funny fellow and many viewers would enjoy his work if he were reading listings from the phone book.

Reiner would have been in much better performing shape Sunday night if, indeed, he had been reading the phone book. As it was, he turned up in emcee dome of a new CBS panel show called, with some accuracy, The Celebrity Game.

There was not much game but there were some Hollywood celebrities on the panel. They were called upon merrily for yes and no answers to such weighty questions as "do you think European actresses have more sex appeal than American?"

A panel of three studio contestants had to guess how the stars voted. The going was heavy and slow.

BETTER THAN SECOND

Even so, it was considerably more sprightly than the other panel show which followed it on CBS. This was Made in America, billed as "the program that will answer this literally a land of opportunity." It proved something, but not that.

This time the panel had only three celebrities and Hans Conried served as host. The panel's job was to guess, with the help of clues, the product with which each of three millionaires made his—of her—fortune.

The panel had a miserable time trying to guess such products as plant food and dish draisers.

The sorry pair of shows fills the vacant Judy Garland Show hour.

BURGESS MEREDITH

Burgess Meredith was the almost-automatic choice when producer-director Otto Preminger was looking for an actor to play the role of Father Halley in the Columbia Pictures release, "The Cardinal," based on the best-selling novel by Henry Morton Robinson and held over until Wednesday at the Park Theatre in Panavision and Technicolor. Meredith had won critical raves in Twentieth's serpentine "Advise and Consent" and in "The Cardinal" he once again proves his versatility with his portrait of a self-sacrificing priest whose concern for others suffering as he devotes himself wholly to the desperate needs of his parishioners.

Meredith first won spectacular stage fame in the role of Mio, in Maxwell Anderson's prize-winning play, "Winterset," and he later re-created the role on film. Since then, he has been a welcome performer on Broadway and the screen. More recently, Meredith has expanded his theatrical activities to include writing and directing.

The screenplay for "The Cardinal" was written by Robert Donier and tells the story of a young American who rises to the eminence of Prince of the Church in the period encompassed by World War I. Co-starring with Meredith are Tom Tryon in the title role, Romy Schneider, Carol Lynley, Jill Haworth, Raf Vallone, John Saxon, Chris Davis, Dorothy Gish, Maggie McNamara, Bill Hayes, Cecil Kellaway, and noted clergymen — turns — sister John Huston, as Cardinal Glennon. Also in the film are Bobby (Morse) and his Adora-Belles.

The Cardinal ends Wednesday. See it from the beginning at 8.15 p.m. Doors open at 7.15 p.m.

LOSES TITLE ON FOUL

DORTMUND, Germany (AP) — Charley (Bully) Schulz, Germany became the European light - heavyweight champion Saturday when defending champion Giulio Rinaldi of Italy was disqualified in the ninth round for kidney punching. Near the end of the eighth round Rinaldi hit Schulz in the area of the kidneys with a strong left punch. When the bell sounded for the ninth round Schulz grimaced in limpled heavily and the referee stopped the fight.

Bulletins From Birdland

By WINIFRED E. WILSON
YEAR-ROUND SINGER

Driving along a country road while patches of snow still lie on the farmer's fields, we often get our first glimpse of a fat bird perched on a fence post facing the traffic. He is usually a male remarkably yellow breast making it especially noticea ble. Often our ears catch his song within touching distance up it began, and with a swift turn flies low over the ground, on short, down-curved, rounded wings, giving us a good back view of the unusually white brownish tail with white outer feathers. This short, rapid wing-beats are interrupted by brief sailings. There can now be no difficulty in identification. This is assuredly a meadowlark. Like the robin, early arrival is easy, because probably we ar-rived not so many miles away and had few migration problems.

"SPRING IS HERE"

Noisy cars are liable to drown us and, flivvilike notes, as a wise decision is to return when we can approach quietly on foot with the intention of waiting around for the plaintive voice to get a chance to be heard. The song is delivered slowly and deliberately. No two meadowlarks sing exactly alike, but the rhythm and tempo are nearly always slurred together, and the tune goes up, then down, up, then down still. An excellent translation is "Spring is here."

Meadowlark is the correct name, all right, for this bird is really a meadow or field dweller that walks rather than hops. The nest is placed in a slight hollow in the ground, lined with grass and plant stems. It has one peculiarity — it is partially domed-over for safety. The five white eggs spotted with browns and purples are often laid in the usually early. The parents are particularly attentive to their young.

APPEARS LARGER

Just ¾ inch longer than a robin, the meadowlark appears to be much bigger. The additional size is owing to the large body, for tail is short. Both birds have long bills well adapted for probing the earth. The robin digs for worms, the meadowlark for larvae. Later on the meadowlark eats caterpillars, crickets, beetles, flies, and spiders. But its favorite food is grasshoppers, so that to say, farmers should be grateful.

Slightly smaller, somewhat darker, but with a much more brilliant song is the western meadowlark, at one time confined to our western provinces, but for some years making its way east. Frequently found in Ontario now, it has been seen off and on in the Province of Quebec since 1932.

The two birds are easily differentiated by their voices. Both like to sing all year round wherever they happen to be.

Under a slashing ride by Jimmy Combest, Mr. Moonlight came from far off the pace for his first major victory in his career starts. Traffic, the apparent winner with only yards to go, saved second money by three-quarters of a length over Mr. Brick.

Mr. Moonlight ran the mile in 1:37 1-5 and paid $15.80, $13.60 and $8.20. Traffic, one-time $7 beginner, was 5-1 in the entry, which also included Natal, paid $6.40 and $3.60. Mr. Brick returned $2.80 to show.

Colts Half-Squad Nearly Takes Yankees

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Houston Colts thumbed their noses at the aristocratic New York Yankees Sunday and nearly got away with it.

The Colts, who finished the American League champions with half their established squad for a date with Kansas City Athletics. That's tournament to fighting Sonny Liston with a hand tied behind your back.

The Yankees went along with the gag until the eighth inning, when they rallied for four runs to put the Colts in their place, 6-4. An error by John Hoffman, a catcher filling in at first base, led to the final rally.

The rest of the Colts, incidentally, were plenty good enough to hand a 4-2 beating to the Athletics, their 75th correct in 20 appearances.

Elsewhere, Orlando Cepeda hammered his sixth home run of the training season as San Francisco Giants overcame Boston Red Sox 5-2 and Ray Washburn and Bob Gibson combined for a four-hitter to give St. Louis Cardinals a 2-1 edge over New York Mets.

Two home runs by Bob Aspromonte and Jim Gentile and by Jim Pagliaroni fell short for Pittsburgh Pirates as they dropped a 5-4 decision to Cincinnati Reds with catcher Johnny Edwards putting together three doubles and a single for a perfect day at the plate. Al Kaline singled home the winning run in the ninth as Detroit Tigers shaded Philadelphia Phillies 3-2.

Three singles and a two-run double by rookie Lou Jackson gave Baltimore Orioles a 5-1 victory over Los Angeles Dodgers while Milwaukee Braves got three singles in the 11th inning to top Washington Senators 5-3.

Gamble's special scattered five hits in a seven-inning stint as Minnesota Twins downed Chicago White Sox 4-1 and Andre Rogers contributed four hits to Chicago Cubs' 8-6 victory over Cleveland Indians.

On Saturday, the Cardinals hammered the Mets 10-1, the Phillies whipped Houston 8-6, Minnesota downed the Athletics 7-4, the Reds nipped the Dodgers 7-6, Pittsburgh walloped Detroit 14-6, the Yankees shaded the White Sox 5-3, Boston outlasted the Cubs 8-8 in 14 innings, the White Sox B team blanked Baltimore 3-0 and the Senators edged the Braves 3-1.

Nicklaus Finishes Fourth

Boros Wins Greensboro

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)—Julius Boros generated a hot 66 in a 45-degree temperature to catch Doug Sanders, then went on to beat him in a one-hole playoff in winning the Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament Sunday.

It was a sharp final competition, bunching the leaders for the Masters championship.

Last year when Jack Nicklaus won, he finished third, two shots off the pace.

The 44-year-old U.S. Open champion said: "With my improved putting and this win behind me, maybe I'll go down there with greater confidence."

Nicklaus, who defends the Masters title starting Thursday, began the final round here with a three-shot edge over his nearest rivals and was five in front of Boros.

GOT BIG FIVE

But Nicklaus shot a five on the par-three third hole and struggled the rest of the way. He finished five under par 67 for 73 for 279 and fourth place.

Another Masters favorite, Arnold Palmer, ended in a tie for 12th place with 286. He shot par 71 for six final 72s.

On the extra hole, Boros was on the green in two. 12 feet from the hole, Sanders shanked his second into the crowd, chipped out to the fringe of the first two rounds, finished third at 278 to win $3,000.

Al Johnston of Montreal, up with the leaders in the early rounds, finished with a 77 for a total of 286, good for $950. Will Homemolk of Winnipeg was out of the money with 293.

SUMMERSIDE, P.E.I. (CP) — Shakespeare said something about "vaulting ambition that o'er-leaps itself and falls on the other."

Al Groom has a vaulting ambition. It's the falling on the other side that hurts.

Groom, who hopes to go all the way to the Tokyo Olympics this fall, is practising pole vaulting in a school gymnasium here. His home-made facilities consist of a 130-foot plywood runway and a pit of sand. It's anything but ideal.

As a matter of fact, landing among the sandbags and shavings after a 15-foot leap is something like jumping from a diving board into an empty swimming pool.

Al, who represented Canada in the 1962 British Empire Games in Australia, injured a heel in a New York track meet last year. The injury kept him from practising last summer.

NEEDS PRACTICE

The indoor contraption was developed so he could get in workout during cold weather in preparation for the Canadian Olympic trials at Montreal in August. The runway and pit have to be taken down after each session.

John Tredenick, an accountant who has been coaching Groom, says his charge is vaulting 15 feet despite the hard landings and will be doing 15½ before August. The trials' minimum is 15 feet, 1¾ inches.

The coach says Groom could clear 16 feet with the confidence provided by a foam rubber pit and the vaulter himself has a low opinion of Canadian track and field facilities.

"In Canada the emphasis is on height and distance with no consideration for the athlete's safety."

He says he once pole-vaulted into a broad jump pit at a meet in Montreal. "Similar facilities predominate throughout Canada. I don't know how they expect to get world record-holders from this."

RAPS OFFICIALS

Officials, he adds, are "too officious—they won't bend the rules to meet the facilities."

Groom, who is assistant manager at a motel, got the vaulting bug when he discovered an old bamboo pole his father (a 10-foot-3 man) had used years before. When the father found out the brittle pole was in use he chopped it up and bought the youngster a steel one. Groom recently acquired a lightweight glass fibre pole.

When the Olympics are out of the way, Groom and Tredenick hope to turn their attention to developing young athletes here and say they aim to produce some of international calibre in five or six years. They have a couple of kid vaulters now who can better 11 feet.

Chile Is at Crossroads With Powerful Radical Party Holding Balance of Power

By JOSE M. ORLANDO

SANTIAGO (AP) — Chile is at a crossroads. Events of the next few months likely will decide whether the government will remain pro-Western in attitude or slide into or near the Soviet bloc.

The presidential election is five months away. Jorge Alessandri, the country's middle-of-the-road president, cannot under the constitution run for re-election.

Holding the balance of power is the powerful Radical party, which has three courses open to it:

1. Support the extreme left, Moscow - leaning candidate Salvador Allende.

2. Vote for Eduardo Frei, candidate of the moderately leftist Christian Democratic party; or

3. Go to the polls with a candidate of its own.

Allende and Frei are the front-running candidates to succeed Alessandri.

Allende, a senator, psychiatrist and outspoken admirer of Fidel Castro, heads the Communist-led Popular Action Front (FRAP). This is a five-party alliance of the Communist and socialist parties and three minor leftist groups.

ARE PRO-WESTERN

Frei's Christian Democrats, Chile's single biggest party, are a reform-minded and basically pro-Western group.

Allende has been courting the centrist Radical party for an alliance for the presidential election. Many Radical leaders are ready to support him, as the best choice left to the party after the collapse last month of a government coalition including the Radicals. This group says the Radicals, although anti-Communist, will gain bigger political advantages by endorsing Allende than by following any other party.

Other Radical leaders, fearing the FRAP's pro-Soviet leaning, favor voting for Frei, as the only choice to stop Allende.

A third group wants the party to carry its own candidate, even if it means almost sure defeat in the presidential election.

Any other course would divide the party, with the Radical left wing going over to Allende and the rest supporting Frei, this last group claims.

WANT DURAN

Most of these leaders want to keep as the party's candidate Senator Julio Duran, 63, who resigned the candidacy last month in the aftermath of a FRAP victory in a special provincial election.

A government coalition of Radicals and two rightist parties—the Conservatives and Liberals—had ruled Chile for five years. It collapsed as a result of the unexpected defeat of its candidate in the special election at Curico March 15 to fill one House seat.

Duran, a radical right - wing leader, resigned as the joint presidential candidate of the government coalition March 16 and the Radicals walked out of the Alessandri regime two days later. The Conservatives and Liberals, meanwhile, unofficially agreed to support Christian Democrat Frei, as the best choice to stop the Communist-led FRAP from taking over Chile.

There is no definite word on whether Duran, if requested, would agree to return as his party's candidate.

Allende almost became president in 1958 when Alessandri was elected. There was a five-way race then. Alessandri got about a third of the votes, and Allende nearly the same. Congress selected Alessandri, as the recipient of the largest popular vote.

Accuse Trustees Of Leaving Hoodlums In SIU

Long-Time Lieutenant Of Banks Left in Office

By ROBERT RICE

OTTAWA (CP)—The government's marine union trustee have been accused of allowing hoodlums to remain in the Seafarers' International Union of Canada.

The charge was made Monday in the Commons and in the labor movement in the wake of the resignation last week of two trustees and Paul Hall, North American SIU president, aimed at ending labor troubles on the Great Lakes.

The so-called "peace pact" provides that Leonard J. McLaughlin, a former New Zealand sailor, will assume the presidency of the SIU when—and if—the trustees remove their temporary appointees, Charles Turner, from the SIU's top post.

Mr. Turner, a former official of the railway clerks union, was made SIU president when the trustees took over the SIU.

But Mr. Laughlin, long-time lieutenant of Mr. Banks with the title of executive vice-president in charge of contracts and contract enforcement, was left in office by the trustees.

Outside Parliament, two union leaders condemned the agreement.

Elroy Robson, national vice-president of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, accused the trustees of capitulation to the SIU.

GIVE HALL MASTERY

"They have agreed in effect to give back to Paul Hall the absolute mastery of the Canadian Great Lakes," he said.

"They have chosen to tolerate hoodlums instead of rooting them out—and only tolerate them, but work and negotiate with them, and even openly praise them."

Richard Greaves, president of the National Association of Marine Engineers, said the agreement will perpetuate the "hoodlum empire" of the SIU under Mr. McLaughlin.

By a special act of Parliament, the trustees took Justice Victor L. Dryer, Judge Rene Lippe and Charles H. Millard—all with full authority to manage and control the SIU, the Canadian Maritime Union, the Canadian Seafarers' Service Guild, the National Association of Marine Engineers and the marine section of the CBRT.

In the Commons, Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said Mr. McLaughlin was portrayed by Mr. Justice T. G. Norris in his royal commission inquiry as a "clever, resourceful and entirely untruthful witness," a former supporter of Mr. Banks in the SIU.

"I am just wondering if Mr. Laughlin has gone through some

Would Abolish Senate

By ROBERT RICE

OTTAWA (CP)—The House of Commons today tackles a private member's bill to abolish the Senate.

Barring the unexpected, the debate will likely be a wide-open, free-for-all lasting for precisely one hour—but without any vote one way or the other on scrapping the 102-member upper chamber.

The debate follows the bill's stormy introduction Monday by 33-year-old New Democrat Stanley Knowles over Conservative opposition.

It is set against a backdrop Friday's agreement between the one Conservative senator, 75-year-old M. Grattan O'Leary, who rebelled against what he felt was a betrayal of the rules and rights of the Senate.

Senator O'Leary, president of the Ottawa Journal, refused Friday to waive Senate rules for quick passage of a government loan to bail out the bankrupt unemployment insurance fund.

His action—taken, he said, on a matter of principle—forced the Unemployment Insurance Commission to delay the mailing of about 1,000,000 cheques to some 36,000 jobless workers Monday.

APPROVES LOAN

After hearing an eloquent defence of senatorial rights from Senator O'Leary, the red chamber—during a rare session of its red carpeting—gave its final approval Monday night to the emergency loan, part of a $130,000,000 money bill.

The measure was promptly given Royal Assent.

Within minutes, four cabinet ministers gathered quietly in the office of Privy Council President George McIlraith to approve the cabinet order authorizing the loan. It was rushed by messenger to Government House for the signature of Gov.-General Vanier.

Before the night ended, cheques were being prepared from unemployment insurance offices across the country to waiting recipients.

When Senator O'Leary blocked the government's money bill Friday, New Democrat Stanley Knowles, American-born former United Church minister, hurriedly submitted his bill to amend the British North America Act wiping out the Senate.

When it was brought forward Monday for first reading—normally a formality—the Conservative opposition demanded a recorded vote on whether it should be introduced at all.

Fifty-four Conservatives voted against giving leave to introduce the bill for first reading.

Dismemberment, Balkanization Of Canada Seen

Diefenbaker, Douglas Alarmed by Conference

By ALAN DONNELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Diefenbaker has accused the minority Liberal government of leading Canada towards "the piece-meal dismemberment of the basic principles of Confederation."

New Democratic Party Leader Douglas says government-financed pensions lead to "balkanization" of Canada.

Their attacks came Monday during a marathon 10-minute Commons debate on last week's federal-provincial conference at Quebec City.

Opposition fire centred on the involved situation surrounding the Canada Pension Plan and on government plans to permit provinces to "contract out" of federal-provincial shared - cost programs such as hospital insurance and welfare programs.

The Quebec government of Premier Lesage is the only provincial government which has said it wants to contract out of shared-cost programs, taking on the full cost burden in return for added taxing room to carry them.

Similarly, Quebec is the only province to have announced plans for its own retirement pension plan, which will mean the federal pension plan won't apply there.

Mr. Diefenbaker, following a 40-minute report on the Quebec conference by Prime Minister Pearson, termed the meeting "an abject failure."

He said the government's plans for contracting out of shared-cost programs "will mean in time the disintegration of our nation."

"That is where the diplomatic dandyism of Quebec on the part of this government has brought this nation."

Mr. Diefenbaker said the conference posed a challenge to the whole concept of "whether we are to have a united Canada."

Mr. Douglas said the smaller provinces couldn't hope to finance such programs as the federal insurance with the same taxing room which would be transferred to larger provinces opting out of the program.

"Don't lose sight of the smaller provinces in your desire to appease the very legitimate aspirations of the two larger provinces," Mr. Douglas urged the government.

Creditiste House Leader Gilles Gregoire said that a "complete and total" secession of Quebec would take place unless the Irish-speaking Canadians accept a two-nation constitution soon.

CAN STILL OPERATE

Mr. Pearson told the House of Commons the government's proposed Canada Pension Plan still could operate if "other big provinces" opposed Quebec's lead in establishing a provincial pension plan.

High Fees Preventing Decrees

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Prohibitive lawyers' fees have prevented the granting final divorce decrees in every county of Ontario, a joint committee on legal aid was told Monday.

E. O. Fanjoy, a St. Thomas lawyer, said lawyers in all parts of the province have held up the final decree for fear that they would not collect their fees.

Judge W. H. Fox of Middlesex County's juvenile and family court said many couples who have been granted an initial ruling are forced to live in sin with common-law spouses because legal fees for the final divorce decree are beyond their means.

Members of the committee of the attorney-general's department and the Upper Canada Law Society move to Windsor Wednesday in their series of hearing and throughout the province.

Mr. Fanjoy, representing the combined Elgin, Norfolk and Oxford law associations, said advorce "because of the costs involved.

He said legal fees ran between $300 and $500. In addition $20 law stamps instead of the usual $5 ones are used in security writs in divorce cases.

FT: SCANDALOUS

Judge Fox said the situation "is scandalous and cries out urgently for immediate remedy. I don't know whether help can be sought from legal aid or not, so intervened it is with the rings of solicitors and our code of legal ethics"

Arnold Taylor of Simcoe, president of the Norfolk Law association, said abuses would ifer outweigh any possible benefits of legal aid in divorce cases.

Judge Fox called it "unconscionable" that men and women should be forced into sinful cohabitation with prospective spouses simply because they cannot afford lawyers' accounts.

The legal profession would oppose any threat to its right to charge and collect fees, he said, "but what of the question of public morals—of a child's right to be legitimated—and a child's right of inheritance?"

The committee heard a variety of opinions concerning the establishment of a public de-

2 Turks Beaten With Iron Bars Then Shot in Field at Nicosia

NICOSIA—United Nations officials today opened negotiations for a cease-fire to end the killings.

A Greek - Cypriot police spokesman denounced the slayings as "an abominable crime" and urged the public to volunteer any information that might help catch the culprits.

The story was given prominent display in the Turkish press and Turkish officials were bitterly critical of the United Nations as well as of the Greeks.

Others saw it as a major obstruction to getting immediate Turkish agreement to a UN plan opening all major highways to both Greek and Turkish Cypriots.

Entrenched Turkish army troops held their positions at the Kyrenia road north of Nicosia in territory held by the Turkish-Cypriots.

Turkey today warned Greece that if Greek-Cypriots attacked men of the Turkish unit stationed on Cyprus the Turkish government would consider it as "aggression against Turkey."

The warning was contained in a formal note delivered by Turkish Ambassador Nedim Veysel Ilkin to Greek Foreign Minister Stavros Kostopoulos in Athens at 3 a.m.

In a verbal exchange at the time of delivery, Ilkin said the Turkish military forces stationed on the island under the treaty of alliance.

It was reliably reported UN Special Envoy Ralph Bunche will arrive here Friday for consultations on the Cyprus problem.

Dr. Fazil Kuchuk, Turkish-Cypriot vice-president of the island, said he believed the shooting was in reprisal for the slaying of a Greek-Cypriot auxiliary policeman in Nicosia Sunday.

A few hours before, the UN force arranged a cease-fire to end three days of fighting at the Turkish village of Kokkina and the Greek hamlet of Pahy Ammos in the Cyprus.

UN Troops occupy the strategic ridge between Pahy Ammos and the neighboring Turkish village of Kokkina.

Pension Plan For Ontario?

By BOB EXELL

TORONTO (CP)—The possibility arose Monday that the Ontario government may notify the legislature before the end of the current sitting of its intention to introduce a contributory pension plan.

There was only a slim chance that full-fledged pension legislation could be put before the House, however. Government of Premier Robarts could introduce a resolution or a bill outlining the principles of a public and universal Ontario pension plan.

Premier Robarts told a press conference Monday that in view of the federal government's inaction to push ahead with the proposed Canada Pension Plan, he regards the pension question in Ontario as "a matter of some urgency."

During the federal-provincial conference in Quebec last week Mr. Robarts said Ontario would reserve the right to decide on how best to provide pensions for the people of Ontario if the federal plan was not "truly national" in scope.

Mr. Robarts made this statement after Premier Lesage of neighbor Quebec killed any chance of his province's participation in the federal scheme. The federal plan, therefore, would not be a national one.

Premier Lesage presented an outline of Quebec's legislation to the federal-provincial conference. While details of the plan still are secret, it was learned that Mr. Robarts and other provincial premiers were highly impressed with the Quebec proposals.

Mr. Robarts confirmed at his press conference that he found the Quebec plan more to his liking than the federal scheme. The premier was asked whether the Quebec plan satisfied some of the objections Ontario had to the federal plan.

"Yes, it did," he replied. Mr. Robarts indicated a decision would be made soon whether Ontario is to have a plan of its own.

The Conservative premier has not made it clear whether Ontario will make any representations to the joint committee of the House of Commons and the Senate which is to study the federal pension bill.

However, by introducing in

Belgian Hospitals Crammed As Doctors Continue Strike

BRUSSELS — Belgium's hospitals were crowded to the bursting point today as the doctors' strike rounded out its first week with no solution in sight and the population showing signs of mounting anger.

Weary nurses struggled to keep up with the flood of patients. Beds were set up in the corridors and some civilian patients were sent to military hospitals that had empty beds.

Only serious cases were admitted to hospitals. Patients in under emergency arrangements set up by the striking doctors.

The physicians, who are protesting new provisions in Belgium's national health law, have arranged to treat pressing cases. But their opponents claim this is not meeting the needs of the country's 9,000,000 people.

Thousands of the striking doctors went to France, The Netherlands, West Germany and Luxembourg to avoid possible "requisitioning" by the government while some doctors remained to provide emergency care for the very sick.

Interior Minister Arthur Gillson said the emergency setup was "not sufficient because there is no treatment for sick people at home and because the physicians refuse to function except in the main hospitals."

Angry demonstrators showed their resentment in Liege Monday by throwing firecrackers in the streets. A crowd of 14,000 turned out to protest against the strike.

In the nearby town of Seraing, women—some of whom carried babies in their arms—paraded with signs reading "Belgian doctors value human life in terms of money" and shouted "assassin, assassin."

The demonstrations came after the government placed under "provisional arrest" in the northern town of Herentals following the death of a 15-monthold baby in a clinic.

The child's father had originally called his own family doctor to treat the boy for an attack of bronchitis. But since the doctor was out on strike he alerted the emergency skeleton service organized by the medical unions at Herentals, about 10 miles from the family's home.

The two doctors in charge of the emergency service arrived and took the baby to the clinic, where he died Sunday.

A magistrate's court opened an investigation into the cause of the baby's death on the basis of reports that there was a delay in obtaining medical attention for the child.

Wedding of Dutch Princess Takes Place Outside Netherlands

The announcement was made by the private secretary to the Princess Irene. It was read to the press by Dr. J. van der Hoeven, private secretary to the queen, after Queen Juliana, Prince Bernhard and Crown Princess Beatrix had left for a 10-day state visit to Mexico.

Synopsis: Colder weather from Northern Ontario is forecast to spread through central and southern Ontario by Wednesday morning bringing a return to the unseasonably cool weather that has been typical of this April over most of Ontario.

Irene who officially was scheduled to accompany her parents and sister surprisingly stayed behind at the last minute.

The communique said that Irene "will not participate in the state visit to Mexico in order to separate fully her personal responsibility from the obligations of the royal family, notably not to create any political difficulties for the queen."

Irene, the Princess Irene and her fiance Prince Carlos Bourbon-Parma were received by Pope Paul in private audience at the Vatican.

Disclosure several months ago that the princess from Protestant Holland had been converted to Roman Catholicism created a sensation in her country.

She won approval for her engagement only after giving up succession rights to the Dutch throne in order to marry the Catholic pretender to the Spanish throne.

Head of Eskimo School Resigns After Attacking Quebec Demand

OTTAWA (CP)—Northern Affairs Minister Laing said in the Commons Monday night that the principal of the department's school for Eskimos at Fort Chimo in northern Quebec has resigned and four other teachers have indicated they want to quit.

At the same time he denied that the principal, A. C. McTaggart of Winnipeg, was forced to resign because of pressure from the Quebec government.

Mr. Laing said Mr. McTaggart had resigned and had not violated federal government policy by publishing a weekly newspaper in which he criticized Quebec's demands for a transfer of jurisdiction over 2,500 Quebec Eskimos to the province.

Govt. May Call Two Byelections

OTTAWA (CP)—There is a chance that the federal government may call two byelections in June, informants said Monday.

The current proposal is for byelections Monday, June 22, in Nipissing in Ontario and Saskatoon, Sask.

They would be the third and fourth byelections held since the minority Liberal government came to office a year ago, in two others, Feb. 3, the Liberals retained the two Montreal seats of Laurier and St. James.

Informed sources say the suggestion of June byelections has a far better chance of winning approval than pressure for a June federal election.

Parliament's pressure for a June 22 federal general election developed after last week's Quebec federal-provincial conference.

Some political sources say there has been fairly steady pressure on the Liberal leadership from Conservatives to hold an early election in the hope of producing a majority government.

Shortly after the 1963 election last April 8 the Liberal party started political moves to gear its organization for a federal election last fall. The troubles that beset Premier Gordon's first budget in the October plus other factors put the brakes on that move.

However, a feeling seems to persist among federal Liberals that the government will continue to be hamstrung in Parliament by its lack of a majority and the sooner a federal election is held the better their chances of winning a majority.

The weight of opinion seems to be for byelection test in June as a possible general election in the fall. Proponents of this theory say it would give the Liberals a chance ahead of making gains in the Prairies, which they were almost blanked last year.

The idea is that the state of political opinion could be felt out in a June byelection in Saskatoon, made vacant last month by the death of veteran Progressive Conservative MP since 1957.

The Liberals ran second a year ago in Saskatoon, a seat they haven't been able to win since 1935.

Nipissing became vacant with the death last month of John R. Garland, Conservative minister in the federal cabinet. He held the seat from 1940 and it has been solidly Liberal since 1921.

Queen's Scout Badges Given Six Members Tweed Troop

TWEED — Top honors came to six members of the 1st Tweed Troop in a solemn investiture ceremony at the weekend in Tweed High School gymnasium. It is rare in towns or cities of much larger populations for so many boys to receive Queen's Scout badges and parchments at a single investiture.

The six new Queen's Scouts are Paul Bancroft, Robert Fisher, Frank Foster, David Holmes, Paul Thurston and Richard Woolfrey.

Scoutmaster Harold Miller pinned on the badges after the boys had lighted 13 candles and recited, in unison the Scout laws.

Clarke T. Rollins, M.P.P. for Hastings East, as representative of the Queen, presented a parchment to each of the new Queen's Scouts, and congratulated them for their success in their Boy Scout training. "May the benefits of your Scout train ing be of value to you in your careers and in your lives in the years to come," he said.

Assistant Commissioner Ron sell of the Moira Valley District congratulated the boys on their achievement, and their leaders on their fine work. "I hope you will have many more Queen's Scouts behind you," he said.

Robert McCallum, chairman of the group committee of the 1st Tweed group, presented rings to the boys from the committee and the Kiwanis Club, sponsors of the troop.

During the program, Assistant Scoutmaster Ray Holmes noted the history of the award, dating back to 1909 when King Edward in honorine Lt.-Gen Baden Powell, founder of the movement, suggested that all Scouts who passed the top test of efficiency should be known as King's Scouts. With the accession of Queen Elizabeth the rank was changed to Queen's Scout.

"Scout training is not a game, but something to be retained through life," Mr. Holmes said "It helps to make you ready to take your place in make this community, the country and the world a better place in which to live."

Good Week for Hemisphere Johnson Tells Press Corps

By CARMAN CUMMING
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Last Saturday Lyndon B. Johnson called in the Washington press corps and declared that "this has been a good week for this hemisphere."

This is the kind of week it was:

1. On Monday an anti-Castro committee in the U.S. reported that the Cuban government is using a new propaganda line as "death on wheels" to transport court, jury and executioners about the country to deal with the rebels.

2. On Tuesday the tanks came out in the streets again in Brazil as a military uprising broke out.

3. On Wednesday Haiti's incredible dictator, Francois Duvalier, said his squalid, ridden people that they would have the good fortune of his services as president for life.

4. On Thursday a leading candidate for the Chilean presidency, Salvador Allende, declared that if elected in September he will nationalize $1,000,000,000 worth of U.S. copper properties.

5. On Friday tiny Panama knuckled under and agreed to resume relations with the United States without fulfillment of its condition that the U.S. undertake to re-negotiate the treaty under which the American canal control the Panama Canal zone indefinitely.

By this time Brazil's President Joao Goulart had fled across the Uruguayan border in the face of army columns advancing on Rio de Janeiro and the Congress had named an acting president.

Johnson said the U.S. government is "encouraged" that the transaction in Brazil has been constitutional."

This prompted some cynics to wonder whether Johnson would feel the same way if the U.S. 7th Fleet attacked San Francisco and the 6th Fleet attacked New York and he was forced to flee to Saskatchewan.

Constitutional or not, the overthrow of Goulart appears to be regretted by few capitals of the hemisphere except Havana. There are plenty of signs that Goulart was leading his country into an economic and political morass.

The tragedy lies in the fact that once again a Latin American country has shown itself incapable of functioning under democratic processes.

Similar failures have been recorded in recent months in Ecuador, the Dominican Republic, Guatemala and Honduras. In their wake comes the threat of a leftist takeover in Chile and the total degradation of Haiti's political structure.

It may have been a good week for the hemisphere but it wasn't much of a week for democracy.

Canadian Soldiers See War And Peace in Cypriot Village

By DAVE McINTOSH

KOKKINA (CP) — Canadian troops Monday saw for the first time the bloodshed, misery, fear and peace in and around this northwestern Cypriot village.

While Greek and Turkish guerrillas fired at each other with hrea guns and rifles in the hills near the village, shepherds continued to herd their goat flocks in the nearby pastures beside the Mediterranean.

Eight armored scout cars of the Royal Canadian Dragoons left their camp near Nicosia in the morning and took up positions near Kokkina and in two other villages about three miles from the coast, one the village where Greeks and Turks have been fighting since Saturday.

Two of the cars accompanied Lt.-Gen. P. S. Gyani, the United Nations force commander, into Kokkina where he talked with local Turkish leaders.

On the way to Kokkina, 75 miles from Nicosia, the Dragoons rumbled through Kata Pyrgos, where British soldiers were held hostage Sunday for two hours. The Greeks had put up a roadblock and had parked across the narrow road. They removed the trucks when they found the troops were Canadians, although the Dragoons were accompanied by two British scout cars.

WAVE AT CANADIANS

Villagers who had been ready to shoot British troops Sunday, waved as the Canadian armored cars still carried arms.

The Dragoons didn't reach their original destination of Pakhy Ammos because the Turks a few hours earlier had blown up a stone bridge on the hair-pin turn just west of Kokkina to prevent an attack down the road by a Greek armored bulldozer, an ungainly rig with a small cover of steel built over the driver's seat.

The Dragoons didn't have any difficulty manoeuvring on the narrow, twisting roads which hang on cliffs between the hills and the sea. They remained in the area Monday night. They carried sleeping bags and food for just such an eventuality.

In Kokkina, life went on to the sound of gunfire. Occasionally one of the guerrillas came down from the hills for a quick drink at a cafe. A 13-year-old boy carried a double-barrelled shotgun and a small pair of binoculars.

The nearby village of Mansoura was deserted in the morning, with chains on the doors and lonely donkeys tethered in orchards. But by afternoon a few weeping women and children were returning as the Greek attack shifted elsewhere. Kokkina has been under sporadic attack for three days.

British officers on the scene said it would be impossible for the United Nations force to man the hilltops. There weren't enough troops. Most of the firing comes from the hills and ridges around villages.

One British officer said the Greeks appear determined to wipe out the Turks in the area.

Meditation efforts by Cmdr. Curtis Packard of Britain, one of the few heroes in this hate-filled struggle, were rejected by both Greeks and Turks.

Sunday in Pakhy Ammos Packard waited for five hours for a sign by UN patrols to show up for negotiations as he had promised. The Greek was later seen by UN patrols leading a band of armed men into the mountains while Packard was left to fool his brets.

The UN is not allowed to disarm combatants.

ARE BACTAG

Guerrillas on both sides are ragtag, bobtail outfits. Some are just youngsters with an air rifle. Several became they are carrying sten guns.

One guerrilla seen Monday was a bandit-like old man in bare feet and carrying an ancient shotgun. Fighters trample down terraced barley and wheat fields on the hillsides. Women and children appear in some villages seen on roads trudging to other villages with crying children and small bundles on their backs and goat and sheep herds ahead.

The scene is pitiful.

Gyani talked with Turk leaders in front of a dirty cafe. The Turks gloomily with him for help. They said the Greeks had surrounded Turkish villages in the area.

Gyani said, "I can't give you any promises. I just want to stop the fighting."

As Gyani left Kokkina in a UN armored car, a rifle broke out again in the hills above the village.

Went Home Quietly With His Wife

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP)— Jack Segriff has found a personal application of the old saying that "while the cat's away, the mice will play."

Saturday night Jack, a 23-year-old father of four, kissed his wife and went on an expense-paid dinner and dancing date with pretty model Joanne Gelyea, 19, of Toronto, first prize in a beauty contest he won here recently.

Then, as Jack said, he "almost fainted" when wife Audrey walked up San Francisco and the 6th Fleet attacked New York and he was forced to flee to Saskatchewan.

Constitutional or not, the overthrow of Goulart appears to be regretted by few capitals of the hemisphere except Havana. There are plenty of signs that Goulart was leading his country into an economic and political morass.

The tragedy lies in the fact that once again a Latin American country has shown itself incapable of functioning under democratic processes.

Similar failures have been recorded in recent months in Ecuador, the Dominican Republic, Guatemala and Honduras. In their wake comes the threat of a leftist takeover in Chile and the total degradation of Haiti's political structure.

Believe 'Tory' Knocker Former Health Minister

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON (CP)—Knock, knock —who's there?

Nobody knows—but the widespread assumption is that the Conservative party's "arguing knocker," as they are calling him, is former health minister Knock Powell, 51, an erstwhile promising teetotaller who used to be, among other things, the youngest professor of Greek in the Commonwealth.

The kind of political rarity who always puts principle before expediency, Powell has three times resigned or refused office, becoming known in the process as a Tory heretic.

Now—or so everyone assumes —he sits down it again by firing across the bows of his own party just as Tory Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home is getting ready to announce the date of the general election.

Last week, The Times published a series of three articles sharply critical of Conservative policy.

CALLS IT 'FARCE'

The anonymous author, shyly himself simply "a Conservative," called on the government to end the "crazy" housing situation, described the Commonwealth as a "gigantic farce" and appealed for voters to go back to straight-forward untrammelled private enterprise, with no nonsense about economic planning.

The anonymous attack in The Times has created a great deal of fascinated speculation about the writer's identity, plus an aggravated correspondence. But most of the letter-writers deploring the tendency to write off the Commonwealth as a myth.

Apart from electoral considerations, what gave the articles a special sting was the rare unbridled language. One particular author said the writer said, wouldn't recognize an old-age pensioner if he found one floating in his soup.

The lecturer himself had a cagey answer—he said he has his own ideas about who wrote it. But he refused to give a straight yes-or-no answer.

The fuss over the mystery knocker is in full cry this week just as Douglas-Home prepares to consult leading colleagues on the date of an election that must come before November, perhaps as early as June 11—long the favored date.

Hunters Asking For Extension Of Deer Season

Deer hunters in the southern part of Hastings county want the deer hunting season south of No. 7 Highway extended from one to two weeks.

But 96 per cent of the bush land in this area is privately owned and the individual owners will have something to say about the matter.

This morning at the April session of Hastings county council, Mr. G. Biddle, from the Department of Lands and Forests, said that hunters were demanding an extension of the hunting season south of Highway 7 and that because of the increasing deer population his department was prepared to recommend the extension — providing there was not too much objection from the private-property owners.

GOT RE-ACTION

One of the reasons for the increased deer population was said to be a change in ranch type fencing which resulted in bettering of the deer environment.

Mr. Biddle asked that county councillor check on the re-action of private property owners.

He immediately got the re-action of two or three councillors, who said they were in fact and if the deer season was extended they would immediately post their properties.

Reeve Clayton Hall of Thurlow said he was already bothered by deer hunters who endangered livestock, while Reeve Wilmot Rose of Frankford said his son had the same problem in S i d n a y township — both and after and during the hunting season.

And Deputy Reeve Carl Thompson of Thurlow said he had cattle shot by hunters.

REQUEST TABLED

Mr. Biddle, however, suggested that extension of the season would spread hunters out with result there would be a lower concentration of hunters at any one time.

Also, he suggested, extension of the season south of No. 7 might serve to reduce the amount of illegal poaching.

The Department's request was laid on the table and councillors will sound out local property owners and advise the department on their reaction.

the legislature within the next month an outline of an Ontario pension plan, the premier could put the pressure on the federal government to adjust its own plan to conform with those of Ontario and Quebec.

ANNOUNCES DATE

The premier announced the second session of the 27th legislature will resume April 14—a week later than first contemplated—following its Easter recess. After that, he said, the sitting may last another four weeks.

Presumably, by extending the sitting until May, the government would have time enough to provide the legislature with a broad outline of independent pension proposals.

Contractor Fined $100, Charged After Fatal Cave-in

A Belleville contracting firm, charged with breaches of Ontario safety laws after two of its workmen died in a trench cave - in, was fined $100 in a brief hearing before Magistrate T. Y. Wills this morning.

One of the two charges, laid under the Trench Excavators' Protection Act, was dropped. The act carries penalties ranging from $50 to a maximum $500.

Later city safety inspection officials said the case would be a turning point in local enforcement of construction safety regulations and charges would be laid when any breach of the Act was discovered.

No official of the company was ever sent in court today. A plea of guilty was formally registered to the single charge preferred before the magistrate, by the firm's legal representative, Ben Hurley.

Special prosecutor Ralph Graham offered no evidence on the second charge, which was then struck from the docket.

Enforcement of the protection act later became an issue of crucial concern at a coroner's inquest into the tragedy on January 13. Several contractors who appeared at the inquiry voluntarily expressed unawareness of its provisions and the jury carefully worded a series of recommendations aimed at making the regulations known.

NO NOTIFICATION

Quinte Valley Contracting today pleaded guilty to starting work on the trench without notifying the city inspectors, responsible for enforcing the act.

The charge dropped from the docket cited the company for failing to prop up an excavation 10 feet deep with timber shoring.

The case has been great laxity in the community since this act was passed . . . . In 1954," Mr. Graham told the magistrate.

It was the first time court action had been taken to enforce its regulations in Belleville, he said, and hitherto contractors in the community had not been fully aware of the act's provisions.

As a result of the tragedy city inspectors had been empowered to directly prosecute any future breaches of regulations.

Before laying the charge against the company was that it failed to file plans and specifications with the department, the proper municipal authorities Mr. Graham stated.

"I don't think this as a completely minor offense," Magistrate Wills said as he decided the fine.

Hearing of the charge took about 10 minutes.

Quinte Valley Contracting is a company which has been named to the reeveship.

Setting of County Tax Rate Main Business of Council

The annual April session of Hastings county council got underway this morning for what is expected to be a four-day meeting.

Included on the session's agenda will be adoption of the county assessor's report and setting of the 1964 county tax rate.

Other matters to be discussed will include the possibility of extending the deer hunting season, south of No. 7 Highway, from one to two weeks, and and discussion on the possibility of adopting a county assessment commissioner system.

The Ontario Department of Lands and Forests is seeking the reaction of private property owners in connection with extension of the deer hunting season south of No. 7.

REFERS TO DEATH

County Warden Tom Burnside of Madoc in his opening remarks referred to the recent death of County Sheriff Roscoe Robson, whose loss, he said, would be seriously felt by the county.

Following the warden's address, council got right down to business, hearing numerous replies to a county resolution of last December asking that counties be relieved of any costs connected with the moving of hydro and other services lines along county roadways.

The majority of counties concurred in the resolution, but five or six took no action.

During the morning session council approved a committee recommendation for the appointment of Earl Mackay as county construction safety inspector and also heard a report from Bancroft Reeve M. L. McAlpine comparing the estimated costs of a county assessment commissioner system, with that of the present system of a county assessor with local assessors.

SYSTEM RECOMMENDED

County Assessor Cecil Geen said the assessment commissioner system was recommended by the province and was considered a "step forward."

After one or two councillors voiced objection to any change in the present system further discussion on the matter was laid over until later in the session when council will be addressed by a representative from the Department of Municipal Affairs.

Request Laid On Table for Further Study

The possibility of a history of the County of Hastings being published as a Centennial Year project will be investigated by county council decision but the fact they decided in January not to have any such county project.

At the morning session of council a letter from J. C. Elliott of Ottawa, was read to members suggesting that there was a wealth of historical lore regarding the county if the time and effort were taken to dig it out.

Tudor Reeve Verne McMurray said the letter had been addressed to the Land of Lakes Tourist Region and at his suggestion had been forwarded on to county council.

Council was told there were federal and provincial grants for such a project and that the county could act as agent for any two municipalities in the county.

The matter was laid on the table for further discussion.

Feels Canada Should Play Mediator's Role

Members of the Rotary Club of Belleville listened with keen interest as Professor Everett Sayeed, professor of Political Science at Queen's University in Kingston told of "Pakistan's Foreign Policy".

"Professor Sayeed was speaking at the regular weekly dinner meeting of the Rotary Club on Monday.

The professor told of the political conflicts between Pakistan and neighboring India. He spoke strongly against the communist Chinese government and said that the United States did not have to fear trouble from Pakistan or India, but Communist China.

He said the problem should be understood in its broadest porportion and said he felt Canada should play the role of mediator.

In closing Professor Sayeed said Canada should be proud

Reeve of Mayo Named County Safety Officer

Reeve of Mayo township for the past three years, Mr. Earl Mackey of Hermon, was today named construction safety inspector for the county of Hastings.

The appointment was made at this morning's opening session of county council.

Mr. Mackey, an employee of Faraday Uranium Mines near Bancroft will assume his new county duties as of May 1st and expects to move his family to Belleville about the end of June.

The position carries a starting salary of $4,000 with annual increments of $300 to a maximum of $4,600.

44 APPRENTICES

Sidney Reeve Gerald Irvine, as chairman of the special committee on the appointment of a safety inspector said there were 54 applications for the position.

Hastings county councillors had at several previous sessions discussed the matter of a construction safety inspector as required under provincial regulations.

Until today, however, council had demurred on the actual appointment, claiming the county was too large to be covered by one man.

Mr. Mackey has already resigned his position as reeve of Mayo township and his place at township council will be taken over by Ted Cunningham, who

Woman Watches as Thugs With Knife Rob Pensioner

TRENTON — An unknown woman, her face hidden behind a white, veil, waited while two thugs robbed a pensioner at knifepoint nearby today.

Joseph Storey, 72, this morning told of seeing the unknown girl when the pair ransacked his home on Lincoln Street after punching him to the floor.

They found only $23.

Today police are tying in the violent episode with a police chase and a series of car thefts in the Trenton area — in which a woman was also reported spotted.

Recovering from the assault at his home this morning, Mr. Storey told how he first heard a knock on his door about 12.10 a.m. When he opened it he was confronted by "quite a large youth" who suddenly punched him in the stomach and sent him reeling.

He next spotted a second man who rushed through the door carrying a knife "with what looked like a five-inch blade. The first youth went into the bedroom and removed the cash from a wallet in Mr. Storey's pocket, then proceeded to ransack the living room and kitchen.

SEARCH GIVEN UP

The search was given up apparently when no more money came to light and Mr. Storey quoted the youth, who had punched him, giving the warning:

"You call the cops and I'll come back and murder you."

It was as they left Mr. Storey spotted the woman. He said she had the white scarf over her face.

Shaken after his experience it took the pensioner more than a half hour to walk to the home of a neighbor's phone.

About 2.20 a.m., a car, reported stolen from the Dorset Coulter plant parking lot, was chased by an OPP cruiser from Belleville. The chase ended when police lost the car in the Stockdals-Wooler area. It was later found abandoned in a creek.

About 3 a.m. town police received a call from the dispatcher at CNR junction who said he had seen a man and woman park a motorboat nearby and drive off in another car. The second car was believed the vehicle stolen by OPP and abandoned in the creek. They left word at junction was later discovered stolen from a Marmora St. residence.

Finally, a third automobile was reported missing from a farm in the Wooler area.

Provincial police are still trying to trace its whereabouts at noon.

Joseph Storey, 72, of 49 Leopold Street, Trenton, (behind double-edged knife), told police he was punched in the stomach and threatened by an unknown robber with a knife early today. Assailant, accompanied by another youth, entered the pensioner's home and removed the cash from a wallet in Mr. Storey's pocket. The two then proceeded to ransack the living room and kitchen.

two villages this morning. Two armored Ferrets were stationed at the Greek village of Pyrgata and two at the Turkish hamlet of Alevgra.

UN officials said some of the families who evacuated the Greek village of Paby Ammos had returned to their homes.

FOUR STARTED

After a quiet night, fighting between Greek- and Turkish-Cypriots broke out again about noon today in northwest Cyprus by the Greek village of Kato Pyrgos.

UN headquarters in Nicosia said the firing broke out at a spot three miles east of Kato Pyrgos and that UN peace - keeping patrols were sent to the area to investigate.

A UN vehicle was stopped at a Greek checkpoint five miles west of Kato Pyrgos.

Makarios, who was reported to have said a meeting with Vice - President Kuchuk would be useful in reaching a solution to the island strife, was in turn confronted with demands from the Turkish side.

Before agreeing to meet with the archbishop, Kuchuk sought assurances that Makarios would ask the UN forces, on the island for the duration — "if necessary—all irregulars, so-called special constables and national guards."

Teachers' "Unions"

The Ontario Teachers Federation has asked all school teachers in this province to refrain from registering for their social insurance numbers until the Federation decides on its policy regarding them.

The Federation fears that the use of these numbers may lead to teachers being compelled to pay unemployment insurance.

Since teachers are seldom unemployed, it is understandable that they would not appreciate such a development.

There are, however, other people who are seldom unemployed, some of whom are exempt from paying unemployment insurance premium and some of whom are not.

It is a moot point whether it would not be fairer to compel every employed person to contribute to the fund, rather than endeavor to deal with special circumstances under conditions which make it virtually impossible to provide justice for all.

That, though, is not the issue we wished to raise in this editorial.

Rather we wanted to point out that, in connection with social security numbers and with many other matters, teachers' federations fulfill functions which are identical with those of unions.

Teachers will object that their federations also deal with other matters, including professional standards and study and discussion of educational problems. Even here, there are some unions which have comparable programs. That, however, is beside the point, which is that when federations like unions of some members of the public are apt to overlook their other functions.

Might it not simplify matters, and improve public relations for teachers, if teachers divorced the two procedures, frankly accepted the principle of unionization for matters regarding salaries and conditions of work and established independent organizations to deal with educational problems and studies?

Who Should Pay for Hospitals?

M. D. Goldrick, director of the Bureau of Municipal Research, Toronto, says that hospitals are utilities and should be financed from public funds, like other utilities.

Whoa, there!

That sounds uncomfortably like a pitch to deepen the tax bite.

Hospital are utilities, it is true.

But what other utilities are financed out of public funds?

Roads come to mind; you would have to include schools if you consider them utilities in the broad sense of the word; then there are municipal swimming pools, playgrounds and halls.

But other important utilities are either privately owned and operated or, if publicly owned, are not financed out of what are generally considered public funds but out of the money received for services rendered. Waterworks systems are a prime example and in Ontario Hydro also falls in this classification.

That seems to be the right category in which to place hospitals. Mr. Goldrick, we think, is right when he says "voluntary giving just won't work."

But the cost of building and maintaining hospitals should not come out of taxes—and certainly not out of municipal taxes —but should be met through hospital insurance premiums. This will not reduce the cost one cent—but it will spread it more equitably.

Whose Job Is This?

Handsome is as handsome does.

It is pleasant to read that an official of the Ontario Department of Education has warned educationists that they must insist on reasonable amenities in building new schools.

But one of the examples chosen by Norman Sisco in making his plea to the Ontario Education Association seems to raise a basic question.

Mr. Sisco is assistant superintendent of the Department. He told of a $60,000 school chemistry laboratory in which, he was convinced, "the exhaust system was strong enough to suck a Grade 9 student through a four-inch pipe."

Some of the teachers, professors, school trustees, home and school association officials and administrators whom he was addressing may not have had much practical experience with exhaust systems.

But surely there must be somebody in the Department of Education—or someone the Department could employ—who could draft simple specifications for schools so that powerful exhaust systems of this nature would not be included in new schools.

Prime Minister Learning To Roll With the Punches

By RICHARD JACKSON

From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — . . . notes off the Parliamentary cuff

A DIFFERENT PM:

Prime Minister Pearson, friends and associates have said, never really wanted to be PM.

Then, having become prime minister, very obviously at first, he didn't at all enjoy the experience.

Now, suddenly, political parts engaged in the serious business of "Prime Minister-Watching," say they detect a subtle change in Lester Bowles Pearson, the man so many Canadians know as Mike.

He still doesn't regard the job as very much fun, but has learned to roll with the punches . . . and with a wry sense of humor, a priceless asset for any prime minister, can enjoy a laugh on himself.

This is a terrific technique in warming up a crowd, this easy amiability of being able to take himself less than seriously.

His latest for disarming the crowd, for putting people at their comfortable ease, and perhaps lining them up on his side of the political fence, came shining through the other night when he travelled to a particularly fulsome introduction at one of his increasingly frequent public appearances.

HE'S SURPRISED, TOO

He had been presented as . . . "the CCF's number one Servant for whom, then, the wildest-eyed Gypsy would never have predicted the future . . . now the only professor of history making history today . . . a statesman who has been honored for more achievements, more great services both nationally and internationally than any other Canadian in history . . . a man who was born in Canada, carring a greater burden than any prime minister before him . . . a Canadian prime minister ever called before . . . a man who came proudly with modernism, with gusto and with a merry heart and infectious grin . . . "

There was more, much, much more.

What does a man, even a prime minister, say to all of that when he rises to speak after such an introduction?

Like his wife said, he grins, infectiously, and with the audience, laughs at himself.

So people like, but surprised by the way the former Junior Civil Servant had turned out, mused that prime minister with a wry shrug.

So had he . . . even more surprised than they.

How had it all come about?

"Well," grinned the PM, "the other day I counted up and found I hadn't seen in 48 years. He had been a Boy Scout Sergeant back in 1916. And he said, 'I knew you were going to make something of yourself from the way you used to pick up scraps of paper around the parade square . . . and then the Military Camp and put the litter in that bag.'"

So with his old Sergeant, the prime minister cut up some old army touches of the days when he did (we were going to mention fatigue as garbage collector for failing to salute an officer. EDITOR'S NOTE: Just kidding.)

Leave it to an old public relations gimmick mearchant to warm up with a little humiliation of public service in the Senate as you're likely to hear.

It came from Senator Allister Grosart, who went to his political reward of a life-time pension of $15,000 a year, courtesy of the taxpayer, last year, for his services as stage-managing three Conservative campaign marches to Federal victory.

How did the old warhorse find the quiet life in the silence of the Senate?

It's got working beat by a Bay Street mile."

STRIKING IT RICH

Hazen Argue, long-time Saskatchewan CCF member, turned Liberal MP, put to political pasture by the Conservative last time out, was in the Capitol the other day, sniffing what he hoped might be election breezes.

And how were things out West?

Never, ever been better, he beamed. Why, since the better-than-half-a-billion-dollar grain sale to Soviet Russia, Red China and their Iron Curtain satellites, farmers across the Prairies weren't dickering to look at their Wheat Board cheques any more.

They just bale 'em up and weigh 'em."

SIGN OF TIMES

In the souvenir shops of the Capital they used to sell acid bills with self-dealt signs reading: "Some MPs should be thankful they're not getting paid what they're worth."

Now, since the new $18,000-plus Parliamentary salary, these ungodly smitten signs read: "Some MPs should be more thankful than ever that they're not getting paid what they're worth."

37 Let Woman Be Murdered

Watertown Times

Thirty-seven presumably respectable and responsible citizens witnessed the murder of a woman in Queens county, New York city, and not one of them intervened to protect the victim or, to notify police. This incident was re-told on television Friday night from an excellent documented story that appeared in Friday morning's New York Times. The murder took place two weeks ago. Painstakingly the newspaper investigated the circumstances surrounding the murder after the detective in the case protested his deep concern because "the good people" failed to notify the police.

The selfishness of the witnesses would have been unbelievable, except that this happens too many times today. The facts are clearly an indictment of the society in which man in Canada, carring a greater burden than any prime ministership before him, Canadian prime minister ever called before . . . a man who came proudly with modernism, with gusto and with a merry heart and infectious grin . . . "

Destruction Not Progress

Victoria Times

A little over a hundred years ago the English writer John Ruskin penned this comment on the destruction of nature's valley:

You enterprised a railroad through the valley, you blasted its rocks away, heaped those sands of tons of shale into its lovely stream The valley is gone and the river with it, and now every fool in Buxton can be at Bakewell in half an hour and Bakewell in half an hour at Buxton; which you think a wholesome and rational way to you Fools everywhere."

We wonder. Will the economics of development from now, on the BC provincial government's decision to open the wilderness Skagit Valley, the English authorities were mouthing the same platitudes as our officials today about the almost unlimited extent of our natural resources. No doubt they were fed off with the same guff as officials are today of the relentless progress and prosperity as the unspoiled beauty of nature.

What is the harm in nibbling away a little bit here and a little bit there? There's five acres of wilderness area for every man and woman and child in the province right now. Who's going to miss an acre or two? Posterity? Who cares about posterity when there is money to be made?

Tuberculosis Is Spread By Germs From Patients

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D

Dear Dr. Molner: Is tuberculosis as easy to catch and as dangerous as when it was first discovered?

I know that certain precautions have to be taken with patients, but must they be isolated?

Is it true that the germs live three years after leaving the body? No, I am not a TB patient — F. J. C.

Tuberculosis patients are restricted only to the degree necessary for safety. They need to be in hospitals. They cannot be left at home, because (while the disease is active) they may spray dangerous and often deadly germs with every cough and sneeze.

It's best to keep them away from other people for the time being They can have visitors, but are taught the necessity for covering the mouth and nose with tissue at each cough or sneeze, and how to keep at a safe distance from others.

Yes, tuberculosis is as easy to catch as it ever was, and as dangerous — unless it is treated.

Here is a quotation from one of the TB and Health Societies. This happens to be from Michigan:

"Dreams of conquest of this lumbering giant of human diseases, tuberculosis following the discovery of drugs in the early 50's are dimming. The facts of life are that tuberculosis is here to stay for a long time.

"Tuberculosis has settled into an obstinate pattern of resistance in known methods of detection and treatment."

In that one state, 3,157 new cases of TB were discovered last year. For North America, make it 75,000 to 100,000 new cases a year.

With drug treatment, and sometimes surgery, most patients (if they found out about their disease in time) become "negative." They no longer are walking germ-sprayers, and then can continue treatment at home.

No, it's not true that TB germs survive for three years. The germs die quite soon after leaving the body.

TB is spread, not by germs that somebody produced last week or last month, but by fresh, deadly ones being coughed or sneezed or otherwise distributed by (a) patients who don't care about other people; or (b) people who don't know that they have, and are spreading TB.

That's why I continue to remind readers to be suspicious of a chronic cough, unexplained temperature or loss of weight, and to be checked periodically for their own protection and the safety of others.

TB spreads in just one way — person to person.

Dear Dr. Molner: A few years ago I injured the nail on my big toe. It became black and I lost it. Now it's coming in again, but it's not coming in right. It's growing sideways and deformed.

Is there anything I can do to loosen the nail so that it will come off? — Mrs. S. E. W.

Nail surgery is a specialized job. It will be painful without an anesthetic, and suitable precautions against infection are mandatory. So have an orthopedic surgeon or a podiatrist do it for you.

Extremism Is Response to Uncertainty

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

A reader in Arizona asks me if I can explain the rise of extremism in this country during the last few years, which he and his friends find quite alarming. He wants to know the "political reasons" behind it.

I don't think however, that it is primarily a political phenomenon; it is a psychological one. It is the response to a certain kind of temperament to the tension, and confusion and uncertainty of our times.

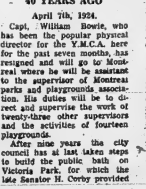
In one of his profound books, Ortega y Gasset wrote: "Man adapts himself to everything, to the best and the worst. To one thing only does he not adapt himself — to being sure in his own mind what he believes about things."

The new extremists in our nation, more than others, cannot stand being unclear about their beliefs; it frustrates and angers them. They cannot stand a world that is mixed, pluralistic in its causes and consequences, composed of various tones of gray rather than black and white. They desperately seeking for simple answers to complicated questions — and then the answer is found — forthcoming, they make them up themselves.

How simple, comfortable and self-righteous to believe that nearly all our troubles are caused by a "Communist conspiracy" that extends from the Kremlin to the secret chambers of the White House. How solid and stable to believe that the world is divided into Heroes and Devils, and that we know utterly which are which.

But the real division in the modern world lies between the men and the boys — the boys who are still playing Westerns adventures in which the villains are clearly identified by their black hats and sinister moustaches), and the men who have grown up to the idea that world affairs are infinitely complex, filled with contradictions and ambiguities, with mixed motives and mixed human goals.

We live, most of all, in an age of paradox; the chief paradox being that never in the world has men been so powerful while men are so weak. We have an unprecedented capacity for altering all others and ourselves as well; but the individual man feels blank and helpless in the face of it.



It is this contrast between our power and our impotence that frightens most of us. But it generally is the extremist who takes reaction of moral and intellectual simplicity — of fanatically believing that he alone has the truth, and the rest of us are dupes or knaves or fools. This is not a political problem; it is part of psychopathology.

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP)—A mixed industrial market and a ticker that ran 18 minutes late after the first 40 minutes of trading brought life to the stock-market during the morning session today.

Most sections of the industrial list backed away from gains made Monday in profit-taking. Typical were Distillers Seagrams, John Labatt, Consolidated Paper and Imperial Bank of Commerce, all with losses in a ¼ to ⅝ range.

Foods were strong, however, with B.C. Packers B and Weston B both up ¼, while Loblaw A and B ahead ½ each, the latter to a new high of 85.

In brisk speculative action, United Oils was ahead eight cents to $2.90 and Zulapa down four cents to 48 cents.

In base metals, Falconbridge gained ¼ to a new high of 70, while Noranda and Rio Algom both rose ¼.

Golds featured Hollinger down ¼ and Giant Yellowknife ¼.

The industrial index was unchanged at 168.71 while the TSE index reached a new high by rising .03 to 139.38. Base metals rose .20 to a new high of 62.26 as did western oils with a gain of .30 to 89.97. Golds rose .12 to 133.60. Volume was heavy at 1,987,000 shares compared with 2,063,000 shares traded at the same time Monday.

On Monday the market showed extremely heavy trading and heavy price increases.

Trading early in the session was hectic and forced the ticker to remain 19 minutes behind schedule for 45 minutes or so. Trading in speculatives produced most of the volume, but selected industrials took a back seat to none.

Three of the exchange's five hourly produced indexes reached new highs at the close in the heaviest volume since Sept. 12, 1962.

Industrials were paced by banks, liquors, foods and utilities.

In banks, Imperial Bank of Commerce and Toronto-Dominion rose ⅛ and ¼ respectively to 62¼ and 62⅝. Royal rose ⅛ to 73¾, Nova Scotia ¼ to 68¼ and Montreal ¼ to 64.

Liquors also showed strength with Canadian breweries and John Labatt ahead ¼ to 10 and 19¼ respectively.

In papers, Abitibi gained ⅛ to 14, and Price Brothers rose to a new high of 42 with a gain of ⅛.

Speculative action featured those stocks that have led the penny market in the last few sessions.

Zulapa was the day's most heavily traded issue with 708,895 shares turning over. The stock gained seven cents to 52 cents. Other active speculative issues were American Leduc, down eight cents to 37 cents on 300,200 shares, Calvert, down two cents to 64 cents on 87,000 shares, and Consolidated Marbenor, ahead 28 cents to $2.60 on 79,650 shares.

The senior base metals list was strong. Falconbridge rose ¼ to a new high of 69¾, while Noranda gained $1 to 46¾. Hudson Bay Mining advanced ¼ to 69¾.

In golds, Hollinger and Giant Yellowknife gained ¼ and ¼ to 31½ and 11¼ respectively. Dome, however, dropped ¼ to 28.

The 77-stock industrial index reached a record high of 148.71 with a gain of .71, while the 133-stock exchange index duplicated the feat with a rise of .73 to 139.25. Western oils reached a 1964 high by gaining 1.26 to 89.67. Golds rose .17 to 133.28 and base metals .16 to 62.06.

Volume was 5,543,000 shares compared with 8,058,000 shares traded Friday.

Hunt for Cause and Cure Of Cancer Is Complicated

By DR. KENNETH M. DOUGLAS, F.R.C.S.
Belleville

As most people know, the cause of cancer has been pursued by interested men for years, but the complete answer has eluded them. Some have claimed "cures" only to be disappointed when their claims have been examined in the light of controlled scientific investigation. Other investigators, while not achieving complete success, have contributed clues here and there to what has now developed into probably the most complicated detective story of all time. This search now involves experts from many fields of science working together—chemists, biochemists, biophysicists, geneticists, cytologists, embryologists and medical research workers—along with the most expensive equipment. This is the direction that cancer research must go and today it is going largely in the direction of molecular biophysics. Possibly it may lead near to the origin of life itself.

The problem is really how a cell works, and what happens to make it multiply wildly into a parasite which finally kills the host from which it originated.

Inside a body cell is a genetic material we call chromosomes which, in turn, contain a substance called DNA (deoxyribonucleic) this substance transfers information so that each new cell will contain exactly the same information as its parent. The DNA molecule, (it has been discovered only recently), is the shape of a double helix—like, a twisted ladder — the uprights being joined together by four different kinds of bases which contain the genetic information: the probability is that the difference between a normal and a cancer cell is in the order of these bases—somehow they become altered at the sub-molecular level.

The information in the DNA, in addition to making possible exact cell replicas, controls the operation of the cell itself. Instructing it as to what proteins to make and how much of each. Only recently has it become known how the DNA can control such production.

The DNA is like the master blueprint in the director's office of a company. When a product is to be made, the "messenger-DNA" from the cell goes into the director's office and takes a copy of the plan for the workers, which in the cell are the ribosomes. The ribosomes then produce the protein by lining up the correct amino acids in the proper order so they can be joined together to form the protein in exactly the way laid down by the master blueprint.

It is almost certain that in a cancer cell some error is introduced into the DNA so that the production of proteins made by the cell goes out of control causing uncontrolled growth. This is cancer.

SEEK EARLY TEST

Treatment of cancer today consists first of all, of course, in early diagnosis. This is not always as simple as it sounds since a growth has to reach a sufficient degree of advancement before it causes symptoms or becomes detectable by experts using the best equipment available. Research is going on to find a specific screening test for cancer, but so far no practical useful test has been developed.

It is well to appreciate that cancer is probably not one disease but a group of diseases with a basic similarity (rather like bacterial infections). Even cancer of one special organ, such as the lung, may be of many different types, some fast-spreading and some slow, some responding well to surgery, some responding better to radiotherapy and some to both. There is no one answer for treating any specific affliction and cases should not be compared with one another for this reason. Adequate surgery performed at the time may be ideal treatment in one case; others may respond better to radiotherapy or other methods, or a combination of them. In recent years much work has been done on the immune response of the body to cancer cells and it is possible that new treatment may come in this direction in the form of some type of vaccination: other work is proceeding on substances which interfere with the internal mechanism of the cancer cell and delay or stop its growth. Some of these materials are available for treatment of patients and are sometimes partially effective.

All this research takes tremendous organization and equipment and is very expensive. You can make no better contribution to the welfare of mankind than a donation to your local branch of the Canadian Cancer Society, now campaigning for funds.

SUGGESTS PLAN

TORONTO (CP) — L. B. Dworsky, assistant to the chief of the United States federal water pollution control program, suggested Monday the U.S. and Canada should undertake a comprehensive integrated water and land resource development plan for the Great Lakes area. He told the conference on Great Lakes research that the International Joint Commission might serve as the co-ordinating organization.

Y's Activities

The Y.M.C.A. Swingin' 8's were hosts to the RCAF Station 'Keeno - Kids' and the Basement Stompers' Saturday night.

There were approximately 75 children and 15 adults in attendance for the dancing program. Parents also took part in the evening's events.

Merril Gordon, caller and instructor of the Belleville group was assisted during the program by Bruce Wright and Jeff Brogden.

The program consisted of mixed square dancing, the twist and the Bosa Nova.

The Swingin' 8's have been invited to Trenton in May by the RCAF group.

The Self-Defence Class for Women will commence at 8.00 p.m. until 9.00 p.m. on Thursday, April 9th and will continue for six weeks.

The program not only provides women with the knowledge of how to deal with purse-snatchers and masters, but also physical fitness in a totally different manner.

The course is taught by Mr. Gordon Oliver and Mrs. Gladys Smith who are both experts in this field.

fender system in Ontario.

Mr. Taylor said a plebiscite would probably reveal overwhelming support for the appointment of a public defender — a defence lawyer paid by the government to represent persons unable to pay their own costs.

Deputy Attorney - General W. B. Common, committee chairman, wondered if some people in jail were aware of what legal aid could do for them.

Both he and Magistrate G. G. Marshman of London expressed concern that some persons are now allowed bail when it appears they should be.

Persons appear in his court who, the magistrate said, he feels should be granted bail but police say the case is still under investigation and he has no alternative but to remand the accused in custody.

Mr Common stated that the entire system of justice is prostituted when a policeman says: "Throw him in the can. I have not completed my investigation."

Mr. Fanjoy contended the public defender system was no solution "because you'd have two government-appointed people in contest."

A brief from the Middlesex County Law Association recommended that the provincial government provide funds to give lawyers taking legal aid cases. At present the lawyers receive no fee.

London lawyer John Kerr, chairman of the association's legal aid committee, suggested clients of welfare agencies should be provided with lawyers as well as psychiatrists and doctors.

Charge Teenagers With Theft of Truck

Three Belleville teenagers, charged with theft of a panel truck Sunday morning from a Hillcrest residence, today appeared without plea before Magistrate T. Y. Wills.

Arrested Sunday afternoon after police found the truck abandoned on Octavia Street were Robert Wayne Fowler, 19, David Willshire, 18 and Gregory Chambers, 17.

Remanding the case one week the magistrate set bail for Fowler at $200 cash and $500 property for Chambers.

Rackets Flourish Where Moral Courage Lacking

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Your column seems to deal with all human experience and I heartily approve. I hope you will print this letter as a runner-up to the letter from the parent who wrote that her teen-aged son was accosted by a pervert while hitching a ride home from a music lesson. Here is the other side of the coin.

I gave a lift to a forlorn-looking boy about 14 years old. After he had been in the car three minutes he announced that if I didn't give him a dollar he would shout that I had tried to molest him and I'd be in for it.

ANN LANDERS

I'm a businessman who can't afford any trouble, so I gave him a dollar and let him out at the next light.

I told some of my friends about this the next day and learned that they had had similar experiences. So, please pass the word, Ann Landers. Nix on hitchhikers. — ANONYMOUS.

DEAR ANONYMOUS — I've already passed that word and now I'd like to pass another word. I'm also against bribes and shakedowns.

Blackmailers will continue to flourish so long as there are people who have mercenal where the spines belong.

Every time one of these little creeps collects a buck it encourages him to shakedown the next sucker. When you caved in, my friend, you gave financial and moral support to a dandy little racket.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My sister gave us an attractive tavern-type wall clock, a charming set of Dickens characters and other nice gifts.

Recently we completed our recreation room which is in the basement. Last night my sister and her husband were among the guests we invited to a party. She called me upstairs "to have a few words."

In scalding language I was told she did not give me those beautiful gifts to decorate "a basement." She ended up saying I had terrible taste, and then criticized every room in the house. To top off her speech she made some unflattering remarks about my husband and released venom which must have been stored up for years.

Does a person who offers a gift have the right to tell the receiver where or how the gift should be used? — COLUMBUS.

• • •

DEAR COLUMBUS — The giver has the right to expect a thank you — nothing more.

Now would be a fitting time to tell your sister you appreciate her thoughtfulness but in the future her good wishes will be sufficient — and she can please skip the gifts.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Why does the average American slob think he is entitled to drink two or three cups of coffee for a dime? Do they think all restaurant proprietors own coffee plantations too?

Some people who sit with that second or third cup of coffee don't even drink it. They slosh it around for 15 minutes, then leave it. Please print my letter and educate the ignorant public. — GROUNDS DOWN.

DEAR DOWN — My expert on coffee tells me that a pound of high grade commercial coffee costs approximately 80c a pound. This should yield about 50 cups of coffee.

Restaurant owners who serve coffee in china cups figure breakages at 1½ cents per cup. Cream and sugar come to roughly 3 cents, bringing the total cost of a cup of coffee to 5½ cents. Most restaurants will fill your cup the second time for the same dime. When they do, they lose 1 cent on the deal.

Thanks for writing. I'll have more respect for that refill from now on.

Ann Landers' frank and informative new book, "Teen-Agers and Sex" ($2.95) is now available at your book store.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Judy LaMarsh Praises Doctors For Efforts

By ALEXANDER FARRELL

MONTREAL (CP)—Judy LaMarsh, Canada's non-smoking minister of health and welfare, said Monday the medical profession is making praiseworthy efforts to discourage smoking, among both its own members and the general public.

Speaking at the annual convention of the College of General Practice of Canada, she termed this a fine example of the profession's "progressive attitude toward preventive medicine in its broadest sense."

A celebrated non-smoker herself, Miss LaMarsh gave up cigarettes several months ago. She told a reporter later she thinks it was last June but "I can't remember the exact date."

She also said in the interview nothing happened at last week's federal-provincial conference in Quebec City to make the federal government believes there will be fewer than nine provinces in the Canada Pension Plan. Quebec was the only one known to want to stay outside.

In her address she said it is evident throughout the country that the medical profession, especially the general practitioner, is increasingly concerned about the harmful effects of smoking.

WARN PATIENTS

"As you go from place to place, from hospital to hospital, you find a great many more indications that general practitioners are telling their patients to give up smoking, not only for fear of cancer, but for the sake of their general health.

"And I notice many of you appear to have given up smoking."

Miss LaMarsh said the colleges can be proud of its efforts to promote research among general practitioners on both the nature of general practice itself and of its clinical problems.

With the co-operation of the federal health department, the college had recently sponsored a study of medical education and practice in two provinces, Nova Scotia and Ontario. This research project had been a kind of professional self - analysis with few parallels in medical annals anywhere in the world.

However, she urged general practitioners to give more attention to research of a public health and operational nature.

MADE ADVANCES

A great many advances had been made in public health on the basis of observations by general practitioners in their daily rounds.

"Because of their concern with patients in their home environments as well as in hospital and the fact that they are more likely to see patients in the early stages of disease, general practitioners have access to certain types of information not readily available to others."

She was thinking particularly of contributions general practitioners might make to medical knowledge of the frequency and the spread of chronic as well as communicable diseases.

They were also in the best position to assess the country's health needs and resources.

"The determination of requirements for hospital facilities and the development of services such as nursing homes, homecare programmes and visiting nurse and homemaker services could be greatly assisted by studies by or with the help of family doctors."

Modernized Stuffed Baked Flank Steak (MOCK DUCK)

by Mary Moore

Continuing requests for protein beef information persuaded me to buy and prepare a protein flank steak "tendered with papain."

Many of you are familiar with this beef which has been tenderized before the animal is slaughtered and have learned how to cook it. But the new names applied to old familiar cuts are puzzling to a great many shoppers.

TUESDAY

Dinner Menu

Grilled Calves' or Baby Beef Liver and Bacon; Scalloped Potatoes; Green Beans; Cole Slaw; Double-Crust Rhubarb Pie; Cheddar Cheese; Tea.

A rolled up flank steak is called "Hudson Broil," inferring that proten flank steak is tender enough to broil. I bought an unrolled proten 1½-lb. flank steak (69c per lb.) and after cooking it as follows it was satisfactory but shorter cooking time would not have sufficed.

So if you are curious and want to try something different with real good flavor try my Baked Stuffed Flank Steak. Actually it is a modernized Mock Duck.

BAKED STUFFED FLANK STEAK

Note 1—You may use exactly the same method for untenderized flank steak (or round) but increase baking time to 3 hours.

Note 2—If you have a top-of-stove casserole use it for this to save dish-washing.

1½ lbs. "proten" flank steak, 2 tablespoons butter, ½ cup chopped mild onion, 3/4 cups diced bread (4 crust-on slices), 1 teaspoon chopped fresh parsley or parsley flakes, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, ½ teaspoon curry powder (or poultry seasoning), one 10-oz. can pieces and stems of mushrooms (35c), ¾ .

If you have a top-of-stove casserole make the stuffing in it. Melt 2 tablespoons of the butter and gently saute onion in it until limp but not brown. Remove from heat and add bread dice and seasonings and mix well. Cover the flank steak to within 1" of edge and roll up from narrow end, tucking back any stuffing which escapes. Tie or skewer snugly. Melt remaining one tablespoon butter and brown flank roll in it on all sides. (If you are browning it in a frying pan transfer it to a baking dish with a cover.)

In casserole pour over all the can of mushroom pieces and liquid, cover and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for ½ hour and then reduce heat to 300 deg. Fahr. for 1 more hour.

Note—I used curry powder (not poultry seasoning) in ours and served it with bottled mustard sauce to four hungry people and it was good.

Question: My new sister-in-law is in the midst of decorating her apartment and I'm afraid she's going to make a mess of it. I've been keeping tabs on what she's doing and, to my mind, plainly doesn't know how to blend colors and patterns. I've told my mother I'd like to offer some suggestions, but she says I should keep my opinions to myself. Do you think it would seem presumptuous if I tried to guide her taste a bit? I'm sure a little help now would save her a lot of grief in the future. — E. A., Boston, Mass.

Answer: Perhaps you're not mad about your new sister-in-law's decor because her taste is quite different from yours, mean she's doing a horrible job. I agree with your mother that it would be more considerate at this point to keep your suggestions to yourself, unless the new bride asks for them.

Question: What do you do when you spill water or juice on the table at someone's home? Should you mop it up with your napkin or just try to ignore the whole thing and go on with your meal? — B. M. J., Trenton, N.J.

Answer: If it's a tiny spill, you can always just dab at it with your napkin. But if it's a big mess, then just sit tight until the hostess or the waitress, if there is one, sops it up and camouflages the damp spot with a fresh napkin or replaces the place mat.

Successful Living

Communication Would Help This Floundering Marriage

DEAR DORIS — I met my husband through writing to a lonely hearts club. We only met each other ten days before we got married, 16 years ago. But at times I wonder if he loves me.

We love our children but I'm getting disgusted with myself and my life. My husband makes love to me one week; the next three he just hollers and curses, like a stranger. He drinks sometimes, but he can be so nice.

This last week I've been thinking about someone else. I've known this man since I was in my teens. I don't want to feel this way. I just want to cry all the time. — L.M.

DEAR L.M. — When things go wrong we dream of a distant, brighter life. What could be more human? Yet this teen-age dream of yours is just a mirage.

DORIS CLARK

You and your husband have stuck together through some thin times and I'd say you still have a warm regard for each other. Trouble is, he is letting a bad temper spoil the love between you.

Here's where communication could help; and a counsellor might work the miracle of understanding which would put you on the road toward better, happier times. Look for such a counsellor at the Children's Aid Society, 63 Molra Street, Belleville, which counsels on family problems as well as when children are involved.

DEAR DORIS — Just how much social freedom is a boy supposed to have? I understand that as a girl I am not supposed to ask a boy for a dance (unless it is a lady's choice) or for a date (unless I have tickets) and am certainly not to propose marriage under any circumstances; and yet as soon as I accept dates with a boy a few times, he starts coming around to see me at my house without any warning and expects me to drop whatever I am doing and to spend the rest of the day or evening just talking to him, and I mustn't go out on dates with anyone else.

My mother thinks that this is quite all right (she is nuts on seeing me get married) but I am getting to resent it and find that other girls feel the same way. I am not supposed to phone a boy without a good reason and yet he can do anything short of petting and physical intimacies. Please advise, is this the socially acceptable thing to do? — TAKEN FOR GRANTED.

DEAR TAKEN — No, no, no! Next time he sallies around, greet him courteously, but limit his time to a few minutes. Say you will be glad to have an evening for him as long as you know ahead; and reserve the right to go out with anyone else. If he doesn't respect your rights, you should.

• • •

DEAR DORIS — I am a married woman 19 years of age and I am very interested in learning to conduct a kindergarten in my own home.

Your guidance and assistance would be very much appreciated. — A DAILY READER.

DEAR DAILY READER — To run a kindergarten, you would need to employ a trained teacher who would qualify under the regulations of your provincial department of education.

Are you talking about a nursery school? This would be for younger children. If so, write in again, enclosing your name and address this time on a stamped envelope, for the address of a source of help.

Campbellford Residents Married Sixty Years

CAMPBELLFORD — Recently Mr. and Mrs. Charles White of 22 Churchill Dr., Campbellford, celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary. The couple were married in 1904 by the late Rev. A. C. Reeves of the Presbyterian Church.

Mr. White, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John White was born in the Township of Seymour East in 1879 and spent his youth on the farm near what is commonly known as "Devil's Valley." In 1898 he moved into Campbellford to work for the town's maintenance staff and except for a few brief intervals remained an employee of the town until his retirement in 1955.

Mrs. White, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Baker, was born in Campbellford, in 1881. As a girl she was employed by the Woolen Mill, now known as the Campbellford Cloth Co. She recalls that the average wage then was 5 cents per hour and there was a 60-hour week week.

Mr. White vividly recalls the days when the town's industries depended on the Trent River for motive power. There were fully licensed hotels within the town. Things were livelier then he says.

The couple have one son living "Donald" who now resides in Belleville. Another son, C. Frederick White of Toronto, died in December, 1962.

Both Mr. and Mrs. White are enjoying excellent health.

Some Husbands Take to Bed While Wife Has Her Baby

BIRMINGHAM (AP) — Expectant fathers who develop signs of illness have an overdeveloped streak of sympathy, two English researchers say.

They made the report after spending three years investigating men's response to their wives' pregnancies.

Prof. W.I.I.i.a.m Trethowan, head of the psychiatric medicine department at Birmingham University, and Dr. Michael Conlon, a consultant psychiatrist, said they believed their work was the first detailed study of the custom of couvade (hatching).

This custom, where the husband takes to his bed while the wife has the baby, has been known among primitive peoples for centuries. It was recorded in Corsica in 60 BC.

Conlon said the inquiries in 20th-century Birmingham covered 500 married men—327 of them expectant fathers.

MEN GET SYMPTOMS

"The result showed very definitely that men develop symptoms in association with their wives during pregnancy, identifying themselves psychologically with them," he said.

"A high percentage of the 327 husbands suffered from morning sickness, toothache and backache. Others complained of loss of appetite.

"Some had to stay away from work and we had two cases where men developed swelling of the abdomen."

The researchers said those co-operating in the survey had been asked to fill out questionnaires on the physical sensations of waiting for baby. They did not state what methods had been used to check the accuracy of the replies or what other lines of inquiry had been followed.

Conlon said there was one respect in which the sympathetic husband had proved immune.

"Many women develop cravings for grapefruit, ice cream and so on," he said, "but we found no evidence of anything similar among the husbands."

Great Slave Lake Railway 140 Miles From Terminal Point North of Edmonton

By JOHN WARREN

MEANDER RIVER, Alta. (CP)—The sing of steel-driving equipment is echoing through the sub-zero air of northern Alberta as the Great Slave Lake Railway pushes toward its goal.

The end of steel now is 140 miles from its terminal point at Hay River, N.W.T., 600 miles north of Edmonton. It is already farther north than any line in Canada connecting with the North American railway network.

By 1966 the frontier line will be carrying ores and zinc from Pine Point, N.W.T., down its 430-mile length to Peace River, Alta. From there 315,000 tons of ore will be shipped annually to Trail, B.C., and Consolidated Mining and Smelting's huge processing centre.

The pioneering of the Great Slave Lake railway is not confined to opening up of a rich section of the Canadian North, however. Challenging weather and geography have combined with a rigid schedule to inspire new construction techniques.

Developments in the care and feeding of construction crews have made bush camp life almost unbelievably soft, says Reuben Hamel, a superintendent at the Meander River bridge site.

MEALS ARE GOOD

His 40 - man camp enjoys meals, provided by a Peace River restaurant, that would do credit to most major hotels.

And it has refinements such as flush toilets and showers—luxuries undreamed of when Mr. Stefanson first took to the bush with a railway construction gang more than 30 years ago.

With an electric generator, ample heat provided by gas, daily communication with the outside and occasional movies and trips to the town the camps on the Great Slave Lake railway are making pioneering almost pleasant.

But if the life is becoming easier, the engineering problems aren't.

"I don't want to make it sound like we're overcoming huge obstacles," says the construction project engineer. "But we have muskeg to cope with, and deep frost and a lot of bridges and a shortage of gravel for the roadbed, hear?"

A total of 42 river and stream crossings, dozens of miles of muskeg and frozen ground that drop to 50 below are among the problems facing the Canadian National Railways crews building the $86,250,000 line.

USE HIGHWAY

The tight schedule has forced engineers to adopt a "leap frog" method of construction. Rail ties, spikes and heavy equipment are taken on a jeep ahead on the Mackenzie highway which roughly parallel to the rail line.

By this method crews in bush camps along the line have been able to complete sections of grade and track for connection with the main line of advancing steel.

Forty-five separate contracts have been let for bridges, grade, culverts and buildings along the line. The work, is directed and co-ordinated by Mr. Cox, a CNR engineer, and railway crews do the track-laying itself.

The end of steel reached this major river crossing, Mile 222, just before a two-week Christmas vacation and right on schedule after 3½ years of construction.

To be in position for spring truck-laying on the 56-mile line running east of Pine Point, the CNR has moved a 46-ton locomotive up the frozen gravel roadbed on a truck. By the end of winter weather 600 truck loads of building material, including five flat-cars, will have followed it to Pine Point Junction, about seven miles south of Hay River.

FINISH BY FALL

At the current rate of construction, says Mr. Cox, Hay River should have railroad

140 MILES FROM FINISH — The Great Slave Lake Railway, now further north than any line in Canada connecting with the North American railway network, is 140 miles from its terminal point of Hay River, N.W.T. The line is scheduled for completion by 1966 and will run from Peace River, Alta., 430 miles to lead and zinc mining operations on Great Slave Lake. (CP Newsmap) service sometime in October. At that point the line will have picked 150 miles farther into Canada's northland than its southern end, the Roaring Bay Railroad to Churchill, Man.

The newest piece of track running eastward on the old GSL railway is a CNR-designed unit dubbed The Pioneer. It is a self - propelling line that removes rail, ties, plates and spokes by conveyor from cars a self - propelling line and fastens rail to every fifth or sixth tie with a pneumatic hammer.

Multiple spikes — drivers and power bolt-tighteners follow to complete fastening of the rail. Using a five-man crew the Pioneer can lay about 700 feet of track an hour.

For the sections of line ahead of completed construction a tractor with a crane and bucket is used. Fitted with "walking shoes," the crane can work right on the roadbed, setting truck-hauled materials that have been stockpiled along the route.

RACING CLOCK

Contractors preparing grade ahead of the rail are also working against the clock. They are ripping short sections of 18-inch-deep frost from the surface, building and packing grade before the ground beneath can freeze.

While peak construction takes place during the summer months, when up to 1,000 men are employed, the work schedule calls for year-round building. This winter's activity is concentrated around camps than half a dozen camps that the railway's route through 145 miles of bush between here and Hay River.

At the camps contract only skeleton crews of eight or 10 men, surveying and selecting for grade work that will resume in March. The others are truck - laying or bridge - building camps with crews of up to 50 men.

SENTENCE SUSPENDED

FREIBURG (Reuters)—A 60-year-old West German housewife was given a nine-month suspended prison sentence Monday for having killed her 36-year-old mentally-ill daughter with sleeping pills three years ago. The woman told the court she decided to kill her daughter and herself because she feared she would die soon of cancer and did not want to leave the daughter into a nursing home. The woman also took sleeping tablets but woke up again three days later.

Finance Chairman Tells Council Mill Rate Down

PICTON (Staff) — The mill rate in the Town of Picton for 1964 will be down 1.46 mills on residential and 1.37 on Commercial according to a statement presented to the Picton Council last night by Councillor James Bird, Chairman of Finance.

The total assessment is $6,809,850 of which $636,700 is assessed as property of the Roman Catholic School supporters.

Broken down, the revenue required are: Public School Requisition and Debenture $100,799 or 12.70 mills residential and 20.76 mills commercial. County rate $103,536.86 or 13.49 mills. Public Library Requisition $13,200 or 2.41 mills. High School Debenture and Requisition $78,267.06 or 13.43 mills residential and 14.94 mills commercial. Relief Purposes $1,533 or .22 mills. Sewage Debenture $47,247 or 8.11 mills. Water Plant Debenture $14,375 or 2.37 mills. Town Purposes $158,181 or 14.00 mills residential and 28.25 mills commercial. Separate School Requisition and Requisition $2,062.21 or 13.94 mills residential and 22.11 mills commercial. Separate School Debenture $2,953.31 or .53 mills.

The Separate School rate is up 1.61 mills residential and 2.18 mills Commercial.

GIVES BREAKDOWN

In presenting his 1964 budget Mr. Bird first gave a breakdown the budget represents the combined wisdom of those who have been elected to administer the rights of the citizens—of those whose duty it is to be prudent—and of those who are entrusted by these citizens as a whole to ensure that the town markets and lists its property according the upward path of civilization.

Councillor Bird gave a breakdown of the budget when he reported that the debenture debt and debts of the municipality incurred by previous council took 11.54 percent of the budget.

Educational costs took the largest share, a total of 36.35 per cent. The Public Library which he described as the center of culture, took 2.41 percent.

The county rates show that the county has taken over the Welfare and Assessment takes 18.49 percent.

This leaves only 31.01 percent of the tax dollar to come under the direct control of the council. "It is here, of course, that we as a council must exert economies and at the same time ensure that the forward, not backward progress of the town continues," he added.

The finance chairman paid deep tributes to the chairmen of the various committees for their most successful efforts in keeping their expenditures to a minimum.

Mayor Harvey J. McFarland, speaking on the mill rate said "The finance committee has done a wonderful job here. I doubt very much if any other town or city in Canada will have a reduction in their mill rate this year. We have, and on top of this, we have allowed in the budget for the building of a new town barn, which is so badly needed. We have arranged to build the new walls and other things around the town, and will reduce the mill rate. This is simply wonderful," he said.

The new town barn will be built out of the general fund, and will not be debentured.

Gordon Noonan, Chairman of the Picton Public Utilities Commission asked council to approve the granting of a debenture for $50,000 which will be used to build a new sub station. The PUC as such cannot issue debentures, but will pay all of the costs of the town handling them. The new sub station will be built on property behind the Picton Foundry.

Council was advised by the Planning Board that they were against the re-zoning of the Bridge Street area where Mr. John Clary of Napanee proposed to build a new motel. Mr. Clary waited on council and asked that they submit his application to the O.M.B. and let them make the decision. "There is some personal conflict in this case," he said, but did not elaborate.

Mr. Reg Nourse, Town solicitor the Chief of Police Gordon Pitt requisitioned a new flag for the Cenotaph. He asked that $100 be given permission to purchase a "Red Ensign" for replacing the present flag.

Councillor Bird spoke against the idea of the Red Ensign as he claimed it was a Navy Flag, and suggested the Union Jack should be flown at the cenotaph. Councillor Andrew Jarvis added that until the Government makes up its mind Canada will be without a official flag that the Union Jack should be the one flown at the cenotaph. The vote was 4-3 in favor of the Union Jack.

ISSUE REFERRED BACK

A motion that the town provide new mains for water and sewer to the proposed new County garage on Lake Street was referred to the PUC to look up with some idea of just what is needed. The county has signified their willingness to pay the total cost of both services, but council wants an agreement drawn up with the county and their legal adviser to watch and between the Streets Committee and the county in regard to the sewer, at which time they will give the matter further consideration.

"I am very much against putting new services into Hallowell Township, where the barn is to be built. The people whose properties the lines will pass can have all the benefits of living in town," Councillor Hallowell can raise their assessments and we get nothing out of it," he said. Council-Councillor Randolph Clapp.

The town treasurer's office will be moved to the Odd Fellows Temple building in the building at the corner of Paul and Main Street occupied by Dr. Fred Murphy, who is moving into a new building adjacent.

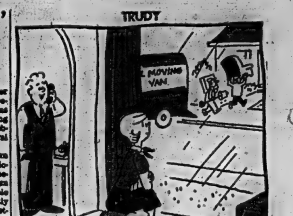
Mayor McFarland really got worked up over this move. "Seven years ago, I suggested this we build a town hall at the present fire hall, and I was turned down. We could have had our municipal offices there, and could have rented space to other people which would have

"Needle Trade" Looking for New Location

PICTON (Staff) — A letter from the Lake Ontario Development Association was tabled at the monthly meeting of the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce in the Royal Hotel at noon Monday.

The letter was in the form of an inquiry. It asked if Picton, or the county, had a concrete building with a minimum of 60,000 square feet available for industry. It is apparently in the "needle trade" as the letter asked if 100 female sewing machine operators could be made available to start, with this number rising to 300 as the plant progressed.

"We get quite a few letters such as this," said Picton's representative on the chamber. "we answer all of them, and who knows we might land one of them, after all, this is the way we got the Proctor Silex plant," he added.



To give an idea of how much 60,000 square feet of space is, totally is the Proctor Silex plant is about 50,000 square feet.

The Department of Highways will not allow any signs showing Picton's location on the 401 highway. This was ascertained in the reply received in answer to a letter to request that such signs be placed along Highway 401. A delegation of Harvey Hepburn, Jay Hepburn and George Shupman will contact the department to see if anything can be done.

A motion was passed that the ten municipalities comprising the county, be asked to appoint a member to the Chamber of Commerce and for 1965, that they elect a member to sit on the board of directors of the chamber. "Let's make this a real county chamber," stated Barney Hepburn.

Dave Taylor suggested that these appointees should not be politicians, but Jay Hepburn suggested that politicians are of necessity, good businessmen, and would be welcomed at the chamber meetings.

Jay Hepburn suggested that the chamber staff the registration booth for the forthcoming Fishing Derby in four-hour shifts, two men to a shift.

"You better call her back, Ann—she's right in the middle of inventory."

Council Notes

PICTON — Council approved paying the volunteer firemen an additional $150 per man per year.

Town Treasurer, Wilfred McArthur, reported that to the end of March there was a total of $60,478 in taxes not paid, as against a total of $68,962 for the corresponding period one year ago.

Council approved accounts for March totalling $54,278.

The Parking Committee asked for permission to proceed with construction of a parking lot behind the Public Library. This was given.

The Parking Committee was requested to obtain costs of acquiring land and the subsequent building of a parking area behind the stores on the north side of Main Street.

The Women's Hospital Auxiliary was given permission to hold tag days on May 29th and 30th.

Four building permits totalling $28,118 were approved. $23,000 of this figure is for the new Picton Bay Marina, being built by the Hepburn Brothers.

No Truce for Tuberculosis

By DR. McCOLL METCALFE (Sefferlin Medical Officer of Health)

Tuberculosis is an infectious disease caused by the tubercle bacillus. It is widespread among men and animals, south to penetrate in some individuals abroad and localized in others. Archeologic discovery of skeletons showing the marks of tuberculosis bodies indicates that the disease existed in remote antiquity. In more recent medical records it was called various names, as phthisis. It was not until 1882 that a German scientist, Koch, after several years of research, isolated and identified the specific organism and proposed the disease organism and to him the honor of the organism was bestowed.

No longer is the human race being ravaged the touch of tuberculosis, however the scourge of its effect varies. Although it has stamped the still fairly common most people now survive.

Since man may be infected by the human or bovine type of the bacillus the source is usually traced to another person with tuberculosis or to a tuberculous cow. There has been no single measure which has been so effective in preventing and saving the lives of infants and small children as well as adults from the bovine type of tuberculosis as the pasteurization of milk. In Scotland it has been estimated that as many as 8% of cases of pulmonary tuberculosis are due to the bovine type of the bacillus but thanks to the pasteurization of milk, testing of dairy herds throughout the country by the Federal Department of Agriculture and I might add, meat inspection in abattoirs by qualified veterinarians, bovine tuberculosis is now practically extinct in this country.

Much more often however, human infection is the result of inhaling air contaminated by a person with open pulmonary tuberculosis as he coughs, sneezes, and expectorates. Other lesions such as superficial tuberculosis sinuses may constitute sources and the possibility of transmission through contaminated urine and feces, however these are only occasional sources of infection being transmitted.

MAJOR PROBLEM

A conservative estimate of the number of cases of infectious tuberculosis in the world today is placed at 10-15 million and to this number is added 2-3 million new cases each year and 1-2 million deaths. In some countries more than 70% of children are infected at the age of 14 years, the disease being a major problem, while in certain economically favored countries it is less than 25%, but your comfort does not protect you from the disease. It should be remembered that tuberculosis is not a respecter of persons, young or old, rich or poor. The treatment of the disease has changed over the past years, the stay in Sanatorium is much shorter and the fact that the sanatoria throughout the province of Ontario have vacant beds, we should so get the idea that the disease is being eradicated. Each year in the Province of Ontario over 4,000 cases of active tuberculosis are found, and a big percentage of these cases are either moderately or far advanced. Early diagnosis and treatment are essential not only for your own well being but also for those in your home or the place in which you work.

The Ontario Department of Health and the Ontario Tuberculosis Association have chest clinics located in various centres throughout the Province and each year mass surveys are held in different counties. These services are free and each and everyone of us should take advantage of the services. The fight against tuberculosis is a fight which is everyone's concern. The disease cannot be eradicated in one country alone and should become a major health project of the underdeveloped parts of the world. As long as proper organization required to detect the patients and administer the drugs which can be nearly 100% effective, as well as vaccination of the non-reactors is lacking, the disease will continue to show increase.

The ever increasing transport facilities, overseas movements, persistent immigration and the migratory movements of labor force are proof that one country alone cannot eradicate the disease.

The transmission of the bacilli in a particular population can be controlled when the majority of the people themselves take part in that control. It is strongly advised that each and everyone, rich and poor, young and old take advantage of the free services supplied by the Ontario Department of Health and Ontario Tuberculosis Association. Either tuberculin test or x-ray examination as well as a thorough physical examinations if any family physician has not already indicated, will help prevent the disease becoming moderately or far advanced. Early diagnosis and treatment are essential not only for your own well being but also for those in your home or the place in which you work.

WANTS DEBATE

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker threw his weight behind the idea for an early debate of the Knowles bill.

"We would certainly do that in order to give the members of this House an opportunity to stand up and be counted on the question of the abolition of Parliament," he said, contending that Parliament under the BNA Act consists of the Queen, the Senate and the Commons.

Prime Minister Pearson also agreed, with a swipe at the Conservatives for refusing to allow the introduction of the bill when it was before them, in violation of the Bill of Rights:

Expressing shock and amazement at the Conservative position, Mr. Pearson added:

"I think he (Mr. Diefenbaker) ought to be given every opportunity, as quickly as possible, to explain his unbelievable position on this matter."

Meanwhile in the upper chamber, Senator O'Leary heaped blame on the government for allowing the unemployment insurance fund to "sink into disaster"—then to come to the Senate at the final minute of the 11th hour with a cry of emergency to make a quick loan.

"I do not rise to apologize for, to recall, or to retract one inch from the course which I took last Friday with respect to this bill."

ACCUSES GOVERNMENT

He charged that the government, as in the verse about the King of Farawa, had marched senators up Parliament Hill all during what was supposed to be an Easter recess, then marched them down again—without doing any business.

It was irrational and fantastic, a contempt of the rights of Senate, a travesty of the legislative process.

"This Senate is an integral part of Parliament, with well-defined rights, powers, duties and privileges," he said.

"If we here, in this House, forget or ignore those rights, if we permit others to trample on those rights or to despise them, then we condemn this House to a place of inconsequence, a place for only ceremony and ritual, a place with no meaningful legislative existence in this land. Doing that, we declare that we ourselves have no right to sit here at all."

In the Senate is treated with contempt, as a second chamber without worthwhile powers, then Mr. Knowles is right "and this Senate should be abolished," he added.

He warned that never again will he allow Senate rules to be waived unless a real and present peril exists.

US SMALL PRICE

If some people are deprived of an unemployment insurance cheque for a single day, he said, it was a small price to pay for the assertion of the rights of the Senate and of Parliament.

"I have been first, last and all the time with the underdog, and there is not a social security measure in the statute books of Canada which did not have my undivided and vigorous support."

Senator O'Leary said that the loan could have been made at any time under previous authority before it expired at the end of the fiscal year, March 31. He criticized the government of Prime Minister Pearson and the former Conservative government for not having moved in the past two years to bolster the insurance fund.

"Who was mainly at fault?" he asked.

"The government saw the fund going bankrupt. It was broke, insolvent, couldn't continue without these loans. While this was going on, the government had the Gill commission report recommending 42 steps to be taken. While the fund was going bankrupt for a year, they never moved a hand to deal with the problem at all."

Then, he said, the government brought in the appropriation bill including authority for the new year to make loans to the fund. Even before the bill reached the Senate debating stage, the time was set for Royal Assent to it last Friday, he said.

"I'm going in and impress Marge. I've finally managed to lift one of these things."

Would

with 104 Liberals, New Democrats, Social Creditors and Creditistes smiling on the other side.

Mr. Knowles then suggested that his bill should be put at the top of the list of some 75 private members' bills for debate today.

Most private members' bills come up for debate during hour-long periods set aside for such a purpose in the Commons. Often they are debated to the end of the hour without a vote on "talked out" in parliamentary parlance—and then dropped to the end of the list. They rarely emerge for debate again.

political dry cleaning," he said.

Prime Minister Pearson accused Mr. Diefenbaker of not wanting the Great Lakes dispute settled.

"If we are to get a settlement by securing the help of a bookkeeper like that, I wonder whether or not, the cost is too high," snapped Mr. Diefenbaker.

Labor Minister MacEachen maintained that the trustees have not promoted Mr. MacLaughlin to the SIU presidency.

"There will be no immediate change in the present leadership of the SIU of Canada until the shipping season is further advanced," he said. "This period of time will provide an opportunity to ensure that the arrangements have been fully honored before any change is made."

He contended that the trustees will not appoint Mr. MacLaughlin as SIU president, but "will allow the provision of the constitution with respect to the succession of leadership to be put into effect."

Even when Mr. Turner steps down as acting SIU president, he will continue to supervise the over-all administration of the union.

Mr. MacEachen said the agreement contemplates an end to Canadian control of Canadian shipping in U.S. lake ports and continued supervision by the trustees over the SIU.

He hailed this two-pronged objective as a "major step forward" in resolving the bitter Great Lakes labor struggle.

New Democrat Leader Douglas asked whether the appointment of Mr. McLaughlin was achieving the intent of Parliament in establishing the three-man trusteeship last October—the "desire of Parliament to free the shipping industry from the rule of thugs and to destroy the hoodlum empire which had victimized and terrorized the seafaring industry for too long a period of time."

Orillia Council Opposes Any Folk Festival

ORILLIA (CP)—Town council went on record Monday night as being unanimously opposed to allowing another Mariposa Folk Festival.

They told Donald Tapscott, a delegate from a group of high school students who picketed town hall March 28, that he did not understand the problems incurred by the festival.

Reeve Herbert Burnet said 10,000 persons came here to enjoy last summer's folk singing event and 20,000 others came for a drunken brawl.

Must Move Station

ZANZIBAR (Reuters)—President Abeid Karume today told American Charge d'Affaires Frank Carlucci that the American Project Mercury station must be removed from the Island before the end of the month.

Again Mr. MacEachen insisted that the trustees are not appointing Mr. McLaughlin, but merely allowing the SIU constitution to function.

"A play on words," said Mr. Diefenbaker.

Mr. Douglas urged the government to make every effort to keep Ontario in the Canada Pension Plan, and suggested as a bargaining point that the provinces be offered more than 20 per cent of pension fund reserves for investment in provincial bonds.

Social Credit Leader Thompson said the government should move carefully in the pension field to avoid defeating its own purpose of achieving a national system of portable pensions.

Dismemberment

He was obviously referring to the suggestion by Premier Roberts that Ontario might adopt a plan similar to Quebec's.

Mr. Pearson said it would create "administrative difficulties" if other provinces copied Quebec, thus shutting out the Canada pension plan in those provinces.

The government intended to go ahead with the present Canada pension plan legislation before the Commons.

Even with a series of provincial plans, the prime minister said, "the purpose of our initiative in the federal government would be achieved if there was basic pension coverage of a portable nature available to all Canadians."

Mr Pearson rejected Premier Leage's charge of unconstitutionality against two proposed federal measures in interest-free loans to university students and extension of family allowances for students aged 16 and 17.

STATES AIM

But he said Ottawa would seek to avoid duplication of family allowances with similar payments now made by the Quebec government for 16- and 17-year-olds.

Mr. Douglas urged the government to make every effort to keep Ontario in the Canada Pension Plan, and suggested as a bargaining point that the provinces be offered more than 20 per cent of pension fund reserves for investment in provincial bonds.

Social Credit Leader Thompson said the government should move carefully in the pension field to avoid defeating its own purpose of achieving a national system of portable pensions.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. B. CARVER, Sports Editor

The most thankless job in the world, next to being the husband of a much-married movie star, is that of a professional hockey referee—or any referee for that matter.

It seems, particularly in National Hockey League playoffs borderline incidents happen that raise the ire of the players, pewsters and the televising broadcasters, the gripe depending on which side you're backing.

In any event the much-maligned officials come in for back-of-your-hand stuff warranted or unwarranted.

It is no secret there is anything but amicable relations between the NHL board of governors and the arbiting staff. Two "retired" gentlemen of the sweater-and-whistle fraternity agreed some time ago they were being interfered with by the league's top brass.

Those inevitable, often-boring period-interim interviews in which a National League player or official is asked what team will win took a pleasant departure last Saturday night.

Senator Molson, Habitants' president, was asked "what's wrong with present-day hockey officiating?"

The Senator admitted he with his colleagues were greatly concerned over the arbiter situation, coaches, fans and press at the officials, excess boards checking and a growing hue-and-cry by parents across Canada over the spread of the "brawl image" of NHL competition through the TV screens.

The Senator said the governors of the league have been giving much attention to the situation. They'll continue to do so and of necessary steps will be taken to eliminate elements and factors that might be injuring the sport as a spectacle.

"I am fully aware," the Senator said, "of the general concern of the public through the many letters I have received in recent weeks. Rest assured that the governors intend to do something to clearly establish law and order and eliminate unwanted situations while still preserving the game as one of speed, skill and brawn."

Well, Senator, as one Montreal observer puts it—and as the spinster remarked when she received her first offer of marriage, "it's about time."

As "Red" Storey once told this agent, "It's amazing what those guys seated in the rafters in any arena can see—and how accurate they believe they are. The same goes for players and pepped-up coaches striding behind their benches!"

Referees, professional or amateur hockey-wise are not perfect. To err is human and those chaps are just that. And coaches, players, press sometimes and other media are wont to blame the luckless arbiters for the game's winless should they commit even a minor goof.

The luckiest of the "hidden puck" in the Chicago-Detroit game Sunday night was one of those things a referee prays will never happen. The puck crossed the line before or after the whistle! Who knows? The referee in his judgment claimed it was across the line before the piccolo shrilled—and that was that.

Vern (Montreal Gazette) publishes in his column what he says is a most striking contribution to the "What's wrong with hockey refereeing?" It was written by, of all people, the mother of NHL Referee Vern Buffey. Here 'tis:

"I think I shall never see
A satisfactory referee,
Above whose head a halo shines,
Whose merits rates reporters' lines,
One who calls them as they are,
Not as fans might wish by far,
A goal who looks just either way
But lets the boys decide the play;
A guy who'll sing the coach who raps
From Vancouver Isle to Halifax.
Poems are made by fools like me
But only GOD could referee.

8 Teams Seek Allan Cup

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Only eight Senior A hockey teams are left in the annual Allan Cup playoffs, but it looks as if it may take a while to thin the ranks in the east.

Windsor, N.S., Maple Leafs spotted Ottawa Montagnards a 3-0 lead in Ottawa Monday before roaring back for a 4-3 win in the first game of their Eastern Canada semi-final series. Their best-of-five series will resume Wednesday in Ottawa.

The other Eastern Canada semi-final resumes tonight in Woodstock as the OHA champion Athletics are host to Kenora-Noranda Aluminites of the NOHA. This best-of-seven series is tied 1-1.

Meanwhile, Winnipeg Maroons are just one game away from a berth in the western final after whipping Port Arthur Bearcats 8-3 Monday in Winnipeg. Maroons now lead the best-of-seven series 3-0.

The other western series has also been a one-sided affair, as Saskatoon Quakers took a 3-0 lead with a 6-1 triumph over Ian Kimberley, B.C., Dynamiters in Saskatoon Monday.

Sigmo Nolet was the hero of the Windsor victory as he broke in alone to score the winning goal at the 16.31 mark of the third period.

Earlier in the period, Windsor fired two power-play goals to tie the hard hitting game that saw referees call 28 penalties, including two majors.

Jim Beckman, Ben Leblanc and Oscar Gaudet scored the other Windsor goals while Billy Watson, with two, and Ian Anderson tallied for Ottawa.

Imlach Shuffles Leafs; Calls Up Help

By DAVE SETTS

TORONTO (CP)—The "best goalie in the world" will face one tonight who has been just a little bit better.

If this sounds like a contradiction, probably it is.

The best-in-the-world label is manager-coach Punch Imlach's description of Johnny Bower of his Toronto Maple Leafs and the man who has been sharper is little Charlie Hodge of Montreal Canadiens.

Hodge and the Habs, who lead the series 3-2, arrived Monday night for the sixth—and possibly last—game of their Stanley Cup semi-final with the Leafs.

Imlach departed from habit Monday to name Bower as the man who will be between the pipes tonight. Usually the choice between old John and alternate goalie Don Simmons is not made until just before game time

ADMITS DIFFERENCE

Although Imlach calls Bower "my best man over 70 games of the schedule" and ranks him as mankind's ultimate in goaltending excellence, he admits the difference between Montreal and Toronto so far has been Hodge.

"There's no doubt about it. Hodge has had more going for him than our fellow. We're the better team and we've been playing better ball, but Hodge has come up with what Montreal needs."

Although Imlach intends to stay on the Bower bandwagon, he screamed for help Monday to patch up his forward and defence units. From Rochester American he called up National Hockey League veterans Bert Douglas, Al Arbour, Ed Litzenberger and Gerry Ehman.

One will dress tonight to fill out the playing roster of 17 men—the first five games were played with 16—but Imlach decided to say which American Leaguer will get the finger.

"The rest will be around in case some of the other guys call in sick," he explained.

So far, all the sickness has struck the opposition. The Leafs have suffered their losses in the peak of condition.

Montreal has been without the services of Gilles Tremblay, a speedy winger and prolific scorer, who broke an ankle when he got in the way of a slapshot. Big Jean Beliveau, the flag around whom the boys rally, missed Saturday's game and is a doubtful starter tonight because of damaged knee ligaments.

Violent stomach illness struck Hernie Geoffrion after Saturday's game in Montreal, but the big right winger is expected to put on the gloves tonight. Centre Henri Richard, butted in the head by Eddie Shack last week, got a lump on his lump Saturday when a Montreal fan hurled "an object" into the players' bench.

In an effort to inject more dynamite in the right side of the attack, Imlach shuffled wingers and will use Andy Bathgate with centre Frank Mahovlich and Red Kelly on his primary assault unit. George Armstrong will be reunited with centre Dave Keon and Don McKenney on the second line.

Given an outside chance of crashing the lineup tonight is Ehman, scoring leader in the AHL this season with 36 goals and 49 assists. The 31-year-old right winger had 26 goals and 31 assists in his 128-game NHL career.

The Leafs went through a brisk hour-long workout Monday and—except for the Rochester recruits — will rest until game time.

Much of the practice time was taken up with three-on-one rushes, the forward lines charging in on Bower and one defenceman.

Whether it was the impotence of the forwards or the excellence of Bower, the Canadiens should take some sort of encouragement from the fact that the attackers failed to score about 14 times out of 15.

If a seventh series game is necessary, it will be played in Montreal Thursday. The winner

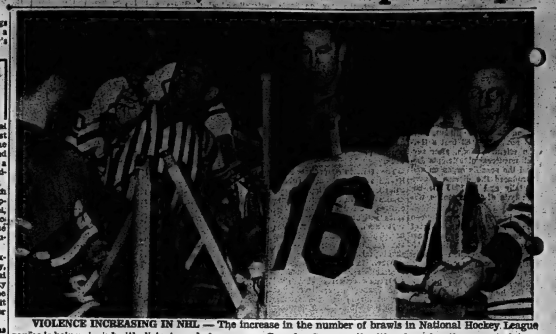
Commercial Softball Loop Holds Meeting

The Belleville Commercial Softball League held its first meeting of the year at the A.N.A.F. hall last night and representatives from half a dozen possible entries attended.

League president Don Smith said interest was shown by representatives from City Hotel, last year's Lightfoot Construction team, Foxboro, Point Anne and Belleville midget and juvenile teams.



The Point Anne club is expected to be a midget entry, likely strengthened by several senior players. Should the city midgets and juveniles also be accepted into the league it would provide three minor entries.

Another league meeting has been called for next Monday night, at eight o'clock. Arrangements are being made today for the meeting place.

The league executive hopes to see more of last year's clubs or other senior type entries represented at the next meeting.

"I understand that several clubs from last year expect to enter but they did not attend last night's meeting," said Smith. A special invitation has also been extended for any players interested in taking part in the league to attend Monday's meeting. Players who cannot attend are asked to contact a member of the league executive.

"We feel that five or six of the older, more established teams can be organized into a good league — if the players and sponsors will come out to the meetings," Smith said.

VIOLENCE INCREASING IN NHL — The increase in the number of brawls in National Hockey League games is being viewed with distaste and alarm across Canada. Some authorities fear for the game's future unless the violence is checked. In what is becoming a typical scene referee Frank Udvari gets mixed up in a dispute between Leafs and Canadiens in Montreal while at right, a battered Murray Balfour leaves the ice at the Gardens after a donnybrook between Leafs and Black Hawks. Violence Ruining Cup Playoffs?

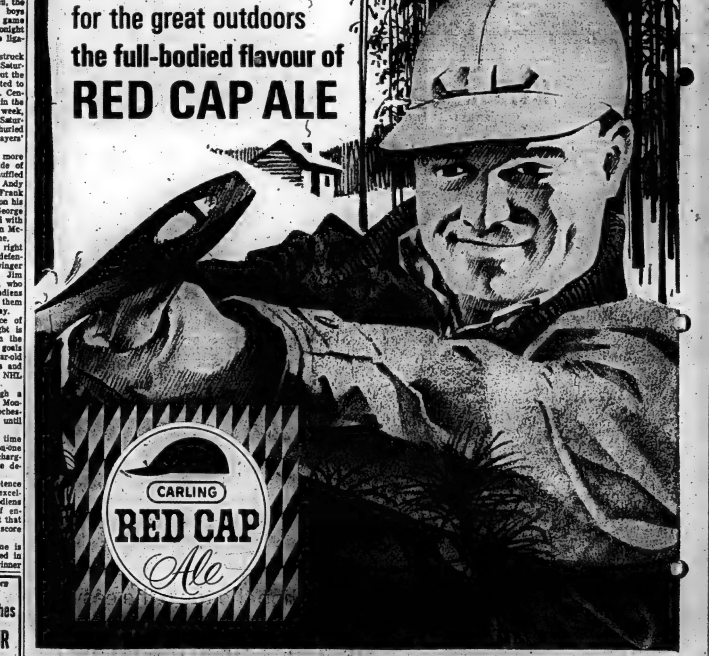
By ED SIMON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Penalty records are broken with every wag of the referee's finger. Complaints about the officiating mount from participants and non - participants alike.

Is unnecessary violence turning the Stanley Cup playoffs into a travesty of hockey as it should be played?

"Brute strength, clenched fists, high-sticks and bone-shattering boarding are replacing the adroit puck-handler, the fast, exciting winger and the bruising, but clean defenceman," complains a sports page editorial in the Vancouver Sun.

"Hockey is simply becoming too rough and it is time something was done about it," says Health Minister Judy LaMarsh.



"The professionals encourage violence because they feel that is what the public wants."

"In my personal experience I've noted a great reduction in violence in the last 10 years," says, president Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League. "The game being played today is just a Milquetoast version of what I've seen in the time I've been identified with the game."

Statistically, the current cup semi - final between Montreal Canadiens and Toronto Maple Leafs is well on its way to wip-

Abel Sticks By 'Big Steal' Charges

Faces Fine

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

DETROIT (CP)—If the mails in Toronto are on time today, and Clarence Campbell has a rope and trailer, he should have enough evidence in hand to troll Red Wing coach Sid Abel from the rafters.

But the National Hockey League president doesn't have to look for the postman. He can get the evidence first hand from Abel at Toledo, Ohio, where Red Wing players are stoking up for their showdown sixth Stanley Cup semi-final game tonight against Chicago.

A loss would send the Wings packing for another year while the Hawks met either Toronto or Montreal in the cup final. A victory would send them into unfriendly Chicago stadium Thursday night for the decisive seventh game.

Abel isn't backing down from the "outright steal" charges he fired at referee Frank Udvari after Wings lost 3-2 in Chicago Sunday night that sent Hawks into a 3-3 lead in games.

"You're damned right I said those things," the still sizzling Abel said Monday in Toledo. "I don't deny anything. I'll probably hear from him (Campbell) tomorrow."

NOT WORRIED

Abel wasn't worried, although he realized that Campbell most likely would slap him with a fine for his "indiscretions."

Some of the evidence Campbell wanted before deciding what to do about the one-time great Red Wing player appeared in Detroit newspapers Monday. The papers were sent to him in Toronto.

Abel said Udvari "blew it" when he allowed the third period goal by Ken Wharram of the Hawks that tied the score 2-2. Stan Mikita scored the winner with about four minutes remaining in the game. Abel didn't hesitate to tell Udvari what he thought of his call on the Wharram goal and what he thought of Udvari.

"I called him every name in the book the rest of the game and he didn't say a thing. He didn't have a got left to call a penalty on our bench.

"I've never seen anything like this in all the time I've been in hockey. This was just a steal."

DON'T WANT PROTESTS

Abel knows, too, that the NHL doesn't want protests. "It wouldn't do any good. He (Udvari) got together with Campbell after the game and got his story together."

This was in reference to the post-game meeting in the referees' dressing room immediately after the game between Campbell, referee Udvari, chief Carl Voss and Udvari. The door was locked to reporters for about 15 minutes.

Campbell confirmed Monday that he had received a wire from Bruno Norris, owner of the Wings, asking that the league get another referee to Chicago Thursday, provided a seventh game in the series is necessary. Campbell said there is no way Norris or anyone else can have the referees' schedule changed.

"That was set out at a board of governors' meeting before the playoffs and agreed on unanimously," Campbell said. "Period. I, nor Carl Voss nor anyone else can change it now."

WHERE IT WAS FUNNY

The point of the controversial call centred on where the puck was when Udvari blew the whistle.

Red Wings argued it went in after the whistle had blown to stop play. Was it trapped on the outside of the webbing by rookie goalkeeper Roger Crozier or had Wharram, as he said, taken another whack at it and knocked it in?

That question probably never will be answered to the satisfaction of all but it certainly lit a fuse under the Red Wing bench and on the ice.

And Campbell, who was watching it from the press box, might even fine defenceman Bill Gadsby of the Wings. He wiggled his finger under Udvari's nose and yelled at him for minutes.

Only the captain or alternate captain is allowed under league rules to question the referees. Gadsby is neither and he is liable to a 10-minute misconduct which calls for an automatic $25 fine.

PREDICTS WIN

Abel also violated an unwritten rule by calling Red Wings to beat Hawks tonight. He won't probably hear from him (Campbell) tomorrow.

BELLEVILLE MacCORMACKS — The only Belleville entry in the second annual B.M.H.A. Peewee tournament held here and in Napanee on Saturday. The team did not win a trophy but gave it a good try, winning one game 3-0, losing another 4-3.

Koufax Sets Down Yankees With 5 Hits

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A few New York Yankee stalwarts probably will have a mid-summer summit meeting with Sandy Koufax at the All-Star game. The ace would be happy when he pitched four consecutive singles in the second frame.

Robin Roberts and Chuck Estrada combined to hand St. Louis Cardinals their first shutout of the exhibition campaign as Baltimore Orioles picked up an unearned run in the sixth inning to edge the Red Birds 1-0. Roger Craig, a victim of 12 shutouts with New York Mets last season, was the loser.

Bo Belinsky turned in his sharpest performance of the spring for Los Angeles Angels, allowing only three hits in six innings as they defeated Cleveland Indians 7-1. Manny Mota's grand - slam homer propelled Pittsburgh Pirates to a 13-4 victory over Minnesota Twins.

Two doubles and a triple by Willie Mays highlighted San Francisco Giants' 9-7 triumph over Chicago Cubs and Detroit Tigers scored six runs in the seventh to overcome a trip Kansas City 8-7 and prolong the Athletics' losing streak to five straight. Chicago White Sox edged New York Mets 2-1 and Cincinnati Reds whipped Philadelphia Phillies 8-3.

Koufax has served as Bruins coach for nine of the last 10 years.

Bears Meet Barons In Semi-Finals

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hershey Bears and Cleveland Barons, old hands in American Hockey League playoff competition, open a best-of-five game Calder Cup semi-final series tonight at Cleveland.

Cleveland, making its 26th appearance in post-season play, advanced to the semi-finals by whipping Rochester 5-3 and 4-1 in the first two games of a best-of-three set. The Barons have missed the playoffs in 36 straight seasons.

Hershey, next in line with 24 appearances, won its first-round set from Providence in three games. The Bears survived an 11-3 second-game drubbing and nipped the Reds 3-2 in the decisive contest.

The Hershey-Cleveland survivor will play the winner of the Quebec Aces-Pittsburgh Hornets series for the Calder Cup. Quebec takes a 3-0 bulge into Wednesday's fourth game at Pittsburgh.

Weston Edges Kingston 5-4

TORONTO (CP)—A hotly-disputed goal at 19:25 of the third period gave Weston Dodgers a 5-4 victory over Kingston Frontenacs Monday and a 3-0 lead in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior B best - of - seven semi-final.

Dave Parham was given credit for the winning goal even though the goal judge from Kingston failed to flash the red light. He claimed the puck had not crossed the line. Referee Dalton MacArthur, who was on top of the play, overruled the judge and declared the puck went into the net and bounced back out.

Seven seconds earlier Weston's Barry Wilkins fired a high shot past Kingston goalie Neil Perry to tie the game. Mike Pender, Paul Lacoby and Dave Collimore scored the other Weston goals.

Rick Smith scored twice for the losers and Ron Earl and Gary McMillan added one each.

Garrison Badminton Club Declares Junior Champs

Close competition featured play as the Belleville Garrison Badminton Club held its junior championships this past weekend.

A dozen trophies were awarded to winners and runners-up in the all-male competition.

In singles play, the boys were divided into "A" and "B" groups, according to age, while all entries were grouped as one in the doubles play.

Donald Desmulniers captured the "A" group championship with Gerry Gordon Jr. taking runner-up honours. John Gray was consolation winner with Dennis Walmsley in the runner-up position.

In "B" group, David Green won the championship and John Ethier was runner-up. Larry Scott and John Gray teamed up to take the boys' doubles championship. Runners-up were David Green and Arthur Elliott.

Consolation winners were Donald Desmulniers and Bill Boyd.

The club was happy with the progress made by its young junior members this season and hopes to see even more of the city's youngsters on the courts next fall.

Schmidt Signs New Contract

BOSTON (AP)—Milt Schmidt, whose contract was due to expire this month, has been signed to a new two-year agreement as coach of the Boston Bruins.

Weston Adams, chairman of the board of directors of the National Hockey League club, announced the signing Monday. The salary was not made public.

While present plans call for Schmidt to continue as coach, Adams said the Bruins will call on him to serve in any other capacity, in which his background and long experience may better serve the club's player development program.

"In other words, he'll be a troubleshooter if need be," Adams said.

Schmidt has served as Bruins coach for nine of the last 10 years.

Mothers Blast Violence

By DAVE BETTS

TORONTO (CP)—When Hollywood projects violence through the television screens with its police and cowboy dramas, it all seems so remote few people bother to take any action.

But when the bloodshed is shown live from the National Hockey League rinks, it's mothers within telephone distance sharpen up their dialing fingers and give the wires the business.

All six rinks in the league experience several calls after a particularly rough game and sometimes letters are sent to league headquarters in Montreal.

After the fourth game of the Montreal Canadiens - Toronto Maple Leafs Stanley Cup semifinal game last Thursday, "about half a dozen or so" phone calls were received by Maple Leaf Gardens.

In the game fights broke out and the referee-assessed 30 penalties worth 102 minutes in the box.

A Gardens spokesman said most of the calls were from women who identified themselves as mothers of young hockey players. They complained that their youngsters were seeing a bad example set by the big leaguers.

What does the Gardens do?

"After we talk to them awile they usually calm down," Stan Obodiac of the publicity staff said Monday. "We point out the facts and explain it to them and they become reasonable."

What are the facts?

"I try to explain to them how NHL hockey is an adult affair," said Obodiac. "I point out to them that they should be aware of the rough world we live in. As mature adults, I ask them to realize that the real world is not the rosy place we were told about as children."

Obodiac says complaints are received after every game which is a upward fluctuffe and the number of calls Thursday was not excessive, "except that swinging in the playoffs takes on a keener edge."

He said one woman was "almost abusive." She said she had a couple of sons in minor league hockey and she didn't want them watching "this sort of spectacle."

Another woman threatened to circulate a petition and submit it to Clarence Campbell, NHL president.

Campbell said in an interview Monday he had not heard of such a petition.

"How much violence have we had?" Campbell asked rhetorically. "We had a few minor fights, but most of the games have been well played."

Violence

ing all existing penalty records off the books.

In five games, both have outstripped the record 138 minutes assessed against Detroit Red Wings in a six-game semi-final last season, Canadiens compiling 146 minutes and Leafs 132. Their combined 103 penalties and 278 minutes also established new marks as did their combined 16 penalties in a period and 31 in a game.

But another look at that 31-penalty total, compiled in the series opener in Montreal, shows these figures are not necessarily a yardstick for violence. Seventeen of the offences punished by referee Frank Udvari were listed as hooking, holding, tripping, interference, illegal faceoff procedure and having too many men on the ice.

In fact, the two majors and one misconduct penalty imposed during the game were exceeded by the six majors and two misconducts, in the fourth game last Thursday, in which the over-all penalty total was lower and the total time served of 102 minutes equalled a mark set in a Toronto-Detroit game 12 years ago.

DO GOOD JOB

Senator Hartland de M. Molson, president of the Canadiens, feels the referees are doing "the best job possible under the circumstances."

"If the referee keeps his eyes on the puck at all times, as he is supposed to do, he can't possibly see the rest of the ice surface," the senator explained. "After all, he only has one pair of eyes."

Pat Curran of the Montreal Gazette blames the officials for inconsistency in the current Toronto - Montreal series. He says infractions are penalized in one game and not in another and referees even up penalties between both teams regardless of the trend of the game.

Statistics bear out the charge to some extent. Toronto has served 52 penalties to Montreal's 51 over the five games although Canadiens, assessed three misconduct penalties to Leafs' two, have put in 14 more minutes in the box.

But in the current Chicago-Detroit series, handled by the same officials, the discrepancies have been wider. Forty-six penalties have been handed out to the Red Wings to 38 for the Black Hawks with Detroit having an edge of 103 minutes to 87 in time served.

BLAMES FANS

Annis Stukus of the Toronto Telegram blames fans who cheer the crude play of the Maple Leafs' Eddie Shack and boo his more talented, leaner Frank Mahovlich.

"I was disappointed Thursday night," Stukus writes, "when they didn't boo Shack off the ice for butting Henri Richard, a man he outweighed by a good 25 pounds, during a scrap in which the smaller man did a good job of handling himself as long as only fists were used."

Commenting on the same game, Milt Dunnell of the Toronto Star says it proved only that "the world's greatest hockey players are the world's worst pugilists . . . When you pay your money to hear Doctor Peterson belt out a few tunes on the pianoforte, you don't expect him to start pumping a trombone."

An Ottawa Journal editorial says if good fight now and again is in the nature of the game but "the senseless brawling, the crude fouls and the surly defiance of the referees are neither hockey nor entertainment."

Jim Proudfoot of The Star blames the coaches:

"A referee makes hundreds of split-second decisions during a hockey game. Coaches are only asked to make sure they have the correct number of men on the ice, a simple assignment they often flub.

"Yet when you approach the losing club's dressing room you know what you're about to hear: Poignant moans about bad officiating."

Frank Boucher, a seven-time winner of the Lady Byng Trophy for his clean play with New York Rangers a quarter-century ago, says the Saskatchewan Junior League, of which he is commissioner, has a problem teaching its players the value of sportsmanship because they see it disregarded at the highest level.

"The situation is drastic and drastic measures must be taken."

The Sun editorial asks if the time has come for someone to clean up hockey.

'ERA OF ASSASSIN'

"This is the era of the hired assassin, a man apparently paid not for his ability to put the puck in the net, but rather his opponents in hospital. . . When the men who run hockey halt back-alley brawling as a sure fire box-office attraction and selling point for future games, the sport is in danger. . ."

Campbell, an NHL referee and official since 1929, says he doesn't approve of fighting on the ice.

"But I also know hockey is an explosive game and when players resort to fisticuffs I treat it as a safety valve.

"I have seen lots of people hurt with sticks—in the first five or six years after the war people were violently injured by stick-swinging. We have looked on it as far more important in the last seven or eight years to cut down on it.

"As far as I'm concerned, hockey is a game of violent bodily contact and should stay that way."

Many Viewers Identify Station by Dial Number

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Television is often accused of playing a "Numbers game" with its reliance on ratings, when it comes to keeping or killing shows. It seems that a large segment of the audience quietly plays a numbers game of its own.

This is a game the networks and the stations alike deplore. Despite all the promotion designed to establish a station or network identity—the CBS eye, the NBC peacock, the call-letters flashed on the screens at every station-break time—much of the audience persists in identifying a station merely by the number of their TV set's dial that identifies each station's channel.

A television chain recently confirmed this through an audience research project.

Individual stations and networks work hard to establish attractive images.

The networks are particularly eager to create vivid and pleasing identifiers. A viewer who isn't exactly sure where his favorite show can be seen is likely to sample all channels in his hunt for it. Sometimes he likes what he samples — and never reaches the program he set out to find.

The series about psychiatry—NBC's 11th Hour, and ABC's Breaking Point didn't have the impact that made Dr. Kildare and Ben Casey hit hard as both will disappear at season's end. Not one new doctor-show is on the horizon and next season will find The Nurses and Dr. Kildare having more adventures away from hospital.

"The Cardinal" Held Over

First published in 1950, "The Cardinal", by Henry Morton Robinson became an immediate literary triumph, a novel which remained on best-seller lists for two full years and which has, since, been a continuing book store item. Now, "The Cardinal" is an Otto Preminger production on the television and Technicolor, held over until Wednesday at the Park Theatre.

Preminger originally tried to buy screen rights to "The Cardinal" when it first was published, only to learn another producer had snapped them up. In the long shot, the book was translated into 15 languages and became a best-seller around the world in the years since, as well, nothing was done about translating it to the screen.

Two years ago, Preminger reverted to his original interest in "The Cardinal." The picture had never been made, he learned, because a high churchman had frowned on the proposed filming of a novel so closely interwined with the official bodies of the Catholic Church. Preminger, who definitely is not a yes-man, promptly acquired the screen rights and then set out to prove to the church that motion picture satisfactory not only to the doubters and the frowners, but to people of all faiths and every country.

According to Hollywood report, he has pretty well succeeded.

Robert Dozier penned the screenplay for "The Cardinal" which stars Tom Tryon in the title role and co-stars an international cast including Romy Schneider, Carol Lynley, Jill Haworth, Raf Vallone, Josef Meinrad, Burgess Meredith, Ossie Davis, John Saxon, Dorothy Gish, Wilfrid Hyde-White, Maggie McNamara, Bill Hayes, Cecil Kellaway and John Huston as Cardinal Glennon. Also in the film are Bobby (Morse) and his Adora-Belles.

Opens Sunday at 8.15 p.m. Box office opens at 7.15 p.m. Seats not reserved.

LONDON (AP) — Danny Blanchflower, 38-year-old Irish wing half who led Tottenham Hotspur to victory in the European Cup Cup Winners last season, announced Monday he is quitting soccer. Blanchflower lost his place in the lineup last November and has been out of action since with a knee injury suffered while playing for Tottenham in a reserve game.

Hugh O'Brian Can Say No Thanks to Wyatt Earp

By BO BTHOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The problem of being a movie star, observes Hugh O'Brian, is fixing to the next plateau.

O'Brian, one of the sage observers of local tribal customs, is also one of the ablest practitioners of the self-selling art. He divulged some of the tricks of the game before returning to the Mexican locations of Love Has Many Faces.

The actor had a fortnight's vacation because the illness of co-star Lana Turner suspended production. Yes, she was indeed ill, he testified, despite rumors that other troubles had disrupted the film. Shooting was three-quarters finished, mostly on the Acapulco location, and now the rest will be filmed in a Mexico City studio.

Love Has Many Faces is only Hugh's second movie since he quit the Wyatt Earp television series three years ago.

BIG NAME

This, despite the fact that he is a highly serviceable leading man with an international name.

"The producers have had some requests, including the star of a television series into leading roles in important films," he explained.

He resisted taking roles in films he thought wouldn't further his career. He could afford to turn them down. As a bequest of his five Earp years and subsequent investments, he figures his worth at $2,000,000.

That's an annual income of $35,000 even if I don't work a day," he said. "So I'm in a position to say no to parts I don't think would be good for me. I can always go out and play Two for the Seesaw in Podunk, Ohio, or Guys and Dolls or Music Man in some big arena where the money is fine."

GUY TWO PLAYERS

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League announced the acquisition of two pi yers Monday. Infielder Ossie Virgil was sent down by Milwaukee Braves of the National League, while pitcher Joe Schi.ferroth was purchased conditionally from Cleveland Indians of the American League.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids . . . and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very satisfying improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief was occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with applicator).

Satisfaction guaranteed or your money refunded.
